FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Currants are easier this week. A report from Greece says: "At the present time (March 21) it appears certain that 100,000 tons of currants will have been exported from Greece by April 1, and it will be possible, therefore, to give quotations for Detention goods 1s. 3d. below present figures." Raisins, Californians particularly, are scarce, especially in the States. Figs are lower all round. Dates are obtainable at 4½c or 6c in packages. Prunes are selling freely. Advices from California say that prospects are for a bad season. Rains have been frequent and heavy, doing considerable damage. Nuts are becoming easier. Brazils are again lower.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—A good, steady consumptive demand is reported in this market. No large orders appear to be coming in, but sales of three, five and ten case lots are sufficiently frequent to warrant the statement that business is good. Beans, plums and strawberries cannot be obtained. Other lines are in fair supply, being plentiful enough to ensure the filling of all orders between now and the new pack. Corn on the cob has been advanced from $4.65 to $5.

TORONTO.—The feature in the canned goods situation is the steady consumption. There are no new developments this week. The feeling in the wholesale trade is that the high prices have not checked consumption.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Pointers:

Sugar—Very firm.

Eggs and butter—Still firm.

Lemons—Dearer.

Toronto, April 11, 1907.

The grocery trade in Ontario during the first quarter of 1907 has, upon the whole, been very satisfactory. Most firms report an improvement over last year. January and February, for those months, were exceptionally good. By the middle of March things had become quiet and collections were not satisfactory. In March of last year a very heavy sugar business was transacted. Last month it was comparatively small, and still a number of wholesale houses are able to say the turnover for the quarter is ahead of a year ago.

Inquiry regarding the features of the year's trade elicit only vague replies. The steady outgo of canned goods is about the only thing of note. Asked if the high price of tomatoes had not checked consumption, a leading wholesaler replied: "Well, that is what we usually expect high prices to do, but it doesn't appear to have done so in this case." This verdict is practically unanimous.

We are forgetting the outstanding feature of this season's business—tea. The abnormal advance in prices of all grades has stimulated a very active demand and a large and profitable trade has been carried on.

At the moment business is slow again and complaints about collections are renewed. The breaking up of the country roads is blamed, and also the delays in transportation occasioned by the inability of the railways to handle the traffic. Prices all along the line remain firm, and there are no changes in quotations to speak of.

TEA.—The London market is a little slow owing to the approach of the budget and the usual after-Easter lull. The trade there, too, are buying from hand to mouth. Locally, there are no marked changes.

COFFEE.—Markets are quiet. The Brazil crop is probably 2,500,000 bags larger than the former record. The trade continues to be interested in the way the Brazil Governmenet is taking care of the surplus. Prices are unchanged here.

SUGAR.—Future raws advanced 1-16c. a pound in New York Tuesday, and the situation is very firm. The advice handed out all round is to hold good stocks. The trade still hold to the belief that the Cuban out-turn will be 1,250,000 tons, but this is the critical time, and if grinding on the present scale does not soon decrease the estimate of output will have to be revised.

HIDES, TALLOW, FURS.—The hide market is very quiet, due primarily, it is said, to the scarcity of money. Sheepskins are higher.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, April 11, 1907.)

Business continues very active but the wholesale trade are complaining of the slowness of collections. Money continues very tight and there will be no relief from the present stringency until after the opening of navigation and the moving of the balance of the wheat crop. There was keen anxiety for more than a week over the prospect of a general tie up of all the western railways but happily all danger of a strike is over now. While money is undeniably tight there is no reason for undue anxiety as the business situation is sound at bottom and the men who are the best acquainted with conditions are the most optimistic as to the immediate future. With the beginning of an active movement of the wheat crop conditions will rapidly improve.

PINEAPPLE SITUATION.

A section of the fruit trade are informed that the Cuban pineapple crop this year is 150,000 cases short, and it is said that, in consequence, housewives will have to depend on the Florida crop, which comes in later, in June, and is not as good for canning.

W. H. Despard, manager of White & Co., Toronto, who has just returned from Cuba, states on the other hand that the recent severe drouth has delayed the growth of the fruit but has not destroyed it, and, while the heavy rains immediately following have rendered shipments precarious and uncertain, the bulk of the crop will be arriving very shortly. Its delay may retard canning but it will not, as many people have feared, throw it back, for its resources, upon the Florida stock.

The local grocers are complaining bitterly against the length of time occupied in getting an order shipped from Toronto. It is claimed that to receive goods within a week from the time of ordering is something unknown. The local dealers are considering the advisability of taking combined action and ascertaining the cause of the delay.

The influx of Spring travelers has begun and the merchant who has a business of any consequence is deeply disappointed if he does not receive at least two of these genial and gentle gentlemen every day.

HAMILTON.

Housecleaning time is on again and the grocers are all dressing their windows and bringing these goods to the front, and the smile that spreads over "Billy" Jackson's face as he enters up the woodenware orders is well worth seeing. Mr. Jackson is an old settler, having been with Walter Woods & Co. for "nigh onto" 30 years, and a nicer fellow or a better liked man is not known in Hamilton.

Last Thursday evening the Retail Grocers' Association gave up their regular monthly meeting for the benefit of the Retail Merchants' Association. who were presided over by the local president, Adam Ballantine. E. M. Trowern gave a very interesting address on the work that the association have been and are doing—Amendments to the Division Court Act, transient traders bill, and bill now before the House of Commons in regard to co-operative stores. His speech was enjoyed by all present. who, by the way, were nearly all grocers. He was followed by Mr. Moyer, a former grocer. from Toronto, who was well received by his Hamilton confreres, after which the election of officers took place. the old officers being elected by acclamation.

INGERSOLL.

The weekly half-holiday during the months of July and August has grown in popularity here during the past three years. From the first the movement received the hearty endorsation of the grocers, who were quick to realize that a spell of relaxation from the strenuous life behind the counter could not fail to be beneficial both to themselves and their employees. The other merchants also viewed the movement in a similar light and the result has been that during the "hot months" on Wednesday afternoons the stores, with very few exceptions, have been locked up tight. The matter has already commenced to agitate many minds, and arrangements for the season's programme will likely soon be made. Ingersoll has made a huge success of the weekly half-holiday, simply because the merchants worked in unison, and because of the fact that it received business-like attention. Two years ago when the plans for the holiday season were being laid it was thought advisable to have a programme on each afternoon, and the plan worked out admirably. Committees were appointed to deal with all the details, and the result was that the season was immensely enjoyed by the mrchants, their clerks and their friends. Baseball and other games were held, together with picnics and other pleasant outings.

Our Factory now boasts the most up-to-date equipment for making Catsup in Canada. We also have one of the best Catsup Cooks on the continent.

Last fall we bought tons and tons of the finest Rose Tomatoes. These have been washed, scalded, peeled and seeded, then have gone through the process of making them into Crest Brand Tomato Catsup. Nothing of the delicious flavor of the ripe tomato has been taken away, and our chef's blending of the spices and condiments has given it an appetizing piquancy that cannot be equalled.

Put up in large 14-oz. screw-top bottle with an exceptionally pretty label, it makes one of the most attractive packages ever put on the market. We guarantee its purity, and the absolute cleanliness of our factory and methods makes its wholesomeness beyond dispute.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Gradually, as the season advances, cheese factories in different parts of the country are opening up. Each week brings report of some new district being open to receive milk for cheese making. Many Ontario factories being located off the railway line, do not begin operations as early as those suiuated on the line of one or other of the big railroads. With those factorymen carrying on business at a distance from rail transportation weather has naturally more or less to do with their date of opening. Poor roads and other troubles interfere with the smooth operation of the factory.

The amount of cheese being received is really very light. In consequence the supposition is that there is not a great deal of cheese being turned out at the factories. It is expected, however, that the make will be larger from this on. One of the chief difficulties experienced by factorymen was the trouble in securing sufficient milk. Farmers were able to obtain a better price from city milk men than they could from the cheese factories, and therefore sent most of their milk to the city. Fortunately for the factory owners, the market for milk in the city became over supplied and prices were not so tempting to the farmer, who went back to the factory with his milk supply.

Regarding local trade, dealers report little activity. Since supplies are not heavy they are not making special efforts to interest local buyers. Grocers desiring cheese favor the held stock, when it is obtainable, at a higher figure than they are asked to pay for the fodders.

Fodders are selling at very good figures, but receipts are not sufficient to make a market. It is expected that the make during April will be about the same as was that of the same month last year.

Export demand for cheese is light, the English buyers being apparently out of the market for the present. It is generally admitted that the Old Country market is pretty well bare of cheese, and it is thought that houses on the other side will be forced to buy from Canada in the near future, as the Dominion is about the only practical source of supply at the present time, or at least for the season now coming on.

New butter is arriving in larger quantities each week as creameries throughout the country open up in larger numbers. Receipts are not so large that they cannot be taken care of, as demand is very good. The consumer having been supplied with the new make of butter is not anxious to buy anything else, with the result that what little old butter there is on the market is not easy to sell.

There is very little held butter on the market, however, so that this does not matter so much after all.

No demand is yet felt from the Old Country, nor is there likely to be any trading before the first grass butter is quoted, some time towards the end of May. Even then it is likely that buyers on the other side will move cautiously, as many of them lost so heavily on Canadian creamery last season they are almost afraid to touch any Canadian butter. Another thing which is likely to keep demand from being large is the fact that the English market is rather well supplied with butter which will be some time in going into consumption.

Prices locally will have to decline to a much lower level than they are now at before any business can be done in an export way.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

The price of hogs is 25 cents lower this week and the packers are said to be keeping to it pretty well. It is $6.40 f.o.b., country points, $6.90 off cars at the factory. Packers say the price is going lower, probably next week, because they still see a loss even at the reduced price. This must be the case if it is true that they have been losing 4s. to 6s. a cwt. on their bacon because the English market has not improved.

There is another apparently very reasonable ground for lowering the price of hogs in Canada. The unsatisfactory condition of the English market for a month and more has been due to the increased quantities of Danish bacon coming forward. According to the best information available that increase is likely to continue and even to further increase this Summer. It is beyond question that the Canadian packers cannot always go on taking a loss on their product and as there is no improvement in sight abroad, the only alternative is to cheapen the cost of the raw material at home. Providing, of course, that they can make a profit this reduction is as much in the interest of the grower as the packer.

Latest reports from England state the market there is very dull and the demand not large. Fat bacon is quoted at Liverpool at 52s. to 53s. and at London leanest bring 56s. to 57s. This has been about the level for three or four weeks. There is practically no change in conditions. Danish killings last week totalled 35,000. The carryover at London of Danish to this week was very heavy, sufficient to supply the demand, it is reported, if no Canadian at all were received. This indicates no immediate improvement. A very large independent Danish curer has reported to a Canadian packer that not only will the present heavy deliveries of hogs in Denmark continue, but that there will be some increase as the Summer wears on.

In Denmark the co-operative packing industry represents about ¾ of the total output and that proportion as between independent and co-operative seems to be maintained in the present increase. Ireland's output of bacon runs about from 7,000 to 11,000 a week, but in addition 15,000 to 20,000 hogs a week are sent to England on the hoof and there mostly put into bacon.

The killings in Canada last week were reported to be 26,000 to 27,000, which was slightly in excess of recent weeks. Bad roads and lower prices may reduce the number this week.

The domestic situation is unchanged. A year ago prices were ½ cent to 1 cent higher than now and it is not unlikely as high prices will rule this Summer. One of the largest packers said this week, "Our domestic trade is a little quiet for the present as we are not meeting prices in competition. We regard the home market as being in a strong position."

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Although a little dull, as might be expected after good Easter business, the feeling in the market is good. Orders are being filled every day in smoked meats and lard. No changes in quotations are noticeable this week.

BUTTER—A sudden upward spurt characterizes the market this week. Prices in nearly every instance are above those quoted last time of writing. Scarcity of new butter, brought on by bad roads in the country causing farmers trouble, is the chief reason for the higher figures. It is expected that there will be a decline in a few days.

PICKLE TIME

This is the season of the year when most people have the pickle appetite. When we think of pickles the name Heinz comes right to the front, and we are sure it must also with you, for if ever a name deserved to be at the head of the procession it's Heinz. They have strived and succeeded in making the very finest of food products which it is possible to turn out.

Heinz's Extra Spiced Sour Pickles, in half barrels and barrels, are so called because an extra quality and quantity of spices are used in their preparation. They are uniform in size and count guaranteed. Heinz's Sweet Pickles are preserved sweet pickles, and have a flavor and crispness distinctively their own.

A couple of good sellers for this particular season—Heinz's Sweet Gherkins, packed in half barrels, containing 1,000s at $7.50; this means ¾c. a pickle or 9c. dozen; retail them at 4 for 5c., 8 for 10c. or 15c. dozen. Also half barrels Small Sweet Gherkins, 2,000s, retail 30c. quart. Heinz's Dill Pickles, packed in whiskey barrels, 1,000s at $9.00; this figures out 11c. dozen; retail them at 20c. dozen.

If you have not already got both these lines in stock send us your order to-day. Keep them to the front where they can be seen. Heinz's goods are a success and it pays to get in with a success.

There is little demand for the poorer grades and 16½ cents is about the best price obtainable for No. 2.

EGGS—Supplies are not quite so large as was anticipated and the price is about 20 to 21 cents per dozen.

CHEESE—Ontario cheese is worth 15½ cents per lb. in Winnipeg and the small Manitoba 12 cents to 12½ cents.

OPPOSED TO CO-OPERATIVE IDEA

To the Editor Canadian Grocer :

I am very much pleased to see that a little more interest is being taken in regard to organization. I would like very much to see an expression from some of our best grocers throughout the country. They must all admit the desirability of this movement becoming an active measure at once. As an object lesson, take this bill of Mr. Monk's, now before the House of Commons, in regard to the chartering of co-operative associations; one of the features of which, I venture to say, very few grocers have taken into consideration. That is, that nine farmers or nine laborers, as the case may be, may form themselves into a co-operative society and start out selling shares at five dollars each, without putting themselves under any obligations to the Joint Stock Companies' Act, or any other, only as in the bill now presented by Mr. Monk. This, I understand, has already been proposed by farmers at Midland, anticipating the fact of Mr. Monk's bill becoming law.

I think that the question of the necessity of the grocers standing alone in regard to a single line association has been pretty well discussed, and while I stick to the single association idea I am, as I have stated before, willing to give Mr. Ellis and his executive staff due credit for all they have done, and wish them every success. Just in regard to this co-operative business; I think that we ought to all stand together and help the Retail Merchants' Association to fight it out.

Mr. Editor, this may seem strange logic for anyone who is arguing in favor of the opposite idea, but just now I am thinking of the good of all the trade, and as the grocers are not organized the best thing for us to do is to help the organization that is now in existence. The seriousness of this matter to the retailer should be considered now, not when it is too late, and I think every merchant in Canada should have a quiet talk with his representative in the House of Commons on this subject.

BELIEVER IN ORGANIZATION.

DO HIGH PRICES CHECK CONSUMPTION?

To the Editor of The Canadian Grocer:

In last week's issue of your paper you ask: "Do high prices check consumption?" the question having particular reference to canned tomatoes. I trust that many of the readers of The Canadian Grocer will give their opinion on your question so that different ideas may be interchanged. To be abrupt in answering the question, I say "Yes." My idea regarding canned vegetables is that a great many buyers are not particular which they get and when their question is answered as to the price of canned vegetables they decide on corn or peas if cheaper than tomatoes. Canned corn, in my opinion, is growing more popular each year. About a year ago now I ordered ahead for my season's requirements at the opening prices. Had tomatoes not opened too high or at a price so that they could be retailed at ten cents I would not have had too many, but with peas and corn at 3 for 25 cents and tomatoes at 2 for 25 cents, I will have about fifty cases of tomatoes over, and corn of a total of 150 cases is nearly done and I will need fully 50 cases more to finish the season. Two weeks ago when I found that tomatoes were not moving in the same proportion as peas and corn I put the price down to 10 cents straight and find that the lowering of the price on tomatoes did not switch the consumers from corn.

In my opinion tomatoes opened too high in price, and I for one do not expect to see any advance on tomatoes and I consider them weaker to-day than when the price was named last October.

Beaver Brand Special Hams

"THE BRAND THAT'S IN DEMAND"

Not every ham will stand the test for Beaver Special ham quality; about one Special ham out of every ten good hams. They must be taken from young and well-matured hogs. They must be firm in flesh and not too fat, and weigh not less than ten pounds, and not more than sixteen pounds. Then they must be cured the Ingersoll way, carefully watched and cared for during curing and smoking process; cured in a heavy syrup made of absolutely pure granulated sugar, and smoked slowly with hard wood. Then you have the sweet, juicy, tender Beaver Special, that's so delicious, if prepared as follows:

HAM AND EGGS

Take a thin slice of Beaver Special Ham, dip in cold water, slightly dry on cloth, broil quickly over a hot fire. Put in a frying pan a lump of I.P.C. butter and one of Ingersoll lard, sufficient to cover the bottom of the pan when melted. Break each egg into a saucer, then slide carefully into the hot grease. Cook gently until the desired degree of hardness is obtained. If cooked rapidly, the grease becomes too hot, and the egg will be dark around the edge, whereas they should be milky white. Serve around ham on a platter and garnish with sprigs of parsley. ("If you use ham grease for frying eggs, they will be dark and greasy looking.")

NEW BRUNSWICK TO GROW MORE POTATOES

St. John, N.B., April 8, 07. The local markets continue very quiet. For several weeks now there has been practically no change in quotations. The Easter trade was reported exceptionally good. Buyers seemed to be plentifully supplied with cash and the trade in all lines of business was reported very satisfactory. Eggs continue to drop in price and butter is coming in more freely though as yet there has been no change in the quotations. Fresh fish are still very scarce and high, although the spring fishing, which ought to commence very soon, will, no doubt, relieve the situation. West side fishermen are looking forward to a good catch in the harbor this year.

At present hay is very high, $14.50 and $15 a ton being asked. A. C. Smith & Co., on the west side, state that there has been more provincial hay shipped through West St. John this rear to the old country than ever before.

There is likely to be a much larger demand for seeds this year than for a number of years past, especially oats, as the oat crop in this province last year, especially along the St. John river, was generally a failure, and purchases are likely to be heavy this spring.

It is believed that there will be nearly double the acreage in potatoes in Carleton county this year. The great demand for potatoes from this province during the past year has given a great impetus to the growing of the tubers. Large quantities were shipped during the year to Quebec, Ontario and the West Indies, and the growers are going into the business on a larger scale than ever before. Many large new warehouses are being put up throughout the province and the indications are that the output for 1907-08 will be larger than ever before.

Considerable interest centred in the visit of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party here last week. The premier was only in the city for half a day on his way to England to attend the colonial conference. While here, however, Mayor Sears called upon him on the steamer Empress of Britain and had a talk re the needs of St. John in the matter of harbor improvements.

"I want St. John to go ahead," said Sir Wilfrid, and the Premier left no doubt as to the genuineness of his wish, for he announced that the Cabinet had already authorized the purchase of a dredge and that the amount asked for St. John improvements had been agreed to.

Before leaving, Sir Wilfrid dispatched a telegram to Hon. Sidney Fisher, requesting him to inform his worship by letter of the works contemplated for the harbor this year, and urging him to put them in motion at once.

One hundred and two steamers have arrived in port during the winter season to date, with a tonnage of 400,079 tons. Of this number, eighty-nine have filed outward cargo papers at the customs house, showing a valuation as follows.

Canadian goods	$9,855,104
U. S. goods	5,021,915
Total	$14,877,019

The amount of grain sent forward in these steamers is close to four million bushels. The number of cattle sent forward has nearly reached the twenty thousand mark. The shipments of cattle from the United States this year have been heavier than usual. Nelson, Morris & Co. and Swift & Co., of Chicago, have sent a large number through this port. It is claimed that the reason for shipping the American cattle through this port is because better accommodation can be secured than through the majority of ports nearer Chicago.

The C.P.R. steamer Montezuma, which arrived on Wednesday last, brought the largest number of passengers ever landed at this port. There were 2,162 immigrants on board, and all but 78 were bound for the Canadian west.

H. C. Rankine, Frank Rankine, Allan Rankine, Walter Rankine and Henry F. Rankine are applying for incorporation as T. Rankine & Sons, Ltd., with a capital stock of $80,000, to carry on the business of T. Rankine & Sons, biscuit manufacturers.

The death occurred on Wednesday last of William A. Cathers, who for 21 years was a traveler for J. M. Humphrey & Co. Owing to ill-health Mr. Cathers left the staff of Messrs. Humphrey about two years ago, and since then conducted a grocery and commission business. He also conducted the exhibition restaurant at the exhibition last year. He was well known all over the Maritime Provinces and had many friends.

In the exchequer Court, at Ottawa, last Wednesday judgment was delivered in the case of Lorenzo G. Crosby, of St. John, vs. the King. On the 19th day of May, 1904, the claimant entered for warehouse at the port of St. John, N.B., 221 puncheons of molasses, alleged to have been purchased in Porto Rico, imported via New York. Suspicion fell upon the correctness of the entries, and 116 puncheons were seized on the ground that the statements made in the entry papers as to the molasses being in the original packages and not having been mixed, were untrue.

Pending the decision of the Minister of Customs, a deposit of $1,308.44 was made to correspond to the amount of the true duty payable on the molasses by the claimant. The claimant was not the real owner of the molasses, but was consignee thereof for the N. W. Taussig Company, of New York.

Judgment was given for the Crown, with costs against the claimant, the court holding that the claimant had not established that the molasses was in the original packages when entered for duty.

William J. Magee, the Charlotte St. butcher, has opened a fish department in connection with his already extensive business, and the new premises, which are next door to the meat department, are thoroughly up-to-date in every way.

George E. Ford & Son, of Sackville, have opened a branch store at Bayfield Corner. They intend to run a thoroughly up-to-date general store.

W. Alexander Porter went to Boston last week on a combined business and pleasure trip.

At the annual meeting of the Thistle Curling Club last Thursday evening, J. Fred Shaw was elected president for 1907-08.

WILL. H. ESCOTT, WINNIPEG.

TRAVELER NOW A BROKER.

Will. H. Escott, for 17 years a traveler with T. B. Escott & Co., London, has followed the call of ambition and the west and is now in business for himself in Winnipeg, a member of the new brokerage firm, Carman and Escott. Anybody who has met Mr. Escott will not doubt his success. He is a big man every way, fair, smiling, with a hand shake that denotes energy and reliability. He is a trained salesman with all the ginger necessary. He knows the grocery business from the ground up. Before going with his uncle, T. B. Escott, he served five years in the retail trade with J. H. Bogart of Chatham.

Before leaving his old firm the staff expressed their appreciation of him by an address and a very handsome traveling bag. The Knights Templars, too, Richard Coeur de Leon commandery, made Mr. Escott feel he was appreciated and presented him with a handsome jewel of the order. Mr. Escott was as popular socially as in business. The Canadian Grocer and a host of friends wish him success in his new venture.

CEREALS AND CONFECTIONERY

All Markets Firm—Transportation and the Ability of the Railways to Handle the Traffic Still the Important Question—Confectionery.

Continued reports of crop damage have more than overcome the effect of largely increased primary receipts of wheat and the market remains firm. Last week, primary receipts in Canada and the States increased 2,451,000 bushels compared with a decrease a year ago of 146,000 bushels. The determining factor in the situation, however, is the question of the ability of the railways to move freight. To date only about half the western crop has been moved out, and the likelihood of the railways overtaking business is very remote. A Toronto grain dealer stated this week that he had just got out the last of the grain stored in Georgian Bay ports last fall. It was ordered out in December and January. A large miller reported that he had 50 cars of wheat between Toronto and Fort William and didn't know when he could get it. He had no difficulty, however, in getting cars for shipments from his mill.

The firm wheat markets keep the prices of flour steady, and of breakfast foods also. Trade, however, is reported good.

Confectionery.

The number of grocers handling high grade confectionery as a specialty is constantly increasing. It is the better, up-to-date grocers who are doing it. Next week we will produce on this page a picture of a Hespeler grocer's window with a display of high grade confectionery. When a grocer refits his store now-a-days he very frequently puts in a plate glass silent saleman. That is a very common fixture, and it is just what is needed for the displaying of fine confectionery. There is an illustration of it in the picture of McLaren's store, Guelph, on another page of this issue. Some of the modern display counters also serve the purpose excellently.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Local demand continues satisfactory, and there is reported a little better enquiry for export. Prices show no change this week, although wheat is firm and advancing in tendency. It is not thought that quotations will be higher in the near future.

REASONS FOR ORGANIZATION.

John A. Green, secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers' of the United States recommends the following reasons why the retail grocer should be a member of a grocers' organization:

Because it will be the act of a sensible man, who perceives the great value of trade organization.

Because it will be a step you will never regret.

Because it will help you through your difficulties, and protect you in time of trouble.

Because it will keep you directly in touch with your fellow traders, whose motto is "Defence, not Defiance."

Because the association does not support the wrongdoer, but safeguards the interests of the respectable trader.

Because you may never know when you may need its aid.

Because the cost is small, and you are not a mean man.

Because you are not a man to enjoy trade benefits at the expense of your fellow, and perhaps less fortunate trader.

Because in unity there is strength.

Because self help is the best help.

Because it is the adviser, advocate and friend of the retailer.

Because it brings grocery associations in various parts of the country into direct touch with each other, through the national association.

Because, by this means, absolute unity of action is assured, for the purpose of protection and defense, locally and nationally.

Because it facilitates inter-communication on all questions affecting trade, and insures the voice of the retailer being heard.

Because it watches closely, and opposes by every possible means, all measures calculated to injure the trade.

Because by joining you will strengthen your own position and render more efficient service in defense of your trade interests.

Because last, and most important of all, it teaches that in unity and resolution there is success, while division and irresolution means failure.

The Shrewd Grocer

Perfection Cream Sodas

on the order list for various reasons—the chiefest being that particular and economic housewives, women who know and appreciate biscuit goodness, always insist on

It could hardly be otherwise. First Quality goods are bound to capture the market and that Quality must last if that brand of goods holds the market.

The immense sales of

can be explained in no other way. It does pay the grocer to recommend and push them and most grocers know it.

MONTREAL RETAILERS

Discuss the Exhibition of Groceries — Their Annual Picnic.

Attendance at the monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, held last Thursday evening, was most satisfactory. It is a long time since such a large number turned out at a meeting which did not promise something exciting in the way of elections or other matters along that line.

The chief topic under discussion during the evening was the exhibition of groceries to be held in the Arena from April 18 to 27. The grocers present were enthusiastic over the fair, and evidenced great interest in the progress being made by the committee. Secretary Beaudry, addressing the gathering, pointed out the educative value of such an exhibition, and prophesied untold benefits for the retailer as a result of the fair. He urged those present to give their heartiest support to the movement in order to ensure its being the success it should be. The grocers are right behind the movement, and will do all in their power to make things run along smoothly before and during the course of the fair.

It was announced that the grocers would be supplied with tickets for their customers' use. In the course of the fair grocers of the city will be entertained at a luncheon.

Mr. Beaudoin moved, seconded by Mr. Plourde, that the association run its annual picnic this year as usual. He thought that Ile St. Amour, near Valleyfield, would be a fine place to hold the usual sports. He received the support of the grocers present, and the motion carried. The date for the picnic was not fixed, but will be decided upon later.

J. A. Labonte, seconded by Mr. Dore, proposed that the grocers should lend their presence at the annual picnic of their confreres in Ottawa. The Ottawa grocers' picnic will be held in Alexandria about the middle of July. This motion was unanimously carried.

Some discussion took place on the liquor license question but nothing definite was done.

Secretary Beaudry announced that important matters would be brought up for discussion at the next meeting.

President A. Laniel occupied the chair.

MONTHLY COMPETITION.

Window dressing, we believe, is one of the most important parts of the grocery business. It needs encouragement in Canada. For that reason The Canadian Grocer is holding a monthly window dressing competition. Three prizes of $5, $3 and $2 will be awarded each month. Those wishing to enter the competition will send photographs of their windows to THE CANADIAN GROCER, 10 Front St. East, Toronto, accompanied by a written description.

This is a chance for the clerk. No department of the grocery trade offers larger opportunities for advancement than window dressing. If you don't know what you can do, try. If you don't surprise yourself the effort will be a great advantage in any case. No grocer is up to his business if he cannot dress a window. Get into the competition.

E. D. Marceau Company, Montreal, in this issue are advertising their several brands of teas, coffees, spices, vinegar, and other specialties. Some attractive prices are given.

The purity of the Lowney products will never be questioned by Pure Food Officials. There are no preservatives, substitutes, adulterants or dyes in the Lowney goods. Dealers find safety, satisfaction and a fair profit in selling them.

Lemons Steadily Rising—Oranges Stronger—Expedients for Surmounting the Car Shortage Difficulty—Pineapples Very Firm—Florida Celery Crop.

The Toronto and Montreal markets are again only moderately active this week, the "between seasons" period giving the jobbers and importers a few quiet moments in which to indulge their prophetic instincts, and foretell to an admiring and attentive clientele the exact future condition of the markets as it has appeared to them in dreams. If the future actually turns out to be as rosy as some of them forecast, a large majority will soon have to quit prophesying and get down to work, for there's big business ahead.

Owing to the lateness of the Montreal vessels, lemons will be scarce and high for another month at least. The "Fremona," which sailed on the 10th, cannot arrive for another three weeks, and it will be several days after that before her cargo can be got at.

Purchases are being made in New York, and all receiving points, for the Summer supply and there is at present every indication that the market will rule firm to higher, largely owing to the great demand in Northern Europe and Russia. Boston reports an almost bare market on lemons, but several direct shipments are due there this month.

Transportation in California is rapidly assuming an acute stage. The car shortage has been so bad that numerous expedients for handling the crop are being resorted to. Two prominent Redlands houses shipped several cars of fruit to Port Los Angeles, and from there by steamer to Portland and Seattle, when it was forwarded to northern and eastern points. Another firm shipped a car of fruit east in a box car. This is probably the first time on record that such a thing has been done. A Toronto house received a car under ventilation, and the stock opened up in fine condition. A somewhat risky substitute, this, for refrigeration, but in the present instance, at least, no bad effects resulted.

Oranges are firm, but the unusually large sizes which have been in evidence throughout the season have tended to lower the quality of the crop. The high prices may be put down to the car shortage, though in regard to this a well-known New York receiver said recently: "It seems deplorable that such a condition should exist, but from the point of view of the grower, the fact that the railroads have been unable to handle the 25,000 carload crop expeditiously has been one of the best things that could have happened, since it has prevented the glutting of the various markets and consequent demoralization of prices." Unfortunately the growers' point of view is not altogether that of the importer.

Pineapples are in good demand, but will be a little scarce for the next week or so. We have something to say as to the situation elsewhere. Bananas are higher at seaport than they have been in three years.

The Florida celery crop this season promises to be a record-breaker. From four to six carloads a day are being shipped out, and bring prices which, if not exactly fancy, are at least satisfactory to the growers.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Prices on the whole keep up, and business is more or less limited. Cocoanuts are higher, prices now asked ranging between $3.50 and $4. Pineapples have advanced 25 cents since last report. Lemons are obtainable for slightly lower prices, $2.65 to $2.75 being ruling figures for Mexicans. Californias are up.

VEGETABLES—Trade in vegetables is not so great as it might be owing to the high prices ruling. Tomatoes and cabbage are in good demand, these lines, with celery, being chiefly asked for by the trade. FISH—Since the closing of the Lenten season there has been very little movement in the fish line. Demand has fallen off perceptibly in all varieties. Staple lines are asked for as usual at this season of the year. Prices show a few changes this week as will be seen from the quotations hereunder. Fresh haddock is higher, being sold at 13c to 14c. Shadd are also advanced, the price being 5 cents above last week's figure. Labrador salmon in half barrels are now on the market, obtainable for $6.50. Lobsters are quoted this week, as are also Standard oysters in sealed tins, the price asked for this line being 40 cents per imperial quart.

out their remaining stock, but one or two were not so fortunate. The Spring banana trade is starting up actively and prices are firm. Pineapples are much higher, but prices will come down before long. Grape fruit continues first-class in quality, but stock is rapidly getting out of the market. Strawberries are easier, but the hot weather in the south has spoilt a large proportion of the stock in transit. The Louisiana is rapidly supplanting the Florida stuff.

ALASKA SALMON FOR CANADIAN

All British Columbia Salmon Cans Should be Stamped for Identification.

P. B. MacNamara, Canadian commercial agent at Manchester, has written again about the fraud practiced in Great Britain of substituting red Alaska for British Columbia salmon. He says:

"My informant assures me that British Columbia salmon of all grades reaches this country without mark of origin on the tin, and in almost all cases without marks other than an identifying mark on case in which shipped, corresponding with mark on B.L. for identification.

"There would be no possibility of fraud if the tins were stamped with a letter identifying the river, as after the tin is filled it could not be branded. The great part of the Alaska fish that contribute to the fraud is caught by large firms owning vessels adequately fitted up for catching and canning the fish on board, and hence it is effected at little cost as compared with cost to canners. This class of salmon is plentiful, large quantities are caught, but the quality is much inferior, being coarse and hard, neither can it compare in the matter of cleanliness with that put up in canneries as the space on ship is limited as well as the fresh water supply. The best quality of Alaska red salmon is selected to carry out the fraud, and a label bearing 'British Columbia Salmon,' without any other mark is put on in England. This salmon is bought from 17s. to 17s. 6d. per case, and is put in competition with genuine British Columbia salmon at 22s. to 22s. 6d.

"In many cases the fraud is discovered, and complaints, returns and cancel of orders follow, yet a great quantity reaches the consuming public upon whom the fraud is constantly perpetrated. Last season's pack of British Columbia salmon is very small. Prices in consequence will be higher, as best quality is very scarce indeed. One large firm is short 10,000 cases on existing contracts, and other firms are situated similarly."

THE GRECIAN CURRANT SITUATION.

Those who read the article in a recent issue of The Canadian Grocer on the "Grecian Currant Retention Law" will be interested in some statements made a few days ago by Frank W. Jackson, New York, of the Grecian Currant Company. He said: "Currants on the spot have been subjected to some pressure during the past ten days in view of the earlier date when shipments from Greece will have the advantage of the payment of the export tax in cash rather than in currants. It was generally believed that the export limit, of which we have made mention already, would not be reached until about the last of April, but the demand from various markets has been considerably heavier than anticipated with the result that currants take advantage of the change in tax for shipment about April 1st.

"Our to-day's cables report the foreign market as steady and the impression is general in Greece that the market will not change to a lower level. It is reported on what seems to be good authority, that the quantity of currants in Greece for export, aside from retention currants, is not above 8,000 tons. It would at least appear that 10,000 tons would be sufficient to cover the available stock.

"The export of currants from Greece to the first of March is 18,000 tons in excess of the export to the world's markets to the same date last year. An interesting comparison might be drawn from the export figures to England. England purchased about 19,000 tons from March 1 to August 23 last year. Should she buy as many currants between these dates for the present season her purchases would be 10,000 tons more or less in excess of last year."

PRESERVING FISH.

A New Method Devised in Australia—Not Yet Patented in Canada.

J. S. Larke, Canadian commercial agent in Australia, writes:

Some time ago a system of preserving fish was patented in Australia, Great Britain and the United States, but no protection was taken out in Canada. A short time ago the Fisheries Department of this state made an investigation into its merits, and the experts of the department believe the process to be one of considerable value. It is exceedingly simple and not expensive. The fish are immersed in a tank, through which a stream of salt water, which has percolated through bone charcoal, is kept in circulation. At the one end of the tank is the reservoir of bone charcoal through which the water filters, and at the other end the water passes out through a series of sponges and sand, which collects the mucus of the fish and enables the water to be re-used. In Sydney the salt water used was water from the ocean. The fish lie in the tank five or six hours. The process is described in the United States patents, which can easily be obtained in Canada. It is not claimed that this process alone will preserve the fish for any length of time. Cool storage in addition is required, but the fish do not require to be frozen, hence the cells of the flesh are not burst and the full flavor of the fish is retained. A test of fish which have been preserved in cool storage in this way for several days has been made by the fisheries experts, who assert that the flavor cannot be discerned from fish that had been freshly caught. Canadian fishermen can make an experiment which would not be costly, and thus satisfy themselves of the value of the process.

STOCKS OF LARD.

According to the monthly bulletin issued by the N. K. Fairbank Co., the stocks of lard held in Europe on April 1 were 92,100 tierces, a gain of 12,200 over a month before. Stocks afloat for Europe on the first instant were only 60,000, as against 75,000 on March 1. The total stocks in Europe and afloat on April 1 were thus 152,100, a shrinkage of 2,800 from last month's estimate. On April 1, 1906, they were 164,000, on the same date, 1905, 168,450, and two years previous to that only 91,100.

The total number of tierces held in America on April 1 were 79,212, a drop of 5,601 from last month's figures, and an increase of 1,629 over last year's holdings. On April 1, 1905, the stock on hand was 154,068, in 1904, 135,488, and in 1903, 37,131.

Of the European cities Hamburg is again in the lead with 25,000, the Baltic ports rating second with 19,500. The former shows an increase of 5,000 tierces over last month's holdings, and the latter a gain of 1,000. With regard to the other European cities, the order is substantially the same as last month, the only noticeable change being Berlin, which, with 6,000 tierces, an increase of 4,000 over March 1, rises from 7th to 5th place in the list. All but two show a gain over last month. The American cities, on the other hand, without exception, show a falling off of from one to twenty-two hundred from the stock of March 1, New York heading the list with a drop of 2,203.

GROCERY NEWS OF THE ATLANTIC PROVINCE

Halifax, April 9.

With improved weather conditions the receipts of eggs are increasing and the price is showing a steady decline. They have dropped three cents per dozen since last report and a further decline is sure to follow next week. The price of butter is steady but the receipts are better and more local made stock is reaching the market. There is a good market for all that is brought along. Cheese are very firm.

Fish—The fish markets are very dull, both home and foreign at the present time. According to advices received here there is a slump in the foreign markets and the fish dealers of Newfoundland have been hard hit. One firm has already been forced into liquidation. It is stated that they paid a million dollars too much for their fish the past season. For the first time for several weeks fresh boiled lobsters were offered for sale in this city during the week just closed. They are small in size and retail at $1.00 per dozen. Halibut is more plentiful now and the demand is fair. The retail price has dropped from 20 to 15 cents per pound.

New Fruit and Produce Co.

A company to be known as the Hants County Fruit and Produce Company has been incorporated under the laws of Nova Scotia. John L. Sexton is the president, and F. H. Manning, of Falmouth, the secretary and manager. The company will occupy the large brick warehouse built by Manning and Sexton, on the site of the old Dufferin Hotel in Windsor. The capital stock of the company is $10,000 and it has power to buy, sell or handle on consignment all kinds of farm produce, especially apples in their season, and to carry on a general wholesale and retail flour, feed and grain business. The company will rent storage for fruit and other goods or act in the capacity of general warehousemen. As a side line the company intends handling all kinds of farm machinery, wagons, etc.

More Mixed Farming.

A well-known agriculturist says that the tendency of farming in the Annapolis Valley has been to run more and more exclusively into fruit raising. For years past there have been those who have advised against this. The trend of events now seem to emphasize the arguments of those who have advocated mixed instead of exclusively fruit farming. With the prices for apples remaining stationary, and those for butter, beef, pork, poultry, mutton, cheese, etc., advancing the temptation to neglect everything else for the orchard is growing less strong, and we may expect to see a revival of stock-raising in its various forms in Annapolis and Kings counties. This will have a doubly good effect, as it will enable the farmer to increase his cash sales and cut down the big fertilizer bill. If the Valley farmers can solve the problem of fertilizing their own farms they will be on the way to prosperity. Times have changed within a quarter of a century in Nova Scotia, and now there is a demand for more than the farmers can produce, and the prices are greatly advanced. Butter and eggs command a better price than ever before.

Grocer's Money for Charity.

The late R. T. Forristall, grocer, left an estate valued at between 30,000 and $40,000. He bequeathed $200 each to five charitable institutions, and directed that the residue be divided among such charitable institutions as the executors may see fit. The stock is now being appraised by F. T. Courtney and W. Stetson Rogers, and the business is offered for sale by tender.

Thomas Major and Sons, grocers, are retiring from business, and the premises are on the market. The stand is an exceptionally good one for a grocery and has been used as such for more than forty years.

J. H. Treen, commission merchant of Sydney, was a visitor to the city this week.

The West India liner Olenda, landed 6,000 packages of sugar and 800 packages of molasses at this port last week.

A STORE KEEPER WITH IDEAS

The many general merchants who are subscribers to The Canadian Grocer will have been interested in the advertising device described in last week's issue by R. J. Thomas, of Hartford. They will be interested in the accompanying pictures of Mr. Thomas himself and of his store. Mr. Thomas' advertising device was a means also of disposing of the packing cases and boxes that often accumulate in a way to become a nuisance to the merchant. It is worth noting that Mr. Thomas' credit is reported A1 by Bradstreet.

DRINK MELAGAMA.

Minto Bros., proprietors of "Melagama" tea, have had erected on the roof of T. Lindsay & Company's warehouse, at Ottawa, a large electric sign, which ever and anon flashes to the public the advice: "Drink Melegama Tea." It is a proof of the progressive spirit of this firm. They are always ready to assist the retailer and—as everyone knows—no matter how excellent the value of an article it has to be advertised. The proprietors of "Melagama" are never behind in this respect.

Fielding & Campeau, Windsor, had a fire recently which practically destroyed their stock. They have installed an entirely new stock, as well as a very large cooling room to accommodate their provision and meat department.

IT IS FOOLISH TO BREAK EGGS!

When for a very small cost you can install a system for delivering eggs from your store to the customer's house with absolutely no breakage.

THE STAR EGG CARRIER and TRAY are indispensable to the grocer who wants to stop the leaks in his business.

The old-time pasteboard and wire carriers are costly, slow and clumsy. Not only does the Star egg carrier quickly pay for itself by stopping breakage, but it saves much time, and time is money.

The Star egg carrier is not only quick but it is automatic; it will deposit the eggs anywhere (either one or two dozen) without waiting for a dish to place them in or waiting for anyone at the house to receive them; moreover as the carrier need never leave the delivery boy's hand there is no excuse for losing it.

LOOSE-LEAF ACCOUNTS IN COURT.

John A. Green, secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States, in the weekly bulletin of the association says about loose-leaf book-keeping:

On account of the many devices being placed on the market for keeping a record of credit between the retailer and the consumer, many letters of inquiry have reached this office in regard to whether a loose-leaf system would have any standing before the courts.

There are, at the present time, a great many of the retailers adopting the new system and discarding the old ledger, and the duplicate loose-leaf method is gaining ground every day. Hence, the many inquiries in regard to its standing before the courts.

The following result of a thorough examination by the authorities of this question was made public in the Banking Law Journal for July, 1905, which I think has a direct bearing on the question at issue, and we are not aware of any higher court decision specifically relating to the admissibility of loose-leaf books as evidence since the time when the above was published, nor bearing upon the weight of credibility of such evidence as compared with evidence afforded by a bound book. The report was as follows:

"A correspondent writes asking 'As to the admissibility in evidence of loose-leaf books' and for citation of any decisions which have been rendered by the courts on this point. We find no decisions of any of the higher courts bearing upon the admissibility of loose-leaf books as a distinctive form, but believe they are admissible as evidence, to the same extent and for the same purposes as bound books of account, while having certain decided advantages in respect of convenience.

"A notched stick, pieces of board sawed out of a corn crib, and boards upon which the measurements of lumber were kept, all have been held good books of original entry, and receivable as evidence.

"The manner of keeping the accounts, and their purpose, is the important consideration, rather than the form of the books themselves."

Where accounts offered in evidence as books of original entries had been started in a small pass book and continued on sheets of paper attached together, and were objected to on the ground that the entries made upon the sheets were not made at the time of their respective dates, the dates not being in chronological order, and the ink having the appearance of being fresh, indicating that the entries were made simultaneously, it was held the account was admissible for whatever it was worth, going to the jury subject to criticism and cross examination.

Where account books have become shop-worn, the outside covers and some inside pages lost, the threads binding the leaves in some cases loosened, and leaves fastened together with a pin, held admissible their condition being a matter going to their weight and credibility with the jury.

LIGHT WEIGHTS IN NEW YORK.

Dishonest Methods Checked by Prosecutions—Some New Devices.

In the annual report recently issued of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, New York, 2,750 violations with penalties aggregating $68,750 were reported.

According to the following paragraph in the report, some New York grocers have a systematic method of cheating their customers:

"One of the largest retail grocers in Brooklyn was visited by an inspector at noon on a certain Saturday, who tested a number of packages of flour and sugar, which he found short of weight from four to six ounces. He warned the manager and the clerks not to sell these short weight packages, but to refill them to the correct weight. The answer given by the manager was that 99 out of every hundred grocers did the same. At about 8 p.m. that same day the inspector visited the store while several packages were being sold, and upon the reweighing of a three and a half poung bag of flour purchased it was found to be one of the several bags examined that day, and four and one-half ounces short weight. The result of this inspection and prosecution was very effective in stopping this kind of larceny, and the fact that the dealer was fined $100 spread through the grocery trade, with the result that it is now hardly possible to find a short weight package sold, and not one genuine complaint has been received of late indicating that such frauds are practiced any longer."

in "fixing" the scales are interestingly described as follows:

"There was one brand new and indeed an ingenious electric device discovered this year. It consisted of an incandescent bulb hung on the hook of a scale, presumably to show the face of scale to better advantage to the customer, who, by the way, only looks at it when his purchase is on it, and does not discover that the scale pointer starts at two ounces beyond the zero point. An inspector found the bulb suspended as described. A new excuse went with the new trick. It was merely hung out of the way, said the dealer, but upon inspection it showed that it was two ounces in the 'weigh.'

Another explanation given for a scale found seven ounces fast was that the scale had a hole in the pan and it was an ounce against the dealer, so to obviate any possible chance of losing one ounce on account of such hole, he placed a bag with a seven-ounce bar of solder in it, hung upon the pan, and began selling turkeys at 22 cents per pound.

"The attachment game is worked only by the boldest butchers who give short weight and it is only resorted to upon Saturday nights during the rush hours, at which time many of them have been found. It is used because it is surer than the overcharge method, inasmuch as the weight of attachment is always paid for, and is shown on scale in the weight charged."

THE GROCER AND TEA.

To the Editor of The Canadian Grocer:

It has occurred to me lately, especially during a recent visit to the town of Simcoe, that the great abuse that the retail trade is suffering from (in the line of business I am in) is the tea pedlar.

In the town mentioned I recently hired two young men, and made enquiries at every dwelling house there as to the line of tea they were drinking, where they got it from, and also left a sample of "Salada." I found that at least three houses out of every five were getting their tea through a well-known tea pedlar in London, Ont., and getting only indifferent tea at that, certainly nothing like the quality that the retailer has for sale, but most of them keep it in the back-ground, and push their bulk teas, giving the desired opportunity to the pedlar to get in his "fine work" with the consequence that there was comparatively little tea sold by the retailer in Simcoe. If the retail grocer was only true to himself, he would soon have the tea trade back to where it belongs, and this impressed itself so strongly on me, that I am taking the liberty of asking publicity from my experience in your widely circulated journal.

WALL PAPER ADVERTISING.

Good stores are paying more attention than ever to the advertising of wall papers, and such a policy must certainly be profitable. Some have even devoted an exclusive ad. to this line occasionally. We note with satisfaction the better tone that pervades their talks to the public, and this comes from a better appreciation of the merits and possibilities of the goods. One ad. that we have picked out at random has an attractive illustration and is headed "Artistic Wall Decorations." Part of the matter following is reproduced:

"Spring is at hand, which means that you soon will be brightening up your present home. We have a very nice line of high-grade wall papers, made for those who appreciate the best efforts of clever artists in most elaborate combinations, with which you will be able to match any particular kind of house-furnishings." The heading is excellent; the word "decorations" gives the goods a higher standing in the eyes of the public than would the mere term "wall papers."

TOLEDO COMPUTING SCALES

Automatic but Springless.

The "Toledo" is a money saver because it positively stops the giving of overweight.

A time saver because it is Automatic.

A labor saver because there are no weights to lift, no poises to slide, or prices to set.

A trade bringer because it indicates to the customer in plain figures the correct weight of the article he buying.

It is honest both to the merchant and customer.

The Toledo system costs you nothing because it paid for with the money you are now losing.

CELLAR OUTFIT
FOR TWO KINDS OF OIL

The purchase of a Bowser Self-Measuring Oil Tank does not mean an additional expense. As in all good investments, there is a first cost, but the money saved by the Bowser in the first year alone will repay the original price.

The Bowser Pays Because

It is an oil saver, and oil costs money.
It is a labor saver, and labor costs money.
It is a time saver, and time is money.

THE A. D. FISHER CO., LIMITED, - TORONTO

IT IS JUST THIS

The quality of Maconochie's Pickles cannot be improved. Money will not do it—we pay the highest price for the best raw materials the world produces. Skill will not do it—the art of preserving vegetables in vinegar has in Moconochie's factory reached the highest state of perfection that the human brain can devise. Still we are not satisfied. To have placed in the hands of the grocer the greatest value in pickles is not enough.

LOOK OUT FOR THE NEW SCREW BOTTLE

If we could not improve the contents, we found there was room for improvement in the bottles. We are therefore putting on the market an entirely new style of bottle, handsome in appearance, easily opened, and air tight. The stopper is gold lined and waxed to resist the action of the vinegar, thus preserving the flavor of pickles from contamination with cork, rubber or metal. No cork screw is needed to open the bottle; there is no lever to rust and get out of order.

THIS BOTTLE WILL APPEAL TO YOUR CUSTOMERS

just as strongly as a combination of quality, value, and profit appeals to you.

Order from your wholesale grocer, but in justice to yourself refuse to accept a substitute.

Originality

The originality of a subject, says Disraeli, is in its treatment.
And why not?
It is in the "treatment," which includes the blending, of that makes them so supremely original—so original that they are matchless in their delicious and palate-tempting qualities.

jars and packages are dainty in appearance and look well on your shelves. Buyers are often influenced by the outside appearance of the packages and it is to your benefit to stock only those goods which are contained in dainty and attractive packages, providing of course you can rely upon the quality of the goods inside. With C. & B. goods the superior appearance of the jars, glasses, etc., is merely an indication of the superior quality of what is inside, and you can rely on every consumer finding that the goods in every way come up to their appearance. C. & B. on our wrappers is a guarantee of the quality of the contents.

BRADSTREET'S
Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World
Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

CANADIAN CANNERS, LIMITED
Hamilton, Canada.

Packers of

"Canada First," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Horseshoe," "Auto," "Kent," "Lynnvalley," "Maple Leaf," "Lion," "Thistle," "Grand River" and "White Rose" brands.

Reputation and Profit

The wise grocer is just as anxious to secure a high reputation as he is to make money. Since both are essential to lasting success it is evidently short-sighted policy to stock an inferior brand of canned goods. You clinch both Reputation and Profit by stocking the housewife's favorite, the far-famed because that brand is simply a revelation of sterling goodness through and through. Some competitors wonder because we don't claim more in our advertising, but we prefer to let Old Homestead Brand prove our claims.

Let your customers decide for us. If you've never carried Old Homestead Brand let's ship you a trial order and we're willing to stand by the decision of your customers.

There's just another interesting reason for stocking

a cash reason—there's more profit, direct and indirect, in handling Old Homestead Brand of canned goods than any other most grocers know about.

Yes, you clinch both reputation and profit by stocking Old Homestead Brand.

St. George's Baking Powder

Mrs. Rorer, the famous Food Expert, said recently: "The stingiest people I know have stopped buying 'cheap' foods . . . they are buying the best to be had."

Your customers don't take long to decide that a pound of sugar, half sand, at 5c., is more expensive than a pound of pure sugar at 8c.

And they won't hesitate in deciding that St. George's Baking Powder, with its 99.90% pure Cream of Tartar, is less expensive than Baking Powders containing "Commercial" Cream of Tartar which has 10% to 15% lime and other adulterants in it. Yet "Commercial" is the next best—many worse.

Most of your customers have likely figured it out by this time—for they've probably read our advertising—could hardly miss it—and they'll be glad to get St. George's, which is guaranteed to you and to them.

St. George's is the best Baking Powder that chemistry can evolve.

We've tested it every way.

Credit and Money

Nine-tenths of the grocers who sell Windsor Salt (pure, white, crystaline, won't cake) have money in the bank. They discount their bills. Their credit is "A, Number One." Happy grocers they!

Windsor Salt plays its own little part in bringing about this contented state of things. It never disappoints the grocers' customer who buys it. It serves to hold confidence in the quality of a grocer's general stock. It establishes permanent family trade. It helps a grocer's credit—it brings him money.

DID YOU EVER WEIGH

the matter in your own mind and consider what a difference it would make in your annual profits if you were able to secure orders from your customers for ALL their requirements in your line. For instance, are there not some who persist in going to the OTHER store for their COFFEE? They have the impression, rightly or wrongly, that the other grocer suits their taste in Coffee better than you can do, the NET RESULT being that the other fellow gets the profit—Coffee is a profitable line, too.

Try Greig's White Swan Blend and see what a difference it will make in your trade. It is the kind of Coffee that people come back for. Only the other day a lady bought a pound tin of it in a store, not 100 miles from Toronto; the second day afterwards she returned for four pounds more "for fear it should all be gone." That's the kind of Coffee it is. Try a sample lot and see how your sales will grow.

The 1-lb. tins are handsomely embossed and decorated, and just as high-grade as the Coffee itself.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN THE CANADIAN WEST

(By The Canadian Grocer's Special Correspondent.)

Winnipeg, Man., April 15, 1907.

What is the actual outlook for business in the Canadian west? Has the country suffered much as a result of the hard winter? Will the severe winter seriously affect immigration, or will it affect it at all? Collections are slow now and money seems to be unusually tight in the west. Is this condition likely to last long? These are questions in which the business men of the country are very much interested and it is important that they should be acquainted with the actual conditions. Business men want the truth about the situation, not statements colored by the buoyant optimism of the west or the rose-tinted eyeglasses of the east.

To begin with, it must be admitted by all who give the subject any consideration that there is something wrong with the present state of affairs. Money is undeniably "tight" and business is suffering as a consequence. The banks are carrying many large business concerns and they are finding it hard to get the money to supply the requirements of their customers. In the winter season when money should be plentiful it is becoming increasingly difficult to make collections.

Railways at the Bottom of it.

The root of the trouble, as far as the west is concerned, lies with the railways. They have not kept up with the growth of the country. Their rolling stock and motive equipment are inadequate, under even the most favorable circumstances, to handle the western traffic; consequently the worst winter in twenty years put the junior road almost completely out of business and very seriously crippled the senior road. These are facts which cannot be disputed.

Even had the past winter been normal there were special reasons why the railways were up against a serious situation. In the Fall, when every available car is required to move the wheat crop, there was a sudden and unexpected call from Alberta to move live stock east.. Heavy falls of rain in Alberta during the month of August were responsible for a luxuriant growth of grass and the ranch cattle were fat and in prime condition. At the same time there was a rise of about two cents per pound in the price of beef in the London and Liverpool markets. Heavy shipments resulted, and 1906 was undoubtedly the greatest cattle year the west has ever known. These cattle shipments required a great number of cars, and while the cattle shippers in Alberta were prosperous the farmers in Saskatchewan and Manitoba complained that there were insufficient cars to move their wheat. When navigation closed at Fort William it was seen that there had been much reason in their complaints. When navigation closed, on Dec. 12th, the big terminal elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur were practically empty, and from Sept. 1st, 1906, to Dec. 12th, 1906, the number of cars shipped was 2,443 less than for the corresponding period in 1905. Practically the whole of the Saskatchewan and a good proportion of the Manitoba crop remained to be marketed. The whole of the 1906 crop will not be marketed until the 1907 crop is ready for transportation.

Fall of the Egg Basket.

Now, it is a commonplace remark that the west has all its eggs in one basket, that everything depends upon the wheat crop. Generally speaking, this is true, and when the railways were unable to move the crop promptly it was inevitable that there should be a serious shortage of ready cash in the country. It is true that money was advanced by the banks on the security of the crops, but it must be remembered that these advances have been hindered by a world-wide money stringency, due to a great variety of causes. On the great bulk of the wheat crop yet unmarketed the banks have not advanced any cash, probably because they were unable to do so in the state of the money market this winter.

As it Looks Now.

This, then, is the present situation. Money is undeniably "tight," and all interests are waiting impatiently for the opening of navigation. When the wheat crop commences to move the present stringency will be greatly relieved and most of the obligations of the west will undoubtedly be discharged. There is no reason for undue anxiety; in fact, the business men who are best acquainted with conditions in western Canada, and who have had the longest experience in business in the west, are the men who are most optimistic as to the immediate future. The prosperity of the country rests upon too sure and stable foundations to be disturbed seriously by the circumstances of the last six months. Western Canada is past the experimental stage. The tide of immigration is flowing in, unchecked by startling and exaggerated reports of the rigors of a severe winter, the railways are planning larger extensions this season than in any previous summer, and real estate values are steadily advancing. A little patience on the part of eastern manufacturers and wholesalers is all that is required. In a few weeks conditions will right themselves.

In one respect the severe winter, with its resulting hardship to business, has been a blessing in disguise. It has brought to the attention of the general public, of the railway officials, of the Railway Commission, and of the Government, the fact that the equipment of the railways is quite inadequate to the needs of the country. Great efforts will now be made to remedy this state of affairs; greater efforts than would have been made had not the need been made so apparent by the events of the past few months.

Fred C. Grasley has joined the traveling staff of Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton. Mr. Grasley is well known in the Cobalt and Parry Sound districts, and will soon be among his old friends.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

BELLEVILLE.

This city is situated in the midst of probably the most fertile vegetable and grain portion of the Province of Ontario, and it is an undisputed fact that within the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland, there are more canning factories in the same area than any similar area in all the rest of Canada. Especially is this true of Prince Edward County, noted almost as much for its fruit as its vegetables. Millions of cans are exported from this county of corn, peas, tomatoes, beans, apples and other fruit, and each year is adding to the number of new factories. Naturally one would imagine that canned vegetables would be obtainable here at a minimum price, but such is not the case. Just ask the retail grocers. Your correspondent made a canvass of the leading grocers to-day. I found that nearly all of them reported their sale of canned peas, beans and corn just as brisk as ever, but there is one drawback. A few years ago every grocer in the city would sell 4 cans of the above with a can of tomatoes for 25 cents. Now you can get a can of peas, corn and beans or two cans of one and one of another for a quarter, but tomatoes are not included in the list. Nay, nay. If a customer wants two cans of tomatoes now he pays in some places 25 cents and in a couple of stores they are sold at 10 cents each and the latter claim they are losing on them just because they have sold them at that price for some years.

The suspicion which the people were naturally bound to harbor over the big "Chicago Exposee" in regard to canned goods was felt in Belleville to a considerable extent and it was no doubt felt elsewhere. It was enough to make people who were accustomed to use canned meats a little dubious, as the evidence of fraud was so flagrant. A prominent grocer said to-day, that since the Canadian Government had become deeply concerned in enforcing the Pure Food Law the people were regaining confidence and the sale of canned goods was regaining its normal condition. And, by the way, several of the grocers say their sales of canned peas, corn and beans are going well and they have not sufficient to last out the season, but their supply of tomatoes is sufficient owing to the fact that they can't sell any at three for a quarter.

Several retail grocers are not a bit backward in registering what they consider a good sized kick. They claim that certain wholesalers are, and have been, selling direct to consumers, such as hotels, restaurants, boarding-houses and in many cases "particular friends" or in other words, private individuals, and the retailers naturally look upon this as an injustice. This is not intended to reflect upon any Belleville wholesalers, but outside travelers have been known to do this and these firms will not benefit thereby, according to what was told no later than to-day by a prominent and wide-awake merchant, and he was not a bit backward in mentioning the names. "If some of these offending wholesalers wonder why their orders are falling off here they should know the reason," said he. "The strange part of it is that some of these firms buy from the manufacturers on the strength of being wholesalers and then sell to others who are not retailers. The manufacturers sometimes take big risks.

It is generally understood that a movement will shortly be started among the grocers for earlier closing. For some time here there has been no regular closing hour owing to the abandonment of the grocers' branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. One big store is now closing at 6.30 instead of 7 and at 10 o'clock instead of 11 on Saturday and it is expected that others will follow suit. The people are agitating for it and if the time comes when Saturday night delivery is done away with clerks, merchants and citizens will be delighted.

One thing Belleville grocers were glad to tell your correspondent was that there was no serious cutting in prices. To tell the truth the people are wise enough to appreciate that fact, as its evil effects have left an impression not soon to be forgotten.

CHATHAM.

The Retail Merchants' Association here is energetically pushing the proposal to relieve the pressure of Saturday business by establishing a market day on Wednesday as well. The matter came up at the regular monthly meeting on the 8th, Wm. Anderson, spokesman of the committee in charge, reporting that circulars to the customers and farmers had been drafted explaining the advantages of the move. The city council have been asked to remit the fees of farmers coming to market on Wednesdays, and efforts will be made to secure special rates on railroads and in other ways to help along the project, which is one particularly of interest to local grocers. Hitherto Saturday has been a rush day, invariably necessitating the hiring of extra help; but it is hoped the new move will divert much of this business to Wednesdays.

The R.M.A. also decided to put their foot down heavily upon the concert ticket and programme advertising nuisance. In the matter of delinquent debtors, the association has already brought about good results. At Monday's meeting a number who had settled were stricken from the list.

Active interest is manifest just now in the organization of a board of trade. A public meeting to deal with the matter has been called for the 12th.

Chairman Wm. Anderson of the library board was in Toronto last week, representing that body at the meeting of the Ontario Library Association.

Wallaceburg's vote on April 8th on the proposal to fix the assessment of the Hawken Milling Co. resulted in the by-law being carried by a vote of 325 to 3.

S. H. Knight, of Moose Jaw, formerly proprietor of the general store at Northwood, is revisiting old friends in this vicinity. He looks prosperous.

Geo. A. Stacey and two sons have returned from a visit to relatives at their old home at Port Hope.

A new block is being built on Ct. Clair St., which will be occupied by Alf. Deloge's grocery and R. I. Weaver's meat market.

The Kent Canning Co. are building a considerable addition to their factory.

Harold English, of the Orchard Home Farm, Harwich, reports a fair outlook for the 1907 fruit crop. Apples, he says, will be an excellent crop this year, but pears, especially Kiefers, will be a total failure. Peaches will be a light crop. The Winter has been hard on the San Jose scale, which does not seem as active this season as in former years. The showing for smaller fruits is good.

Jos. Martin has purchased the Maple City Confectionery, on Fifth St., North Chatham, formerly owned by J. E. Burgess and D. Edwards.

INGERSOLL.

A system of advertising that is both attractive and effective has been adopted by Beattie & Co., grocers. It consists of making extensive displays of many of the leading articles in their windows and at the front of their store and marking the price of each in bold figures on heavy white cardboard. A large display such as is referred to, with the many advertising cards, is certain to arrest the attention of the passer-by or the customer, and with the prices apparent at a glance many purchases are undoubtedly made that would not have been under ordinary circumstances, and the clerks are spared the trouble of producing this and that article and making known the price. Your correspondent was very favorably impressed with this method of advertising on passing Beattie & Co.'s store recently and in conversation with the manager, John S. Smith, he was informed that it was productive of very satisfactory results.

One great advantage of this class of advertising lies in the fact that the display may include some article to which no thought of purchasing has been given by the passer-by or the regular customer. It is brought to their notice more particularly by the advertising card and as both the article and the price appeal to the one who has paused to look at the display, a sale is quickly made. In this way the transient trade will be increased and many permanent customers won. The intention of the plan is not to emphasize "bargains," but the variety of articles that is to be found in the store and the price at which each article can be obtained without the usual questioning, which is distasteful to many people unless a purchase is absolutely necessary. At this season of the year, when garden products, such as cucumbers. ripe tomatoes, lettuce, etc., are just coming in, and the prices are fluctuating almost daily, a "bulletin" system, or whatever one may choose to call it, is particularly effective, and many sales are made that would not be if the customer had to walk in and enquire as to the prices.

Everyone is aware that "plain figures" go a long way nowadays in commercial circles, especially when backed up by honest goods and fair treatment. Beattie & Co. also know the value of printers' ink and through their combined systems of advertising the public is constantly kept in touch with their stock and their prices.

Grocers everywhere are familiar with the products of the Ingersoll Packing Company and they will no doubt be interested in anything that denotes advancement on the part of this enterprising firm. Some months ago, it will be remembered, the office of the firm was almost totally destroyed by fire and they were compelled to secure new quarters at once. Last week plans and specifications were received by the company for an imposing office building, the construction of which will be commenced as quickly as possible. The site for the new building will be on the northwest corner of Wonham and Victoria Streets, in close proximity to their large factory. The building, which will be 58 x 60 ft., will be one story with basement. It will be constructed of stone and pressed brick, and according to the plans will be elaborate in every detail. The vestibule will be 26 x 16 ft. and the floor will be of tile. The main office will have a floor space of 40 x 28 ft. In addition to the main office there will be five private offices and stenographers' office. The interior will be finished in quarter-cut and red oak. The plans indicate that the building will be one of which not only the company but all citizens may feel proud.

One disappointing condition that has existed at the local market for months is the scarcity of poultry and the attendant exorbitant prices. For years past this has been regarded as a poultry section, but for some reason that is difficult to explain the offerings at the local market have been decidedly small for a long period. The scarcity may be explained to some extent by the fact that during the autumn many buyers go through the country and buy up practically everything available for shipment to Toronto and other large centres. Not only do they offer a market for the young fowl, but the old hens are also taken. The farmers in many instances sell off everything but the young stock on which they depend for their egg production during the winter and spring and as a result they have nothing to offer in the way of dressed poultry to the people who week after week anxiously visit the market. Only a few pairs of chickens and an occasional turkey have been displayed at the market in several weeks and the price for chickens has on one or two occasions jumped to $1.50 per pair.

The Ingersoll Board of Trade is rapidly taking rank with the most active and progressive bodies of this kind in the province. At a largely attended meeting last week the proposal to establish a Carnegie library received enthusiastic endorsation. A committee which had been making investigations submitted a report which embodied the recommendation that application through the mayor be made to Mr. Carnegie for a grant of $10,000. After considerable discussion the report was adopted.

Another matter of much importance to shippers was brought before the Board in the form of a report from a committee which had been dealing with it since the previous meeting. The committee reported having examined a copy of the draft bill of lading submitted by the railways of the Dominion to the Railway Commission. The more important recommendations made by the committee were:

"That the owners of goods should hgve the privilege of arranging for storage and insurance when the company notify the owner that they have no storage accommodation.

"In handling goods to connecting lines responsibility should not cease till receipt has been obtained for delivery.

"Time should be extended one week for making claim.

"The time for making delivery should be extended 48 hours before storage charges begin.

"Shipper should be notified before railway company receives freight, providing pressure of traffic or cars are wanting for reasonable despatch, and the company should be liable, except when proper notice is given."

The present prices of dairy cows will go a long way in explaining the high prices that are being paid for butter. Last week H. McDermott held an auction sale at which twenty-five dairy cows were sold, the average price being $54.45. The first pair of cows sold for $80 each.

H. B. Smith of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, who has been touring Western Ontario, was in the vicinity of Ingersoll last week. Asked as to how the potato crop would result this year, Mr. Smith said there would be an immense waste through rot and another affection called the "scab." Mr. Smith added, "Of course Oxford is a more loamy county, but what potatoes there are, are similarly affected." Mr. Smith strongly advised the planting of some of the newer varieties of potatoes in order to overcome the present difficulty.

Reeve M. T. Buchanan has given notice to the council that it is his intention to introduce a by-law regulating the distribution of bread, a matter in which all grocers should be vitally interested and they should use their influence to the fullest extent to have their bread supply delivered to them in the best sanitary condition possible. Mr. Buchanan is strongly of the opinion that the bread is not being delivered in a manner that is conducive to good health, and his proposed "legislation" is awaited with a great deal of interest.

Grocers, as well as housewives, know full well the necessity of house-cleaning. The bright days of early spring reveal patches of dust on the topmost shelves which are anything but pleasing to the eye; in the store-room are piles of boxes and a miscellaneous collection that should be removed, while here and there, throughout the store, attention is necessary before everything is spick and span for the summer season. In these days when the human family is beset with microbes and germs on all sides, grocers know that the neat, tidy appearance of their store counts for a great deal. If the store is inviting and the articles properly displayed there is every probability of the volume of business increasing, for the meaning of the familiar words, "cleanliness is next to Godliness," were never so fully understood as at the present time.

The house-cleaning season has opened with local merchants, who are now losing no time to put their stores in bright and attractive condition for the summer season. Stocks are being rearranged, paint and paper freely used, and everywhere throughout their stores there are indications that stamp them as being strictly up-to-date in sanitary methods. For a town of its size, Ingersoll has every reason to feel proud of its grocery stores.

To those who have listened to the interesting tales of grandfathers and grandmothers of the sugar-making days when the sap kettle was kept boiling day in and day out, there is, indeed, room for sad reflection on the scarcity of maple syrup now-a-days. In this section of Ontario the maple timber is rapidly disappearing, and instead of the thousands of trees which annually yielded up their supply of sap some 50 years ago only hundreds are now being tapped. The high prices for wood during recent years, and the desire to cultivate as much land as possible, led the farmers to reduce their "sugar bushes" to but a shadow of what they once were, and those who look forward to the maple syrup season know only too well what the result has been. Very little syrup is now made for the market by those who are fortunate in possessing the sugar bush. Not one-half the quantity of syrup offered in other years has been brought to Ingersoll this season. The supply has been so small that grocers will have to depend almost entirely upon the output of the lower provinces for what they require. All dealers are making the same complaint, that it is almost impossible to secure home-made maple syrup in large quantities. The unusual shortage this season is partially explained by the unfavorable weather conditions, but at the rate the bushes are being depleted of maple timber the situation is not likely to be improved in years to come. For some time past the local grocers have been buying rather large quantities of maple syrup from eastern manufacturers, and the indications are that the bulk of their supply this season will come from that source.

KINGSTON.

Kingston merchants are looking for increased trade now navigation is opened up and sails are being hoisted. The Str. Aletha made her first trip, calling at the different wharves on the islands and loading up with fresh eggs, butter, maple syrup, etc. News from the Brockville district notes the fact that the flow of sap this spring is exceedingly large and farmers need not buy so much Redpath, Woodside, or St. Lawrence and fool the innocent city folk. Maple syrup costs from 75c. to $1 a gal. and retails at 25c. and 30c. a quart. A lot is being shipped to the west, where all good things go, especially clerks.

A good, all round clerk is hard to get. No class of men are criticized more.

Jim, the grocer, to the knight of the grip :

"Do you know where I can get a good clerk ?"

"Well, let me see. Yes, Jim B—— is O.K., but he drinks. Bert R—— is good but he don't get around to open up till 8, losing a lot of 7 o'clock trade. Arthur K—— is a good window and store trimmer, but he is a poor salesman. He will sell to-day's goods and leave last month's on the shelf."

In a nutshell, a good clerk should be a live man ; one who thinks, thinks, thinks, thinks, and studies goods and customers. He requires to be shrewd and have good manners ; be reserved and not too familiar. Goods well displayed are half sold, but don't put goods in the window that are injured by light and sunshine, such as biscuits, cereals, etc. When you open a new box of goods, bring the old ones to the front, for stale goods are a great injury to the manufacturer's reputation. Don't get careless, if you do your trade will leave you.

The Peterborough grocers, I see by last week's issue, are suffering from cuts by the butchers and are anxious to find a remedy to meet them. It is a mean practice of the butchers and will surely fall back on them. They should keep to their own commodity. In Kingston we have a branch of the Wm. Davies Co. of Toronto. They sell tea, sugar, butter and eggs, etc., and sometimes put dodgers in the local papers offering corn 4 for 25c., etc. etc. This makes grocers handle meat and cut the price, and so trade is crippled and all suffer except the consumer.

Too bad, too bad. Organization is the remedy, not retaliation.

Travelers who cater to hotels and boarding houses and small concerns are getting the cold shoulder from legitimate retailers here and should get the same medicine all over Canada. Retailers should appreciate houses who do not sell to the riff raff trade and should hold their orders for them.

John F. Baker, traveler for Geo. Robertson & Son, is not feeling as well as his host of friends would like. There is not in all the traveling fraternity a man with more philanthropy to the square inch than John. To know him is to love him. He is straight in all his dealings and that is the kind of man the world is in need of. His many friends hope he will gain in weight and strength and regain his good looks, for he certainly resembles royalty when he is himself.

Sugar is advancing. Where will it go? If we only knew, we would soon be independent.

The usual quorum of grocers had their weekly talk on the market square and Jim used strong language. He said the grocery trade was getting on a low level when grocers jump on their delivery wagons and run after orders, getting down on their knees and pleading for trade. It reminded him of the spring organ grinder and the monkey on the string. Jim said he liked the people to come to his store and see what they were getting. Running after trade encourages credit and takes away independence from the dealer.

Mr. Cockburn, of Comfort Soap fame, paid his usual visit to our city and we were glad to see him. We like his soap. He is all right. He was a useful and prominent figure at our grocers' picnic and his genial manner in conducting the Comfort Soap race made friends for him among the gentle sort who took part in the race. Forty ladies started in that famous race. It was a picture not to be forgotten and when they finished the race they fell exhausted in the arms of the good-natured grocers who awaited their arrival. Some were longer recovering consciousness than others, but they all came to, and marched off with their aprons full of Comfort Soap, besides some getting gold, silver, and gunmetal watches.

LONDON.

Price-cutting was the chief matter discussed at the annual meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association last week, the question being threshed out in all its bearings. The net result was the appointment of a committee to interview offenders with the view of turning them from their evil ways, the committee to report at next meeting. In the meantime the committee found that with one or two exceptions, all are willing to turn over a new leaf. The cutting, as a rule, is confined to canned goods and sugar, which latter, many dealers feel in view of the recent advance in wholesale price and the prospect of the commodity going still higher, should be increased rather than reduced in price by retailers.

The meeting of the association was largely attended and exceedingly harmonious. Not a little discussion occurred on the question of continuing the Wednesday half-holiday during the coming Summer and on a vote being taken it was resolved to observe the half-holiday during June, July and August. A committee was appointed to wait on the city council and endeavor to have the peanut and push-cart men prevented from selling goods on the streets during the coming Summer. The grocers claim they have suffered greatly from the opposition created by these curbstone merchants last Summer, and they feel something should be done to put a stop to it. The meeting considered the telephone question at some length, the final decision being that the association had done all in its power to impress upon the city council that the rates at present charged by the Bell Company are too high and that it is opposed to that company being given a new franchise unless rates are lowered. The secretary was instructed to get after those grocers who have not yet secured membership in the association, and endeavor to induce them to join. The election of officers resulted: President, Harry Ranahan; first vice-president, Thomas Shaw; second vice-president, W. T. Mullins; secretary, C. Hayes; treasurer, Ed. Ryan; executive committee, J. Haskett, R. A. Ross, C. H. Lee, Thomas McCormick, G. Drake and W. E. Vandeveer.

A deputation of city bakers waited on the license committee of the city council at its last meeting and urged that no action be taken on the request that a by-law be passed making two and four-pound loaves the standard of all bread coming from bakeries. The deputation contended that ingredients were costing much more to-day than ever before and it would be simply impossible to sell a two-pound loaf for five cents. One of the aldermen maintained that bread should be sold by the pound, as in Europe, and that with the cost of wheat the price would fluctuate. The upshot was, that the committee decided to allow things to remain as they are. Curiously enough, the next morning the first raid in two or three years was made on bakers' wagons and about fifty loaves in all were seized for the benefit of local charities because they did not bear the prescribed label. When weighed many of the loaves fell short of the necessary one and a half pounds.

Fruit-growers hereabouts are likely to suffer heavily as a result of recent frosts. The premature warm weather of the latter part of March caused the canes on many bushes to send forth their tender buds, and when the frost came raspberry bushes were almost totally put out of business for this year. Thimbleberries, although suffering heavily, are injured to a much less extent. It has not yet been learned that any of the larger fruits have been seriously injured.

MONTREAL.

Since the maple goods season has come on grocers in different parts of the city have been giving considerable attention to maple syrup and maple sugar. Window displays are seen in all sections, some very attractive windows being noticeable on St. Catherine street. A. Dionne & Co. gave one entire window to maple sugar during the week.

Burglars spent an enjoyable evening in St. Catherine street retail stores recently. The gentlemen of the night commenced operations at Winch's meat market, smashing the plate glass door and stealing the few coppers which happened to be in the till, as well as several hams and sides of bacon. From Winch's the operators walked to the English Provision Company's store, a little further west. Here they gained entrance in the same manner and secured a couple of dollars in coppers and smashed the cash register. They helped themselves to pickles, selecting several lines of the real article. Their final call was made upon J. G. Cote, 887 St. Catherine street west. Here they rested after their labors, spreading out a royal feast of liquors, bread, biscuits, cooked meats and other delicacies. Cigars were smoked and then the burglars departed for their honest beds. The police were kind enough to lend their absence during the evening's entertainment, which favor was justly appreciated by the men of the mask—but not by the grocers.

Bodes Gum Company, capitalized at $20,000, has been incorporated, the following being the incorporators: H. W. Prendergast, L. Gosselin, F. W. Hibbard, H. G. Temple, J. W. Withell.

PETERBOROUGH.

The Retail Merchants' Association met in the Y.M.C.A. parlors lost Thursday night for the purpose of discussing a couple of by-laws recently passed by the city council. There was a large number of merchants, including several grocers, present, and a keen interest in the discussion was displayed.

The sign by-law, passed some time ago, was the first to come up. This by-law prohibits any sign overhanging the street whatever, except illuminated signs. The owners of these are compelled to take out a license, which costs $2 per year. The sign is erected and examined under the supervision of the city engineer. The merchants were unanimous in condemning this act of the council as unfair, unreasonable and uncalled for.

One of the grocers present pointed out that nearly all the illuminated signs used in the city were in front of hotels, cigar stores, pool rooms and other such places, and he thought it was high time for the retail merchants to call a halt. He, for one, did not propose to be legislated against for the benefit of a few other business places.

The box by-law met a similar fate. This act prevents the merchants receiving any goods through the front door of their store after twelve o'clock on all days except Saturday, and on Saturday no goods at all can be taken in. In many cases the stores have no back entrance, and in others the back door is very hard to reach, especially in winter. The result is that the merchants are very often put to great inconvenience.

In the opinion of many, the present state of affairs will add greatly to the interest taken in organization. If the merchants stood together no such by-law could be passed. The opposition would be so strong that the aldermen and mayor would think a long time before acting.

A committee of about twelve merchants was appointed, and they waited on the city council at a meeting on Monday night. They presented their views to the council and the box by-law will be amended according to their request. But the sign by-law stands. That means that every sign in the city not illuminated, and which projects from the building, must come down. This will affect about 200 or 250 stores, offices and other places of business. The retail merchants put up a strong fight in both cases, and would have had the sign by-law repealed had it not been for the fact that it was passed about 25 years ago, but had not been enforced until this year.

A couple of the members of the Retail Merchants' Association have hit upon the idea of holding a retail merchants' banquet in the near future. The scheme is to get a large majority of the merchants together and then have one or two outside speakers present to give a talk on organization and some of the leading topics of interest to the trade generally. So far, the suggestion has met with favor wherever mentioned, and if those at the head of it proceed with their scheme it will undoubtedly prove a big success.

The annual meeting of the board of trade was held last week, when Dr. M. A. Morrison was elected president to succeed D. Hughes-Charles, who had acted in that capacity for four years. There was a large attendance and considerable interest was displayed. The board is in a good condition, and it is fully expected that it will prosper greatly during the next year. The officers elected were as follows:

President, Dr. M. A. Morrison; vice-president, Geo. A. Gillespie; treasurer, W. H. Bradburn, secreaary; T. Quartermaine. A nominating committee was appointed to select members for the council to represent the different lines of trade.

The new vice-president, Geo. A. Gillespie, is a young man, and a better man for the position could not be found. He is a member of the grocery firm of White & Gillespie, and is a very large cheese buyer. He represents the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association on the committee which is arranging for the big dairymen's exhibition, and he is one of the most active and progressive men in the city. He is known and is very popular in the city and through the whole district, and he will be of great value to the board of trade.

Harry Bradshaw, who has become well known to the Peterborough public through his connection with G. A. Oke, fruit and fish merchant, has purchased the grocery business of A. M. Harmar, and took possession on Monday. The stand is a good one, being located in a thickly-populated part of the city. Mr. Bradshaw will carry a full stock of fruits and vegetables as well as groceries, and there is no reason why he should not be very successful.

W. H. Wrighton, who has conducted a grocery business on Peterborough's main thoroughfare for over fifty years, has decided to retire from active life in July. He is now offering his business for sale.

Last month Mr. Wrighton celebrated his golden jubilee in business life, and he holds the unique record of being in one line longer than any other man in the city.

He first embarked in the grocery trade in March, 1857, in the old American Hotel block, which stood at the corner of Brock and George streets in those days.

About thirty years ago Mr. Wrighton removed to his present stand. He is now in his 75th year, and feels that he has earned a well-deserved rest. Mr. Wrighton has for many years bought and sold furs, and has been a prominent figure on the Peterborough Cheese Board. He bought for Ayer & Co., of Montreal, and other firms, retiring a few years ago. His premises, which belong to Mrs. Edgecumbe Pearse, of Rubidge street, will, after he vacates them in July next, be leased by a new tenant. The store front will also be improved.

Mr. Wrighton can recall with interest many incidents of business life in the early history of Peterborough, and there are none who are in the same business to-day as they were when he first started out in 1857.

Mr. Wrighton's many friends trust that he may have a quiet sunset to his active busy life, and that he may live many years to enjoy a well-earned rest.

The demand for canned goods this year is very good. All the merchants report quite as large, and some report a little larger, sales than usual. The price, of course, has a good deal to do with this. When the cost to the retailer was raised it was not increased in proportion to the consumer. Corn, peas, beans and pumpkins sell at 10c. and three for 25c., there being two grades. Tomatoes sell at 10c. and 12½c. The merchants, therefore, are not making a fortune out of it, as they are pay- $1.17 per dozen. On the whole, the consumption of canned goods in the city is much larger than in previous years owing to the substantial gain in population. But had the price not been kept down the demand would certainly have fallen off. As it is, a few merchants put the price up to 12½ cents on the corn, tomatoes and peas, and their trade in these lines decreased.

ST. CATHARINES.

The enterprising firm of McLaren & Co., operating the most extensive departmental store in the Niagara district, have let the contract to paint and otherwise improve the interior of their extensive establishment on St. Paul and Ontario streets.

The nursery firms of A. G. Hull & Son and Reid & Bunting have gangs of men employed arranging and preparing for spring shipments of fruit and ornamental trees and small fruits and ornamentals.

Owing to the cold weather that prevailed during all of last week, when ice was formed, great fears were entertained that the buds of fruit trees would be injured, but upon investigation it is found that the buds have not advanced far enough to receive injury.

The International Hotel, owned and managed by William Gordis, has been receiving a coat of paint in the interior, and other improvements have been made to this popular hostelry.

Michael Hannon, formerly of Thorold, has purchased the New American Hotel on James street from Delos Spence and will take possession at the beginning of the fiscal license year. The price paid is said to be $8,000. Slough & Bush, the present tenants, have brought the hotel into prominence as a home for travelers, and having spacious grounds it is the favorite stopping place for farmers to locate their horses and conveyances.

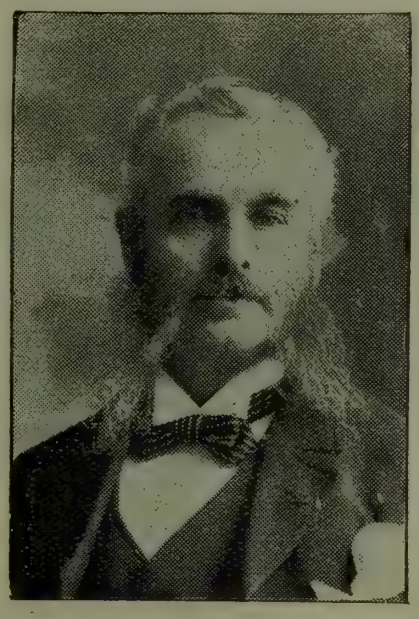
Stewart Nelson, for some years past an efficient employe in the wholesale liquor store of Dennis C. McGuire, in this city, has purchased the Union Hotel and business of Mrs. Willis at Merritton. Mr. Nelson is well and favorably known in this section of the country.

Late inspections of the peach trees in and near St. Catharines show that the fruit buds are mostly killed. Though frosts were not so severe as in some other winters, the trees had become weakened by the San Jose scale and did not have the strength to ward off destruction by the cold weather.

Speaking of dressing store windows, there is scarcely any city where this art is carried out to the same extent as in St. Catharines. The merchants take pride in making a good display in their shop windows, and a number of firms employ experts to carry out the designs. There are not many dry goods establishments but they all carry extensive stocks, and two of them, the McLaren Company, and the J. D. Tait Company, each have buyers who visit the European and best American markets twice a year to make their selections. The grocers are not behind the dry goods merchants to see that a showy window display attracts customers. Even those which are small concerns vie with their bigger neighbor to make a good display of the goods they carry. A few of the grocers deal in early American vegetables, etc., from the south, and they let the people know of their arrival by a display and advertisements in the local newspapers. The principal retail grocers are Joseph Voisaid, M. McGuire & Company, Garner Brothers, A. Welch & Son, J. Festing, Frank Wilson, E. Gander, D. Weir, Bradley & Son, J. T. Timmons, Sherwood & Son, James Lee, Charles M. Gibson, alderman; D. L. Cruikshank, R. Watson, Becker & Co., John Beal, J. and G McLean, A. Foster & Co., M. Kane, M. Sennett, M. Tinlin, M. Cameron, in addition to a large number of smaller concerns. As there are two enterprising wholesale firms of grocers, W. H. Merriman and Ross, Parnell & Atkinson, who have travelers who call on the retail trade frequently to secure orders, and as the telephone is extensively used here, the depleted stock can be readily replenished.

There is a good field for a grocers' union, as there are so many persons in the trade. There was a healthy Retail Grocers' Association at one time, but disaffection crept in; they did not have sufficient confidence with each other; some broke the rules and cut prices and the association soon ceased to exist and now each one arranges his methods as best suits himself.

There is a Retail Merchants' Association still in existence, but the members meet only about once in the year, and that is mainly to look after the municipal assessment rolls. All persons engaged in the retail trade, who are governed by rules and regulations laid down by the provincial association, are eligible for membership. The president of the local association is Mr. James N. Walker, druggist and ex-alderman; the secretary being Mr. George Bradley, grocer. There is a wide field of usefulness for an association of this nature if it be properly managed, as there is such a rich agricultural and fruit-raising territory around this city.



E. K. BARNSDALE, STRATFORD

President Retail Merchants' Association who is Retiring from active Management of his Business.

STRATFORD.

Stratford's live Retail Merchants' Association will meet again this week and many important questions will come up for consideration, including the auto-delivery system, early closing by-law, etc. The association is doing splendid work in this city. E. K. Barnsdale, the president, is a live business man. He has built up a large grocery business which is known as the "Hub." The firm does a very extensive trade in all lines of groceries. Mr. Barnsdale is an ex-alderman of the city. C. N. Greenwood, the vice-president of the association, is a member of the undertaking firm of Greenwood & Vivian. The secretary, E. A. Rea, conducts a good drug store in the city, and the treasurer, R. S. Jones, is a progressive groceryman. It will be seen that the association is representative of the different lines of business.

The Retail Merchants' Association has its different sections. The officers in the grocery section are: R. S. Jones, president, and E. O'Flaherty, secretary.

The association has a splendid collecting department and the secretary of this department, J.S.Smith, is doing excellent work gathering in old accounts. A black list of all "bad pays" is kept by the retailers and is carefully looked after. It is proving a splendid help to the members.

Messrs. McCully & Hough recently purchased the grocery business of Ald. C McIlhargy.

The week-end market was a large one, but prices did not differ from those of the week before, except eggs. This product was very plentiful and sold at 15c., 16c. and 17c. per dozen. This low price is the same as that asked by the grocers. Maple syrup is plentiful on the market.

A change is taking place in the management of one of the leading retail establishments of the city, the Barnsdale Trading Co. E. K. Barnsdale retires from active management of the company and the store will henceforth be under the management of H. C. Wilson and B. Williamson, two young men who have been in the employ of the company for years. Mr. Barnsdale will retain the presidency of the company and the position of foreign buyer and adviser. A. C. Barnsdale will be secretary-treasurer and the business will be continued on the same basis. This change will relieve E. K. Barnsdale, who is now overtaxed with the detail of management, and he will have more time to devote to other outside interests that have been a great financial benefit to the company.

Mr. Barnsdale, who is a live grocery man and president of the Retail Merchants' Association, has been in business in this city for 35 years. During that period he has never had to resort to the division court for collecting any of his accounts. Mr. Barnsdale always felt that every customer that traded with him was honest, and he endeavored to run his business on honest principles, always being sincere in saying "Yes" or "No" on all business transactions.

At the regular meeting of the Trades and Labor Council, held Friday evening, the members decided to urge upon all merchants the necessity of using the union label.

TORONTO.

S. J. Clark, who has been in charge of the fruit and vegetable business of Swan Bros., and connected with that firm for over a dozen years, has had to quit work altogether on account of his health. He had a bad attack of pneumonia two years ago and did not take sufficient care of himself in the convalescent stage, with the result that he is now trying the open-air cure on his ten or fifteen acre farm to the northeast of the city. Mr. Clark has the largest, and probably the finest, kennel of cocker spaniels in America, and carried off most of the prizes awarded for this breed at the last New York dog show. Some time ago he bought up George Gooderham's kennels, and will devote most of his time to the development and improvement of the breed. We are far from being blind to the possibilities afforded the budding humorist in the last statement, but we prefer the higher credit for having omitted to remark that Mr. Clark is indeed "going to the dogs!"

In extinguishing a small fire which started in one of the rooms of the second storey, R. E. Stroud, who has a corner grocery on Yonge street, had his stock slightly damaged by water.

VICTORIA, B.C.

Business in all lines is very brisk this season; all merchants report sales very heavy and feel decidedly optimistic about the future of Victoria.

Real estate offices have sprung up like mushrooms during the last few months; business in that line being very active. Some large turn-overs have been reported. This activity is due to numerous strangers thronging in here, and seeking homes in this delightful climate. They are a splendid class of people and a decided acquisition to the community. The bringing of these people here must be attributed almost entirely to the efforts of the Victoria Tourist Association, which is a splendid organization and has done much for the city, and all Victoria merchants readily acknowledge that the gradual increase in business is due to the steady influx of people into the city and surrounding districts.

In connection with the "Tourist Association," there is a free exhibition room, which is used exclusively for the display of goods manufactured in Victoria. This is a large hall, well lighted, and spaces are rented to local dealers and manufacturers, who make very attractive displays of their productions, and the public are very cordially invited to inspect the same.

The Government is taking vigorous methods to clear the country of fruit pests. Inspectors are traveling the country and compelling the owners of fruit trees to either spray them or cut them down, thus doing away with a lot of old and useless trees and orchards that are veritable breeding places for fruit pests.

This action has added another article for the grocer to handle, which is a mixture for killing fruit pests and is known as "tree spray." It is put on the market in a concentrated form, in quart, half-gallon and one-gallon tins, which retail for 35c., 50c. and $1 respectively. Grocers find a ready sale for this article, as most people find it very convenient in this form. The "spray" is manufactured in Victoria by the British Columbia Soap Works.

"Have you any Seville oranges?" is a question which all Victoria grocers have been asked many times of late, and the answer is invariably "No, am very sorry, but we cannot procure them." This has been the state of affairs for many years here, and undoubtedly all Victoria grocers would be greatly interested if any one could show them how they could procure these famous marmalade oranges, at a reasonable price. Would it not be to the interest of some of the eastern merchants to look into this matter?

A petition has been circulated among the grocers of the city asking for a half-holiday every Wednesday during the summer months. The petition met with very little opposition, and it is thought that the holiday will come in vogue a little later on. The system was introduced last summer, and the holiday was immensely enjoyed by both employe and employer.

Australian butter has been selling very readily at 31c. a pound, but the supply is almost exhausted and the price has advanced to 34c. wholesale.

Local creamery is still holding at 35c. for one pound bricks.

Fresh eggs have advanced to 30c. per dozen retail, but now that Easter is over a decline is looked for. Vancouver readily takes any surplus and this demand keeps the market steady. This also applies to hot house lettuce, cucumbers and rhubarb.

Oranges have advanced in price and are very scarce, particularly small sizes. The wash-outs in California are the main cause of the shortage. The present prices are: Navels, $3.50 to $4 per box; seedlings, $3 to $3.75 per box.

A plentiful supply of coal oil is on hand once more. This is a great relief to everyone, after a shortage which lasted over three weeks.

WRAPPING ORANGES BY MACHINE

The latest automatic device to do away with hand labor is a machine which wraps oranges. According to reports, the tissue paper runs off a roll as big as a barrel, is cut, printed, graded, held to receive the orange which drops into it and finally twisted up and laid in the box for shipment. But California interests don't find that the machine has an automobile attachment which will bring the oranges to the market when the railroads fail to furnish cars.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

A fully-stocked shop of the value of $2,500 is the prize that is being offered grocers' clerks in connection with the technical education scheme promoted by the National Association of Grocers' Assistants, in Great Britain, who are urging the various educational authorities throughout England to arrange special courses of instruction for those employed in the grocery and provision trades. During the Winter these classes will be held at different centres. An examination of the students at the various classes is being arranged to be held in London early in 1908, when a first prize of $2,500 will be awarded to the assistant who displays the most expert knowledge of his trade. The winner may choose his shop in any locality, and will be given six months to decide where he will start in business.

McEwan Bros., Goderich, came near having a fire last week. There was a blaze in the chimney which brought out the fire brigade and collected a crowd, but no damage was done.

BOOST THE RETAILERS' CONVENTION

To the Editor of The Canadian Grocer.

In your issue of April 5th you have an editorial on "Organization," and state that your advocacy of a national association is not a passing fancy, and that you intend to keep at it till something is done.

As a grocer interested in the welfare of the grocery trade, may I ask what is it you are striving for in the way of organization that is not fully met in the Retail Merchants' Association? Why be like Don Quixote, tilting at windmills, when you might be doing splendid service in backing up and supporting an organization that from the record of good work accomplished in the interests of all retailers should deserve the hearty support of every trade paper, and which needs the helping hand of such an influential journal as The Canadian Grocer? Your quotations from the pen of John G. Green, secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the U. S., confirms and proves the absolute necessity for the co-operation of all retail interests, in order to accomplish the best results, and in what better way can this be brought about than by an organization combining all classes of retailers united under one common banner?

The annual meeting of the Ontario Provincial Board of the Retail Merchants' Association is to be held in the City of Hamilton on July 3rd and 4th, and in connection therewith there will be a meeting of the Grocers' Provincial Committee to discuss matters directly affecting the grocery trade. Why not use this opportunity? Arouse the interests of the grocers and have them there in large numbers.

F. C. HIGGINS.

ORGANIZATION.

F. C. Higgins, whose letter appears on page 32, urging that the retail grocery trade accept the grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association as their organization, is a leading spirit in the Retail Merchants' Association, and a very active and progressive merchant, conducting one of the best grocery stores in Toronto. We are very pleased to have his letter and publish it, but it does not convince us that the grocers should not have an independent, self-contained organization of their own.

If the principal objects of grocery organization were the principal objects of the Retail Merchants' Association; if the problems of the foodstuff trade were the problems of all retailers; then there could be no question but that Mr. Higgins is right. Is he? In the conduct of their business do the same difficulties and problems confront grocer, hardwareman, drygoodsman, druggist, jeweler, bookseller, house furnisher and merchant tailor? Are the results to be attained by the organization the same for all of these branches of retailing? Mr. Higgins will say: "No, we quite agree that they are not, and we have our various trade sections, each dealing with its own affairs."

Now, let us ask, which is the more important, the Retail Merchants' Association or the grocery section of that organization? If the horse is to be before the cart, the association must take precedence of a section, and naturally its work and objects bulk larger than those of the subsidiary organization. This is where we have to disagree. The Retail Merchants' Association is concerned largely with legislation and the collection and prevention of bad debts. These are important matters, but, in our opinion, they are small compared with the issues that would confront a strong national retail grocers' association. Probably the question of pure foods, in which the grocers of the United States have taken so active a part, would come first. Then there is the betterment to be wrought by organization over the whole ground of food stuff retailing.

For the grocer, the grocer's organization is more important than the organization of all retailers. The trade cannot be roused to take the interest in a branch association it would in an association of its own.

Mr. Higgins quotes Secretary Green, of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States, who has given years to building up a strong retail grocers' organization, and then says: "Let us co-operate with all retail organizations to secure legislation common to all."

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND RIGHT.

In the eyes of the Province of Prince Edward Island, this Dominion is dishonored. That province came into the confederation on the understanding that uninterrupted means of communication be established between it and the mainland. This has not been done. For weeks almost every year the island is isolated and its trade suffers severely, to say nothing of the general inconvenience. The province is more than justified in its present agitation for a tunnel, and the Government at Ottawa should go into the matter seriously and either demonstrate that the undertaking is unfeasible or unjustifiable, or go on with it.

If the island were a stronger voting power at Ottawa its indignation would probably cut more ice, and at this distance it looks to us as if the Garden of the Gulf should throw its influence in favor of a union of the three Maritime Provinces to create thereby a province as influential as any in the confederation.

BUNCO AGENT.

Success has its annoyances no less aggravating than failure. This has been brought home to us by an individual passing under the name of Raymond—but a thief by any other name might cheat as well. He has been dodging about Ontario for some time past, taking subscriptions for The Canadian Grocer and diverting the entire proceeds to his personal profit. It's easy enough to ask "Why don't you catch him?" but he has the habit of turning up in most unexpected places like a flea and hopping off again before we can get the heavy hand of the law upon him. Besides being a thief he's a mean thief. He may need the money and that might be offered as an excuse for collecting it, but what rhyme or reason is there in collecting half-tone engravings of a man's place of business, ostensibly for a "write-up," in The Grocer, only to chuck them into the first vacant lot he came to? Look out for him, and should he happen along give him reason to think the way of retribution is both hard and leathery.

TRAFFIC TROUBLES.

What the freight congestion is costing Canada no one can estimate. If it does not check the present industrial development and commercial prosperity we may be thankful. The west, from the nature of things, is worst off, but trade in the east is hampered in a way that is very harmful to business. A Toronto wholesale grocery house shipped a car of goods to Blind River, on the north shore of the Georgian Bay and it was twenty-four days on the way. Three days would have been a long time. Another house shipped a car to Calgary on Jan. 5, and it arrived on April 6. A Montreal firm shipped a car of sugar to Oshawa on March 25. It did not arrive and tracers were sent out. It was reported to have reached Belleville on March 28. Then four different conductors reported the car empty. The sugar was found in another car in Midland and it finally reached Oshawa this week. For a week prior to Wednesday the Grand Trunk has been refusing cars altogether and the C.P.R. has been furnishing only a quarter of requirements. Freight offering is increasing instead of diminishing and when the railways will catch up it is hard to imagine. The opening of lake navigation will relieve the traffic between east and west. The situation is such that the Government should be taking a much more active part in solving the problem and in preventing the recurrence of the difficulty.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Fish—Revised.
Sugar—Advanced 10c.

Montreal, April 18, 1907.

A period of quiet seems to have settled down over the trade, a sort of preliminary to the opening of navigation. Business is reported by most houses as being quite on the dull side. Orders are few and small. Grocers, particularly those on the route of the boats, are awaiting the opening of navigation before ordering goods to replenish depleted stocks. Freight rates will then be lower.

Sugar has been advanced ten cents since last report. There is not much business being transacted in this line since the change went into effect. Molasses is still quoted at the old figures. It is moving but slowly. Canned goods are going into consumption slowly but surely. Stocks are gradually ebbing away. In teas prices continue firm with little chance of lower figures being witnessed. Currants are slightly easier, while raisins are quiet. Evaporated apples are still quoted at 10c., but there is very little business being transacted. Coffees and spices are unchanged.

SUGAR—Sugar advanced ten cents all along the line the end of last week. Business at the higher figures is not very brisk. The market at present is about steady.

TEA—Very fair amount of business is being done in teas. Some are waiting with interest to see what will be done this year regarding the duty on tea in England. Last year it was reduced, and it is possible that there may be a reduction in July this year. Should there be, it is possible that prices here will change somewhat, as under the lower duty there would be a greater demand for the better grades of tea in England, which would be obtainable for the same price as the cheaper, resulting in the receipts on this market of many low-grade teas. It is likely that present high prices will hold for some time unless such a change in duty takes place.

In currants, statistically, the position is the same as last week, but the market, locally and abroad, is easier in tone, owing, no doubt, to the lack of spot business. Figs, which have been so low all along, are selling at reduced figures. Dates appear to be in fair demand. Holders are offering freely. Nuts are unchanged.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Several facts have made necessary the advance in rice prices. The famine in China, and the increased demand on the part of that country and Japan have been the means of advancing the prices in Burma, where our supplies come from. Since the importers are forced to pay higher figures, it is but natural that the trade should be asked more as well. It is said that the consumption of rice in Japan is increasing wonderfully. At the present time the demand is much above the production. Tapioca is without change.

NEW CANNING FACTORY.

Tenders have been awarded for an immense canning factory to be erected this spring at Weston, at a cost of about $20,000. The plant will be one of the largest in Canada, and will be devoted to the preservation of fruit and vegetables. It will give employment to about 200 hands.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Jobbers report a very good demand for various lines of canned goods. A great many grocers are awaiting the opening of navigation before replenishing their stocks for the spring trade.

TORONTO—This time last year there was a good deal of speculative buying of tomatoes. Some of the goods bought then are going over retail counters today. Jobbers are practically unanimous in reputing that sales for consumption are quite equal to last year. Some say the demand from the north is greater. The Canadian canners express the view that there will be a scarcity of tomatoes by August, and they have offered to take back the stock at the price they got for it last year. The bulk of the jobbing trade are not, however, very bullish in regard to tomatoes. Peas are said to be none too plentiful, and beans are in a very strong position. Corn is plentiful. Many fruits are already quite cleaned up and all lines are strongly held.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Pointers:

Sugar—Very firm at the advance.

Lemons—Steadily advancing.

Pines—Easier.

Provisions—Lower.

Toronto, April 18th, 1907.

Sugar was the feature of the grocery trade this week. The advance stimulated buying, and as the firmness continues there was no apparent need for resitation. Canned goods continue to leave jobbers' hands at a rate that leads to the comment that the trade is very satisfactory. The railways on Tuesday began to receive lake and rail shipments for northern Ontario and the west; and the north, so the reports go, is experiencing a spring appetite of fine dimensions. A very lively trade with that section of the province is anticipated. Freight congestion is still hampering business and no one can say when things will move freely again. Valencia raisins are in good demand and stocks here are limited.

Trade, as a whole, is quiet, but improving. It is better this week than last, but there is no rush. The very bad state of the rural highways is causing some tightness of money. At any rate collections are reported by some a little slow, and the roads are in such a state that they might well be blamed for anything.

TEA.—The demand for tea, stimulated by the firm and advancing markets that have continued for months, is not diminishing. A report from London states that lower priced teas have again advanced. The average of the public sales' prices for the month of March in London were: Indians, 9¼d.; Ceylons, 8½d.; against last year's prices, Indians, 7⅛r.; Ceylons, 7d. The British budget is expected to be delivered this week. Pending that event the London market is quiet.

COFFEE.—The situation abroad is unchanged and the market is quiet. Locally, a fair trade is passing at unchanged prices.

SUGAR.—The expected rise in refined came Thursday of last week after we had gone to press. It considerably stimulated buying, and sugar has been the feature of the grocery trade this week.

The market continues very firm. Cuba is the determining factor. European beet was quoted on the day of the advance at 9s.2¾d.; it had risen to 9s.4d. by Monday and was still going up. Willetto & Gray, New York, at the close of last week, said of raws:

"The notable features of the week come from Cuba, which now absorbs all attention both at home and abroad. As a result of a discontinuance of work by 18 centrals, and a large reduction in receipts at shipping ports, the European markets advanced 1½d. over night and maintained the advance at the close at 9s.3d. for beet sugar, equal to 3.93c. per lb. for centrifugals.

"An active demand also set in here for Cuba sugars, and all available parcels were quickly absorbed by refiners for both immediate and future delivery.

"In view of the large stock of sugar now in Cuban ports it is not to be expected that any sudden or important advance will follow at once, but a good healthy, steady and firm market, with gradual advancing tendency, can be confidently looked for.

"The American beet sugar industry will be the largest benefactor by an advancing sugar market throughout the world as it will receive the full benefit of the rise in raw sugar as well as in refined.

"In London the market is quiet and steady, operators being disposed to await the bringing in of the Budget on the 18th inst., when it will be known whether any change is to be made in the British tariff.

"According to the latest advices it is generally expected that the European beet sowings will show an average increase of 5 per cent. over those of last year, which would be moderate."

Of the Cuban situation, Willett & Gray said:

"The crop accumulation reached its height and began the descending scale in weekly production during the week under review.

"The reduction of 18 centrals at work and 21,000 tons in receipts was not unexpelted by us, as our information for some time has pointed to a sharp change in conditions during this month.

"We expect to see the crop returns grow materially smaller each week until the end of the campaign. At just what rate of decrease this will prove to be is impossible to say or forecast, hence we will keep to our crop estimate of 1,250,000 tons minimum until such time as the visible crop approaches this amount; after which we will add the weekly receipts if the visible exceeds our estimate.

"The present visible is 1,065,000 tons, requiring 185,000 tons more to complete a crop of 1,250,000 tons.

"Much depends upon the time when the general rains set in and put an end to grinding. The season thus far has been so abnormally dry that an unusually early rainy season would not be surprising."

"Messrs. Guma & Mejer cable to-day their estimate of the Cuba crop as 1,350,000 tons."

IN GLASS HOUSES.

From The Kingsion Whig.

To the editor: We often hear our retail merchants kicking vigorously when Kingston people go to Toronto and Montreal to buy. I fear, however, that their kick is out of place, when members of their own families buy hats and dress goods in Toronto. The retail merchants' association might give a heart-to-heart talk to their erring brethren.—LOYAL CITIZEN.

Bert Potts, of E. Potts & Son, Woodstock, was in Toronto a couple of days last week.

Major John Sloan, of John Sloan & Co., Toronto, started Wednesday with his wife and daughter on a holiday trip to the Old Country. They will sail from New York, land at London, and, after a time in England, will go to Ireland, the jovial major's native land. They will sail for home on June 13th.

RETAIL GROCERS' VIEWS OF CANNED GOODS CONSUMPTION

(By Canadian Grocer Special Correspondents.)

A recent editorial in this paper propounded the question, "Do high prices check consumption," wherein special reference was made to canned tomatoes. The response was immediate, and one of the replies was published in a recent issue. The general interest which has been manifested in the discussion has induced us to print the following opinions from our own special correspondents in the various towns:

MONTREAL.

High prices have affected the canned goods trade in Montreal. Grocers find that they cannot do business when they are forced, for their own protection, to put up the prices, as in the case of tomatoes, to 12 cents, when for years the ruling figure asked the public was 10 cents. At this price the business was always found to be a paying one. The general impression appears to be that once a figure over 10 cents is reached it is time to buy something other than canned vegetables for dinner.

Tomatoes, which usually sell so well, this year are not being sold in nearly the usual large quantities. One grocer said that he was able to sell three times as many cans of tomatoes at 10 cents as he could at 12 cents, which he is now asking.

One reason why retailers object strongly to the higher prices asked this season is that they can no longer retail their canned goods three tins for a quarter. Now, where formerly a customer would purchase three tins, only one is bought. The grocers are sore on this matter.

Sufficient stocks are held by most grocers to carry them through to the new pack. Any shortage anticipated will be in tomatoes.

Corn sells in large quantities. Some grocers are selling as much corn this year as they did tomatoes last season. Beans are in good demand. Peas are also selling very well, about the same quantities being disposed of as for the same period last year.

There was one retailer to whom The Grocer spoke who had exceptional facilities for buying. He said that his sales of all lines had doubled within a year. Sales of tomatoes, corn and peas had increased particularly. He said that he thought the reason for the increased sale of peas with him lay in the fact that last year he was able to sell this line at a very low price and the canned peas were introduced into many homes where they were formerly unknown, the result being that a taste was cultivated for them and now they are bought regularly at the usual prices.

Canned fruits enjoy an average sale. Strawberries are very short. Some retailers report having had the opportunity of returning the goods to their jobbers at higher prices than they paid for them. They thought it better to hold on to their stocks, however, and they are justified in so doing.

Canned meats are reported very slow since the exposure last year. An uptown grocer reported his sales as having fallen off fully 75 per cent. Another found canned meats a dead line. This prejudice will doubtless wear away, however, as it has been demonstrated that the Canadian packers of canned meats operate factories which are models of cleanliness.

Imported specialties are selling in about the same quantities as last year.

TORONTO.

In large cities like Toronto or Montreal where there is more room for difference of opinion than in the smaller towns, one does not expect to find the dealers unanimous in their opinion one way or the other, and yet in Montreal investigation showed that the general feeling among the retailers was almost universally that of depression in canned goods consumption, with special reference to tomatoes. The Toronto retailers do not altogether follow this view of the situation. Several of those to whom the question was put were quite positive in their assertions that so far from the demand lessening, their books showed an increased sale over last year, and they were seriously contemplating the necessity of laying in a further stock before the new pack was ready for the market. The large dealers are not affected much either way, the majority of their customers being of the class who are quite ready to pay two or three cents more without asking any questions. "In fact," said one prominent retailer, "I doubt if two-thirds of my customers know to within a few cents just what they are paying for canned goods." A good deal of grumbling is heard against the big department stores on the score of under-selling the retailers' market. Buying, as they do, direct from the manufacturers, these stores are able to continue last year's prices of 10 cents each or three for 25c. on all canned goods, including tomatoes, and clear as large a profit as the retailer, owing to the increased trade which the reduction attracts. Some of the smaller retailers declare that this is taking the bread out of their mouths, but the majority of these complaints emanate from the chronic grumblers, who would not be satisfied if peas, corn and tomatoes enjoyed a ready consumption at 15 cents straight.

GUELPH.

Regarding your question as to whether the sales of canned goods have decreased or increased this year, I would say that after interviewing the different grocers, the general opinion seems to be that the sale has not been as good as usual.

One of the busiest grocers said to me that he thought the revelations of "The Jungle" in Chicago had not hurt the Canadian canners' business at all. He said that his business in canned goods seemed to be rather increased, and that he would be run out before his usual time. Others thought that the sales had not been quite so good, expecially in tomatoes, on account of the higher price.

Another dealer said that the sale of his finer line of canned vegetables and meats was dead, but on account of pushing cheaper lines, such as four tins of peas for 25c., three tins of corn for 25c., and one tin of corn, one of peas and one of tomatoes for the same price, he was doing a larger business than formerly. There is no doubt that the unpleasant taste left in the mouth by the reading of "The Jungle" has caused many intelligent, thinking people to limit their use of canned goods, but I think it is up to the grocers and canners to educate the public that the Canadian goods are clean, pure and analyzed first quality every time. If The Grocer would publish an article describing one of our best canneries, their methods and plant, I for one, would undertake to have it published in our local papers either as an advertisement or as reading matter, and if the grocers in other cities would do the same, it would materially help the sale of our Canadian canned goods.

The public have a short memory and already they are forgetting the horrible story of Chicago and for a salesman to say that the goods are Canadian made is, or ought to be, sufficient to insure a sale any time.

CHATHAM.

Retail dealers as a whole state that, though it is a little early in the season to speak definitely, the demand for canned goods promises to fairly equal, and possibly exceed, that of last year. A good trade is already being done in peas and corn, for which there is a liberal demand. Tomatoes are not selling quite so well, the high prices seeming to have a rather deterrent effect.

LONDON.

So far as your correspondent can learn from conversation with local retail grocers, the demand for canned goods this season in London is at least equal to that of a year ago. Before certain dealers began a few weeks ago to cut prices on what are regarded as the lower grades of goods, business in these lines was somewhat quiet, but since the cutting commenced, housekeepers have discovered that there is not much difference in canned goods after all, and there has been a very brisk demand for the cheapest kinds. The regular prices have been: Tomatoes 2 cans for 25c.; corn, 10c. per can, and peas, 3 for 25c. Now all but the so-called higher grades are selling: 10c. per can for tomatoes,; corn, 3 for 25c., and peas, four for 25c. "And," remarked one dealer, "I can sell at these figures and not lose money either. It all depends on how you buy," he added knowingly.

INGERSOLL.

Enquiries among the grocers elicited the information that canned goods were moving rather slowly, compared with former years. This is particularly true of tomatoes. The falling off in the demand for tomatoes is explained by the fact that the crop in this section last year was probably the most plentiful ever known, and housewives, as a rule, seized upon the opportunity to increase their supply. Another factor in a measure responsible for the slow trade in Sugar continues to climb upwards, another rise of 10 cents being noted this week. Values are steady in most lines of general groceries and a number of small advances are noted. Bakers' cocoa and German sweet chocolates have advanced 1 cent per lb. and there is a steady upward movement in nearly all lines of foreign dried fruits.

Business is very active in spite of the continued tie-up on the Canadian Northern lines, but money is reported "tight" because of the unsatisfactory transportation conditions.

CANNED GOODS—There is a steady movement of staple lines at unchanged prices. We quote:

PAN-DRIED OATS AND THEIR MAKERS

It is to a German by the name of Ferdinand Schumaker that we are primarily indebted for our morning dish of porridge; but Ferdinand is out of date, and, if we could taste the porridge that he turned out so many years ago it is probable that we should discard it for something more appetizing to the modern palate. But though Schumaker is but a memory, his original idea has expanded and materialized and been improved upon until to-day the man who does not make breakfast food a regular part of his morning meal is a rara avis, and probably an unhealthy one at that. As to the form that our breakfast food takes, that need not be a matter for much controversy, for anybody who has once tried the famous pan-dried oats (and who has not?) can seldom be induced to experiment with other brands. The story of a success is always of interest, and a few particulars of the methods by which this product has reached its present popularity may not be out of place.

Tillson's Pan-Dried Oats are manufactured at Tillsonburg and the town is indebted to George Tillson, its founder, for its present name. To his son, E. D. Tillson, it was indebted also for its first mill, a sawmill, which, being afterwards remodelled as a grist mill, was the foundation of the present plant. Six years ago the mills were formed into a joint stock company, with the management in the hands of G. W. and E. V. Tillson. The exact method of pan-drying by which such excellent results are obtained is a secret which the company have steadily refused to divulge, but a visitor to their factory comes away with the impression of system, cleanliness and modern methods of handling, the equal of which would be hard to find.

"Pan-dried" is simply the difference between properly and improperly dried oats. An unpleasant flavor was often given to the oatmeal by the smoke and fumes which were let in by the old-fashioned square kiln with perforated bottom. In the Tillson method the oats are given a pure coke and coal heat and no smoke is allowed through. Before the oats are rolled they are put through hexagon reels, sieves, double cylinders, cockle machines, smutters and other processes calculated to rid them of every speck of dirt and rubbish. Pandrying and absolute cleanliness are the two things which make for perfection in Tillson oats, and the company is justly proud of the immense success which they have built up by their rigid adherence to them.

The Tillson Company have had their reverses to face and their difficulties to overcome. Theirs is not a success gained either by chance or influence. The reverses were met and the difficulties surmounted with the same spirit of indomitable energy and courage that has always characterized them and they stand to-day an example of industry, progressiveness and hard work that may be safely followed by their younger competitors.

The Tillson Company have made it a rule to put nothing in the way of encouraging any sort of sport that finds favor among its employes, and home-and-home hockey matches are played regularly during the winter. There is keen competition among the boys to make the team, and a general excellence of play is the result. The photograph which is reproduced on this page shows the team in all its glory, and a fine looking lot of fellows they are.

To the Tillson Company also belongs the credit of having given a stimulus to hockey in Toronto, in a section where it was badly needed. The Tillson Cup, a cut of which is shown herewith, was donated by the company three years ago to be competed for by grocers. Last year the James Lumbers Co. were the runners up against the Grocery Brokers' team, the latter winning the cup for the third time in succession by the narrow margin of one goal.

this line is the increased prices. This fact is especially noticeable in the sale of peas and corn, the output of which from a retail standpoint, also shows a dropping off. Corn is now selling at ten cents straight, while in former years it was always three cans for a quarter. The same condition of affairs applies to the tomatoes and peas. The latter are being sold at three cans for a quarter, but only two cans of tomatoes may be had at this price. Of course the season is rather early, but the indications do not warrant the belief that there will be as large a demand for canned goods in general this year as in the past. The salmon trade shows greater activity and will probably increase, as is usually the case with the advent of warm weather, when this product will, to a very great extent, take the place of cold meats. Canned pumpkin is not as popular as heretofore, which is explained by the scarcity and attendant high price of milk, which is essential in its preparation for the table.

TRADE NEWS OF NEW BRUNSWICK

(Special Correspondence of The Canadian Grocer)

St. John, April 15. 1907.

Business generally is reported to be in a very healthy condition. Merchants are greatly pleased with the trade this month thus far, and are looking for a continuance of good orders. Sugar has advanced and a slight increase is looked for in molasses. Eggs are somewhat easier, butter continues firm, and fresh fish show signs of a decline in price and a better supply. The market in grains is firm, but as yet no change in prices is recorded.

The advance in sugars took place on Thursday, all grades going up ten cents a hundred pounds. This will, no doubt, affect the molasses market.

The Tillson Hockey Trophy, held by the Grocery Brokers, Toronto.

Molasses — Choice Barbadoes — The early demand in Newfoundland has apparently been satisfied and the market has consequently declined. Considering the short crop and that there are practically no supplies in Porto Rico this season, the present prices seem reasonable and should lead to a large consumption. It is understood that heavy sales have been made in Barbadoes at the present prices.

Fancy Barbadoes—The market has advanced 1½ cents per gallon from the low point touched in March. This is equal to 2 cents landed gauge. The market is very firm in sympathy with the stronger sugar market, and the price of fancy molasses depends wholly on and will follow the course of the raw sugar market.

Porto Rico—Advices from Porto Rico are to the effect that the east end, which three years ago shipped to Canada about 12,000 to 13,000 puncheons of grocery molasses. will produce this season only about 150 puncheons, which shippers state they are advised will be the last grocery molasses produced in the east end of Porto Rico. This shortage will have to be made up from other islands, so the position for regular Muscavado molasses appears to be a very strong one.

In the produce line, eggs went off two cents a dozen, and will probably continue to decline slightly each week. Butter is coming in very freely but as yet there has been no change in quotations. So far the dealers say the demand is limited. Fresh fish are beginning to come in now, but as yet the quantities have been too small to have any effect on prices.

In the fruit market bananas are coming in freely, and oranges, particularly Valencias, are being handled in large quantities. All kinds of pork products continue high.

Maple sugar and candy have made their appearance on the market and are meeting with a ready sale; the former is selling for 18 cents a pound retail and the later for 25 cents.

JAMES TODHUNTER DEAD.

James Todhunter, of Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., Toronto, died at his home, 85 Wellesley St., Toronto, on Wednesday. He had been ill some months and had to give up active business over six months ago. Mr. Todhunter was an Englishman and spent some years in the grocery business in London. Coming to Canada, he and Mr. Mitchell founded the spice business that has since grown to such large proportions. Mr. Todhunter restricted his energies almost entirely to his business. He was of the old-fashioned type of merchant, reliable, methodical and thorough, and throughout a long business career has enjoyed the respect of a wide commercial community. He leaves a widow.

Geo. Barron, of Barron's, Toronto, reports the arrival of their second car of California navels this month. The sizes run more evenly than has been the case hitherto, and the stock was not abnormally large.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Cheese continues firm, but the market is featureless. The make up to the present time has not been large and receipts, in consequence, are not great. Then, the attractive prices obtainable for butter have influenced many ... opening their factory. Early this year everybody believed that factory owners would make cheese in the Spring, so high were the ruling prices for this article at the time. Butter was not occupying a very strong position, and it was not thought that it would attract the attention it does now. When butter prices began to soar some little tim ago those who had been talking cheese then turned their attention to butter. As a matter of fact, there appears to be more interest taken in butter now by factorymen. For this reason cheese is not of such paramount importance as it would have been had January predictions worked out.

Old cheese is pretty well cleared up, few lots remaining unsold. What there is obtainable is sold at figures slightly lower than ruled last week. There is so little on the market that the price is not likely to cause any particular interest if it be one-quarter or one-half cent one way or the other.

New fodders, as has been stated, are not coming in freely at the moment. Cheese factories are making the line in more or less large quantities, but shipments to Montreal have not been frequent. In a week or two there will be much more cheese on the market than there is to-day.

It is a little early yet to mention the export season. Few cheese men will express their views upon the possibilities for this spring's trade. Just what kind of a market will rule is too much of an uncertainty to be talked of freely.

Prices for new butter last week soared 'way up, and stayed there. Everybody is asking for new goods. Nothing else will satisfy them. Dealers are at their wits' end in trying to give everybody satisfaction with the small lots of the new article which they are receiving. With most of the creameries in the country operating one would think that there would be plenty of butter for everyone, but so far there has been a scarcity which is very keenly felt.

Up to the end of last week, there had not arrived sufficient new butter to go around, allowing every person a share. Until all enquirers are supplied with at least a first lot, there will be a feeling of unrest in the market. Happily, butter this week has been coming in very well and wants are being supplied. High prices are not at all surprising considering conditions. Lower figures will not be witnessed until the market begins to be glutted, or at least extremely well supplied with new butter.

Old butter is practically cleaned up. The odds and ends of stocks held by various firms have nearly all been cleared out. It is safe to say that holders were glad to see the last packages of this nature leave their warehouses, as, in most cases, it was not of the best.

No one is looking forward to much of an export business at the opening of the usual export season, owing to prices in Canada being so much above the ruling figures in the old country. That there will be a decline is certain, as present quotations cannot last, but how soon will the market be upon an export basis?

Locally, trading is fair, there being good demand for all lines at ruling figures.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Live hogs are another quarter down this week and the whole provision market is weak. Stocks held by packers for domestic trade can be replaced at lower prices and with the uncertain market in Great Britain there is increasing pressure here to sell. The demand is not rising to meet it. While fair trade is passing, the usual heavy spring demand has not begun.

The Old Country market is down 1s. to 2s., owing to the continued pressure of heavy Danish receipts. The Danes seem to have extended their bacon industry for good. The bulge is about 5,000 hogs a week, making deliveries between 32,000 and 33,000, instead of 27,000 or 28,000 a week. London quotations for Canadian at the decline are 54s. to 56s. and the packer claims to be making a loss at that. The Danes can make a little profit at 55s. and their quotations this week are 55s. to 58s. They must find an outlet for five or six to ten thousand more hogs a week. It means lower prices, which Canadians must meet.

Live hogs are quoted this week at 6.15 f.o.b. country points and that price is being pretty well adhered to, especially west of Toronto; east, where the Montreal and Ontario buyers come into competition there is an advance occasionally to as much as 6.25. Killings last week were about 24,000 and this week will be about the same. As the farmers generally like to get rid of their hogs before seeding, falling prices do not seem to have retarded delivery. The hogs coming forward are running pretty light showing that the farmers are keeping pretty well cleaned up. Wm. Harris, Toronto, one of the best informed men in the trade, stated to The Grocer this week that he did not think the farmers were much increasing the number of their hogs and he couldn't understand why, because they were the most profitable stock a farmer could raise.

CHEESE—The make of cheese is increasing. Fodders are selling around 12¾c., while the old cheese is quoted as high as 14c. and 14½c. Demand is fair.

EGGS—Receipts of eggs have been very good lately, but not sufficiently heavy to warrant the commencement of pickling and storing. Quotations are a little higher than those given last week. Some dealers ask 18c. Others demand 17c. and there are some who will not sell under 19c.

PROVISIONS.—In sympathy with the lower prices for hogs, pork products are easier this week and lower prices are being quoted for long clear, smoked breakfast bacon, hams and backs. Prices for lard and beef remain steady. There is a fair demand for provisions, but no marked activity.

PROFIT MAKING

This is what we are all trying to do, in fact it is the all-necessary thing in order to make any business a success, and a large share of the responsibility lies with the buying end of the concern. Buying is a feature in our business to which we pay special attention. Our output has grown to such demensions that when an opportunity presents itself—to pick up a large block of goods at an interesting price—we are always ready to jump in and scoop the lot.

This is one way by which we can help to make buying easy for you, because we are always willing to share this extra profit with our customers.

WHOLESALE GROCERS

EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

HOW TO PRODUCE IT

Brief Talks Given Occasionally
By T. Johnson Stewart

The grocer who does not believe in advertising is not dead—although he has slept for long. For almost six weeks we were constrained to imagine that he had journeyed on, or that he had sold his grocery business and made a flank movement on Cobalt. Imaginings are generally vain and idle. Mine were both. Because the grocer who does not believe in advertising — who has never believed in advertising, and who will never believe in advertising—came along the other day and with the aid of a picturesque and varied vocabularly attacked our "theory of advertising" just as recklessly as we have seen men, not in the grocery business, attack a Welsh rarebit a few hours before the dawn. And the unbelieving rascal could talk like an Irish bard or a lady determined to emancipate her sisters from the exasperating rule of mere man and confer the suffrage on the female population of the world. Again and again the scribe attempted to trip up the orator; but the rushing, bubbling torrent of words flowed on until he ceased from pure exhaustion. Then I read a few sentences from authoritative sources, and, although I do not think that there is a grocer in Canada ignorant of the facts conveyed, yet I'll reprint them to show that there are real live grocers who attribute their success to a judicious use of printer's ink, thereby upholding our advertising philosophy.

Sir Thomas Lipton, who has made $50,000,000 in twenty years, attributes his success to printer's ink employed in the advertising columns of the newspapers.

James Butler, of New York City, who was a poor man fifteen years ago, is a multimillionaire to-day. He attributes his success to judicious advertising.

Sir Wm. Mackenzie is one of the wealthiest men in Canada to-day. He only abandoned the grocery and provision business to manipulate four thousand miles of railroad and control the traction systems of many of our biggest cities. There are some things which poor, penniless grocers cannot do —they cannot buy up electrical systems and control thousands of miles of railroads. And all the world knows that Sir William believes in advertising, and lots of advertising at that. To clinch my arguments I handed a batch of 21 "Trade-bringers" to my sceptical friend—ads. written by a grocer in a small city—ads. which have actually demonstrated in cash returns the benefits attending common-sense advertising; but the unbeliever vanished while I read McCrea & Son's letter and would not be convinced at all.

"These ads. were all successful; that is, they paid us good hard coin for the money spent, and I thought you might like them to illustrate or criticize."

We certainly do like them, Mr. McCrea, and we would like to print a number of them in this issue—if we had the space. We will pick out one at random from this batch of trade-bringers. There is nothing remarkable about that ad.—not excepting that it is pretty full of good sound sense. McCrea & Son have values for the people of Guelph—good values—and this kind of advertising pays because McCrea & Son make good. There is no exaggeration, no slashing and cutting of prices, but there is a plain, straightforward statement of good values. That sort of advertising always wins the better trade—the trade it pays most men to cater to. Greatly reduced prices never fail to frighten particular people away from any store. The grocer, above all other merchants, must be exact in his advertising, because the shrewd housewife can almost tell the state of his stock after reading his ad. Many grocers might profitably model their advertising after McCrea & Son's. The main point about all successful merchandizing is touched on here. McCrea & Son prove their ads.

Beaver Brand Special Hams

"THE BRAND THAT'S IN DEMAND"

Not every ham will stand the test for Beaver Special ham quality; about one Special ham out of every ten good hams. They must be taken from young and well-matured hogs. They must be firm in flesh and not too fat, and weigh not less than ten pounds, and not more than sixteen pounds. Then they must be cured the Ingersoll way, carefully watched and cared for during curing and smoking process; cured in a heavy syrup made of absolutely pure granulated sugar, and smoked slowly with hard wood. Then you have the sweet, juicy, tender Beaver Special, that's so delicious, if prepared as follows:

HAM AND EGGS

Take a thin slice of Beaver Special Ham, dip in cold water, slightly dry on cloth, broil quickly over a hot fire. Put in a frying pan a lump of I.P.C. butter and one of Ingersoll lard, sufficient to cover the bottom of the pan when melted. Break each egg into a saucer, then slide carefully into the hot grease. Cook gently until the desired degree of hardness is obtained. If cooked rapidly, the grease becomes too hot, and the egg will be dark around the edge, whereas they should be milky white. Serve around ham on a platter and garnish with sprigs of parsley. ("If you use ham grease for frying eggs, they will be dark and greasy looking.")

Mr. McCammon, we note what you say about competition, and, of course, "cutters" certainly do rile a man some. Your inference is quite just. The most of particular housewives in your town will talk as you have made the lady talk in your ad. However, I would ignore all such competition. Tell your own story in your ads. Talk quality all the time and prices when you can, and you can easily afford to ignore all competition as well as the methods of all competitors. I consider that last ad. you forwarded fairly good advertising, although it is not just my style.

DeWolfe & Lamont's ad. is good enough—having just one fault. It's too brief. Besides, the people of your town, knowing you well, can infer lots from that ad. which I cannot. Your little ad. is much better than some big ones, but you can afford to spread out a bit. Tell the people more in print.

Those grocers who have not forwarded samples of their advertising may enliven the next talk considerably by doing so. Be not afraid! Send 'em in.

BUSINESS MEN IN PUBLIC LIFE

No. 18

Samuel Screaton, London.

That Samuel Screaton, head of the well-known London wholesale grocery firm of Edward Adams & Co., has not advanced further in public life than he has is due to the fact that his private business affairs take up so much of his time that he has no particular taste for public office. His splendid executive abilities are, however, well known to the citizens of London, and had he so cared he might long ago have been a far more conspicuous figure in public affairs than he is to-day. When, five years ago, a vacancy occurred, through death, on the Board of Trustees of Victoria Hospital, Mr. Screaton was prevailed upon by the city council to accept the position, solely because of the interest he has for years taken in that home of the sick. He was at once chosen chairman of the board—a position he has ever since held. Twice has he been unanimously elected to the board by the citizens—no mean honor in a city where election contests are taken so seriously as they are in London. Mr. Screaton's parents were amongst the earliest settlers in what is now the Forest City, and Samuel, who was one of a numerous family, was born here fifty-six years ago. He received his education in the old union school in that city. Thirty-five years ago he entered the employ of Edward Adams & Co., the oldest grocery firm in Ontario, if not in Canada, having been established in 1837, and that he has risen to be the head of so important a firm is evidence enough of his superior business capacity and sterling integrity. It is such men as Mr. Screaton who are the backbone of Canadian business life.

JAPAN RICE MARKET.

Higher Duty Proposed—Guilds Opposing—Present Crop.

By Alex. MacLean, Canadian Commercial Agent.

It is proposed at the present session of the Japanese Parliament, to increase the tariff upon cleaned rice from the general duty of 32 cents to 50 cents per 133 pounds. Japan, besides being a large producer and exporter of rice, is also a large importer. The Japanese farmer sells the rice of his own growing, which is of high quality and commands a high price, and buys the imported article because it is cheaper.

Prior to ten years ago the bulk of rice was imported uncleaned. Since that time the uncleaned importation has fallen away to 4 per cent. last year. The cause if this change is alleged to be that the profit realized by the trade, upon the cleaned, was about 8 cents per 133 pounds more than upon the uncleaned, or "paddy." This proposed increase of duty has a protectionist aspect. The idea is that it will build up the rice-milling industry without increasing the cost of this staple article of food to the Japanese consumer.

At Kobe, the chief rice trading centre, the Imported Rice Dealers' Guild are taking steps to oppose the measure to the utmost, and to that end are inviting the support of the associated guilds. The argument in substance is that the preference for cleaned or hulled rice is a long continued and natural development of trade; that the increase of duty will not create a trade preference for the unhulled product, and will therefore advance the cost of food to the masses.

As affecting the present rice market and the early outlook, much speculation is said to be going on, amongst those who are interested, on account of the anticipated scarcity of supply this year owing to the small quantity of stock which is supposed to have been carried over from last year. Experience during ten years past tends to show that the supply would invariably increase in the year following that in which a smaller supply was availabie. Last year's supply did not exceed 40 million koku, therefore it is believed that only a small stock has been carried over to this year. Unless, therefore, this year's crops turn out exceptionally good there would be a great increase in the importation of foreign rice. According to official returns the production of rice for 1906 is put at 46 million koku, which is a little more than the normal output, whereas private investigations agree in estimating it at far below the average harvest. At any rate, the general belief appears to exist that a large amount of foreign rice will be imported this year. The quotations for forward delivery have now risen to $8.50 per koku (nearly 5 bush.) and brisk speculation is going on.

THE GREAT PROBLEM IN AMERICAN LIFE

By Prof. J. G. Schurman, an eminent Canadian, now head of Cornell University.

The regulation of consolidated and incorporated capital is likely to be the problem of American politics for the next few decades. No thoughtful man acquainted with the lessons of human history can survey the prospect which stretches before us without deep anxiety. It took a great civil war, extending over four years, with a sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of lives and an expenditure of millions of money, to dispose of the constitutional issue on which American political parties formerly divided.

Now that the contest of our parties is waged over economic questions with corporations indeed in the foreground but with the demand for a more equal distribuion of worldly goods in the distance and the spectre of socialism hovering just beyond the horizon—what eye but the eye of omniscience can divine whither and to what we are drifting.

Yet we cannot idly fold our hands or like cowards retreat. Whether we will or not we must face and solve the politico-economic problems which the Zeitgeist has trust upon us. But everything depends on the way in which we attempt the task and the spirit in which we go about it. The safety of states lies in the wisdom, the justice, the moderation, and the civic righteousness of their citizens. If these fail us, the doom of our Republic is written in the history of Rome.

In all the vast and varied panorama of the history of mankind I know nothing so full of interest and instruction for this generation of American people as the later days of the Roman Republic —the century of the Gracchi, of Marius and Sulla, of Crassus and Cato, of Pompey and Julius Caesar.

When the older Gracchus appeared on the scene Rome was still a republic which had undergone transformation from the earlier city-state, with its centuries of courage, civic virtue, and great achievement. Rome had become a world power and was bearing the responsibilities and the burdens of empire.

Her population was no longer a race of farmers, her citizens left the soil and crowded into the cities. The blood of the native stock had become diluted with a foreign strain. The State itself was distracted by a contest between the popular Comitia and a senatorial oligarchy in which each claimed and strove to secure supreme sovereignty.

Unhappily for Rome, a self-constituted savior of society appeared who had eyes to see that the times were out of joint and conceit to believe that he was born to set them right. He was a man of impulsive temperament, who brooked no oposition to his will, and who could not even appreciate a sincere difference of opinion in an honest opponent.

Vain, self-confident, reckless, autocratic, he was also thoroughly honest and deeply persuaded of his own good intentions. And, as fate would have it, he possessed the gift of eloquent speech. This man, who thought himself foreordained by the gods to be the regenerator of Rome, was Tiberius Gracchus. He was, says the historian:

"One of the most striking instances in history of the amount of evil that can be brought about by a thoroughly honest and well-meaning man, who is so entirely convinced of the righteousness of his own intentions and the wisdom of his own measures, that he is driven to regard any one who strives to hinder him as not only folish but morally wicked.

"The type of exalted doctrinaire who exclaims that any constitutional check that hinders his plans must be swept away without further inquiry, that every political opponent is a bad man who must be crushed, has been known in many lands and ages, from ancient Greece down to the France of the Revolution."

Tiberius was the champion of the small producers who had been driven out of business by the great capitalists. He insisted on taking away from the capitalists, without compensation, the lands they had held without question from 70 to 200 years, and distributing them among the petty farmers.

His reforms resulted in riot and massacre, in which the reformer himself miserably perished. But his policy of confiscation without compensation launched the State upon a century of civil war and ruthless proscription, which ended in the overthrow of the republic and the soulless despotism of the Caesars.

Thus ended the first historic attempt of political parties to solve great economic problems. Yet Tiberius Gracchus is not to be blamed for recognizing and facing those problems. The agrarian question, involving the proper relations of the small cultivators and the big capitalists, had to be fought out in the Rome of that day as the relations of public service corporations to consumers and the public must be settled here and now.

The historical results would have been entirely different had not Tiberius Gracchus lacked a just sense of reality, a knowledge of business, and a perception of the dominance of natural law in the sequence of economic phenomena and had he not injected into a grave and complex question of Roman politics a personality of boundless self-confidence and autolatry, equally impatient of opposition and incapable of judicial investigation and consideration.

CANADIANS INVITED.

Organization of the retail grocery trade is being prosecuted vigorously in the United States. The latest extension effort announced is the formation of a state association in Vermont this month. In a letter to The Canadian Grocer, editor Elisha Winter, organizer, writing for the president and secretary of the Burlington, Vt., Retail Grocers and Provision Dealers Association, said:—"I was reading your editorial in last week's issue on the topic of a distinct grocers' association and organization in Canada, and we would like to have you extend a cordial invitation to all our Canadian brethren, who may be so inclined, to attend our convention. I shall feel grateful for the addresses of any of our brethren in Canada who are disposed to attend."

Mr. Winter's address is the Van Ness House, Burlington. It would give the organization movement in Canada a great boost if a number of prominent Canadian grocers would attend the Burlington convention.

In a circular calling the convention, the promoters say:

"The State of Vermont has never been represented at any of the past annual gatherings of our National Association, which now has the affiliation of 38 states, representing 75,000 merchants, including Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

"Of the three links—national, state and local—constituting the chain, each bears an important part; identification with each is necessary for securing complete results. Fifteen state garnishment laws have been passed in the last five years, in as many states. The recent enactment of a national food law should at once receive the intelligent co-operation of the merchants of Vermont. The parcels post legislation has been killed in our National Congress, but this outrageous attempt to assassinate the 250,000 merchants of the United States for the benefit of catalogue houses is still a threatening danger in the future."

RAPID TRANSIT (?).

Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., Toronto, shipped a car of goods to Calgary January 5th. They received advice that car had passed North Bay on Saturday, April 6th.

GETTING AFTER THE SOAP TRUST

W. H. Lever, M.P., speaking some days ago at the annual meeting of Messrs. Lever Brothers, at Port Sunlight, Birkenhead, said that great difficulties had been experienced owing to the rise in the price of raw material, but declared that, notwithstanding this fact, he had every reason to congratulate the shareholders.

This heavy cost of raw material and the increasingly keen competition had made a working arrangement necessary amongst soap-makers in order to effect economies.

They had met with attacks from a section of the press, and they had issued writs against the Daily Mail and its associated newspapers. He looked forward with confidence to the result of this appeal to a jury.

OTTAWA RETAIL GROCERS IN ANNUAL MEETING

F. W. Forde Elected President for Fourth Term—Secretary H. C. Ellis Retires After Seven Years' Efficient Service.

The annual meeting of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association was held in their cosy rooms at Royal Albert Hall on Wednesday, the 10th inst., and altogether 'twas as interesting a meeting as the Ottawa grocers have had for some time. Reports from the treasurer and secretary for the past year were received. Election of officers for the ensuing year took place; delegates to the coming convention of the Retail Merchants' Association at Hamilton, July next, were selected; discussion of the early closing question was indulged in, and, in addition, other minor matters in connection with local work were dealt with. A report from Mr. Provost, whose committee were gathering information as to the advisability of holding a pure food show in Ottawa during the week of the Old Boys' Reunion, when it is expected some 10,000 visitors will be in the city, was received.

F. W. FORDE, RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Secretary Ellis gave a comprehensive report of the past year's work, showing all that had been done, the questions considered and decided, the outings held and the addresses heard by prominent business men during the year. Mention was made of the loss to the association in the deaths of Messrs. Warnock, Bryson and Thomson. The membership, now 56, showed an increase of four over the previous year.

The treasurer, C. J. Provost, came in for a great deal of praise in regard to the manner of handling the finances. His report was an excellent one, and showed a balance on hand, after all accounts were paid, of $278.22.

The association were interested during the year in assisting with the passing of a by-law regulating the hours of doing business—which came into effect on the 12th inst.—requiring all grocery stores to close at 6 p.m. on ordinary week days and 9 p.m. Saturdays and on the eve of all public holidays. It may be noted here that nearly all lines of trade in Ottawa are following the initial step of the grocers and adopting the same hours of closing, so that Ottawa may be considered a model city in this respect.

President Forde and Vice-President Booth gave verbal reports, thanking the members and other officers for the assistance given them and expressing pleasure at the success of the association, which was due altogether to the harmonious way they all worked.

The election of officers, which was by ballot, resulted as follows:

President—F. W. Forde (re-elected).

Vice-presidents—Wm. York and P. Lamoureaux.

Treasurer—C. J. Provost (re-elected).

Secretary—A. G. Johnson.

H. C. ELLIS

Retired from secretaryship after several years of efficient Effort.

Executive committee—Alex. Phillips, Jas. Mundy, John Bambrick, Geo. Atkinson, H. C. Ellis.

Auditors—A. Cochrane, Wm. McAllister.

President Forde was elected for the third term; Treasurer Provost for his third term. Secretary Ellis resigned this year after being seven years in office. The association is to be congratulated in securing Mr. Johnson as his successor.

It was remarked by one who knows that this year's officers are as fine a selection as were ever elected. It is to be hoped that the coming year will be a banner one.

The new officers will tender an "At Home" on the next social evening to the members and their friends.

A CLOSE SHAVE.

W. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co., of Chatham, who is stopping in Toronto for a few days, narrowly escaped serious injuries from the sudden collapse of the boarding erected by the J. E. Webb Contracting Co. on King St., adjoining the Canadian General Electric building. Several people were passing at the time of the fall, but Mr. Stevens was the only one who failed to escape. He was knocked down into the street, his hat and umbrella broken and smashed, and his overcoat plastered with mud. Several bruises and a severe shaking-up were the extent of his personal injuries, on which he may congratulate himself, for the percentage of those who can boast of having coming through such an experience at all is a small one.

GOT TO LIKE IT.

"I've been selling butter for a good many years," said a well known American trader recently, "and have always despised such substitutes as butterine and renovated butter. But I have changed my mind. I took a vacation in Bermuda and found that there oleomargarine was used very largely because it stood the weather better than butter. As a matter of necessity I took to eating the stuff, at first with disgust, but later with better grace. Suddenly I discovered that it was quite as palatable as creamery butter and when I came home I really had almost as much distaste for butter as I had for oleo. Funny, isn't it?"

In a small town in Pennsylvania are two brothers who are engaged in the retail coal business. A noted evangelist visited the town and the elder brother was converted.

For weeks after his conversion he endeavored to persuade his brother to join the church. One day he said to him:

"Why can't you, Richard, join the church as I did?"

"It's all right for you to be a member of the church," replied Richard, "but if I join who's going to weigh the coal?"

C. J. PROVOST, RE-ELECTED TREASURER.

RESULTS OF PURE FOOD LAW

Review at end of three months' enforcement of new Act in the United States.

The results of the National Pure Food Law passed by the United States Congress last year, and which came into force on Jan. 1, are, or ought to be, of great interest to everyone associated with the food stuff trade in Canada.

The New York Journal of Commerce. under the heading "Grocers and Food Law," has summarized these results for the first three months of the law's operation as follows:

The National Pure Food Law has been in operation just three full months, and every believer in honest goods sold on honesty in an honest way cannot but feel a sense of gratification in the way it has been met by the producers of foods. With scarcely an exception the manufacturers and dealers in materials used for food consumption have welcomed the law and taken every step to make it effective, not only with themselves, but throughout the trade. It has been evident that no one has the slightest desire to evade the law, so long as he is assured that his competitor will not be permitted to.

The chief difficulty the trade has encountered has been to apply the new order of things to the details of old established business methors. It has been difficult to say just what constituted simple honesty in its bare terms, and even the department officials have encountered more obstacles in the ramifications of the law than they ever anticipated. The avidity with which manufacturers and packers hastened to consult the department in their efforts to conform to the law in its very letter has been one of the most reassuring indications that the new regulations will have back of them an immense measure of public sentiment. Any law backed by a wholesome public opinion cannot fail to be effective. As things stand today, every manufacturer and dealer who has brought himself into conformity with the law has also, out of the sheer jealousies of trade, enlisted himself as an ally of the Bureau of Chemistry and the Agricultural Department to see that everyone lives up to the law as he does.

Changes Greater than Supposed.

The new law has wrought more changes in the actual composition of food products than is generally supposed. Not that the adulterations and petty deceptions practised in the past were necessarily a menace to the public health, but they were an affront to the public confidence. Few manufacturers would stoop to put into their goods anything they regarded as really harmful, but they would use adulterants and label their products in a way to conceal the fact. "Pure pepper" was half or two-thirds other stuff ground up with enough real pepper to pass muster and sell with a large profit. Syrups and molasses were quite as palatable and fully as wholesome if adulterated half with glucose. And many other products might be named as showing the general custom that had arisen of cheapening food products by adulteration yet forgetting to state it on the label.

The administrators of the new law have interpreted it in the simplest possible form—sell pure goods or tell the truth on your labels. Between those two alternatives the manufacturer has, with few exceptions, elected to sell pure goods. The declaration of the adulteration on the label injured the sale of such goods with a public which had not heretofore suspected. So the manufacturer and dealer have been willing to stop cheating if only their neighbor would. It has proven conclusively that it was the severity of competition, rather than any innate fraudulent disposition, which led to the abuses of the past.

Will be a Blessing.

There is a general belief in the trade that the Pure Food Law will be a blessing to the community once its changes are understood and the trade has become adjusted to the new arrangement. For the present, conditions are only gradually coming out of the chaotic state in which they were temporarily plunged. In the future the reputable merchant and manufacturer will be freed from the competition of the unprincipled dealer and blender. The public will be assured of pure and wholesome foods, and the whole commercial structure cleansed of a disease, which was certain to eventually sap its very life.

Broad-minded men in the food trade generally agree that the law has really been a benefit to them in bringing them back to a fidelity toward the consumer they were unable to maintain against the irresistible tide of competition. They had drifted into fraud without realizing it. It has set them thinking, and in many instances has brought them to adopt new ideals which are steps in the line of progress. Take the preservative question. To-day every manufacturer who holds fast to preservative does so only because he feels that he must. Show him that he can produce and keep his goods without benzoate or any similar substance and he will welcome the change. Dr. Wiley says it can be done, and to-day everyone believes that he is right, though they do not all coincide that it can be done to-day.

Dr. Wiley's Influence.

Then there is the item of Dr. Wiley himself. The Pure Food Law has brought about a harmony of purpose between the theoretical food chemist and the practical manufacturer never existing before or even possible. Dr. Wiley and his assistants understand the food manufacturer and his problems better than ever before, and the manufacturer, instead of hating the Bureau of Chemistry and distrusting it, has come to regard it as an ally in improving the methods of producing and marketing foods. In brief, while the Pure Food Law has caused a great revolution, involving an upheaval of one of the greatest of business factors, it has in three months won for itself a very general commendation from the trade, the manufacturer and the consumer alike.

THE SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE.

From the New Brunswick Tourist Association comes an illustrated booklet descriptive of the sporting, touring and other possibilities of this Canadian province. The illustrations, which number over a hundred, are taken direct from photographs, and the holiday-seeker who fails to find what he wants among the seemingly inexhaustible variety of pleasures extended to him doesn't deserve a holiday at all. Read this extract:

"The fishermen and hunters will find a living interest in the teeming rivers, lakes and streams, where can be caught the lordly salmon and the speckled trout, and in the forest reaches where the giant moose, the deer, caribou, bear and other animals roam. * * * The stately forests, many rivered hills, nestling lakes and velvet-carpeted caribou plains, present to the modern voyager a page from prehistoric days—a veritable dream-land Paradise, whose evergreen vales and teeming waters smile to-day as they did in the time of Cartier and Champlain."

Anybody who wants one of these booklets only need write for one. Address, A. Pauline Scovil, secretary New Brunswick Tourist Association, 85 Prince William St., St. John, N.B., and copy will be sent to him forthwith.

FOOD TESTING.

The annual report for 1905-1906 of the Department of Inland Revenue, dealing with the adulteration of food, shows that out of a total of 2,095 samples examined, 1,304 were found genuine, 402 doubtful, and 389 adulterated. The latter included 116 samples of pepper, 14 of tincture of ginger, 16 of olive oil. 82 of fruit preserves and 147 of maple syrup. The ratio of adulteration found in the last-mentioned commodity amounted to nearly 50 per cent. of the samples analyzed.

Out of 322 canned meat samples examined and analyzed all but four were found genuine.

WINNIPEG WHOLESALE SHIPPERS

An association of the traffic managers connected with the different wholesale houses in Winnipeg was formed last week by G. E. Carpenter, manager of the transportation department of the Winnipeg Jobbers' and Shippers' Association. The object of the association is to bring together the traffic men in the different wholesale houses, for the purpose of discussing matters of interest and systematizing their work. The following were the officers elected :

Hon. president, J. H. Ashdown ; first hon. vice-president, A. A. Gilroy ; second hon. vice-president, W. Georgeson ; president, W. P. Curran ; vice-president, T. H. Van Every ; secretary, J. T. Peer ; treasurer, G. E. Carpenter ; executive committee, P. G. Denison, R. J. Salisbury, D. W. Harmer, with the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer.

Those present were : R. J. Salisbury, representing R. A. Rogers & Co. ; A. Cookson, Miller, Morse & Co.; P. G. Denison, J. H. Ashdown & Co.: T. H. Van Every, Marshall & Co.; W. Reynolds, Kemp Mfg. Co.; E. P. Daly, J. Y. Griffin Co.; W. P. Curran, T. Eaton Co., Ltd.; J. D. Clair, Foley, Lock & Larson ; R. Bagot, Kilgour, Rimer Co.; R. W. Harmer, Codville, Georgeson Co.; L. Robinson, T. L. Robinson Co.; F. G. Man, McClary Mfg. Co.; J. T. Peer, Dunn Brothers ; G. G. Carpenter, Winnipeg Shippers and Jobbers' Association ; H. S. K. Drury, president engineer board of railway commission.

FIRST FRUIT BOAT.

Reports received in Montreal by the Thomson line are to the effect that the "Bellona," the first direct fruit boat of the season, sailed from Carthagena on April 13, to call at Sorrento and Burriana for her cargo of oranges and lemons. She is due in Montreal just as soon as it is possible to get up the river. Exact figures as to her cargo are not obtainable, but she carries in the neighborhood of 30,000 cases from Sorrento, and 4,000 cases from Burriana and Carthagena.

The second direct steamer, the "Fremona," is now loading at Messina, and is due to sail this week.

WOULD IT WORK BOTH WAYS?

In pursuance of their effort to hold the manufacturer, jobber and retailer in their respective places, says a writer for the grocery trade in a New York paper, the Omaha Retail Grocers' Association announces that it will organize a co-operative wholesale grocery company if the jobbers do not stop selling direct to consumers.

Without attempting to pass on the efficacy of such measures to keep the various factors of trade in their proper channels, or even determining what is the proper channel of each—a matter largely dependent upon circumstances—isn't there in this action a suggestion for retaliatory measures by the jobbers ? Think it over a bit ?

And in the same way aren't the whole bulk of retail traders practically branches of the jobbing houses that served them ? If it be true, as stated so many times by jobbers, that they are carrying large credit accounts of retailers which, if foreclosed, would wipe out of existence the small dealers, why aren't such stores the retail outlets of the wholesale house which is carrying them ? If the Omaha association can establish a wholesale co-operative establishment, why can't the jobbers meet it by a parallel move ?

Markets are Firm Owing to Outlook for the Coming Crop but Deliveries are Much Heavier Than a Year Ago.

The backward spring is having its effect on the wheat market since it is regarded as a real menace to the year's western crop. This firmer tone has been communicated to the flour market, and, while there has been no advance in quotations, millers are not disposed to make concessions. There is considerable export business passing. The upward movement of the grain markets is general. Summarizing the situation the New York Journal of Commerce said:

"The past week has been one of active and advancing grain markets, on continued drouth in the southwest and bug damage, to which has been added severe freezing weather. Shorts have been convinced at last of serious damage, and the Government report did not relieve their fears nor encourage their disbelief, as conditions since April 1 have been steadily growing worse. This affects the whole southwestern winter wheat crop, Oklahoma's and Texas's having been severely damaged, the latter nearly destroyed, while winter killing east of the Mississippi has also proved to be quite serious."

Transportation conditions are still serious but are improving slowly. Deliveries from the west are being made a little more freely. One effect of the traffic congestion is shown in the figures showing that the visible supply of wheat in Canada and the States increased last week 1,520,000 bushels, while a year ago it decreased 375,000 bushels. Oats increased last week 254,000 bushels, and last year decreased 858,000 bushels. These heavy deliveries are counteracting the influence of the crop outlook on prices.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Although prices have not changed, there is a little firmer feeling in flour this week. Wheat has been advancing and as a result there is a possibility of higher figures being asked for the manufactured product. Export business is not very brisk, but local trading is satisfactory.

The C.P.R. has constructed a large refrigerator warehouse at Liverpool in connection with its Atlantic steamers.

The C.P.R. elevator D at Fort William, the working house of which was last fall completely destroyed by fire for the second time, is to be entirely remodelled. When finished it will have a capacity of 200 cars per day, as against only 75 previous to its destruction. It has a capacity of three million bushels and is the largest single storage elevator house in the world.

FOOD DECORATION.

Possibilities of the Use of Coal Tar Dyes in Foods and Confections.

A writer in an American exchange grew facetious thinking about the use of coal tar colors in foods and relieved himself in this fashion:

"It doesn't always follow that coal tar dyes are poisonous and unfit for use," said a prominent food druggist the other day. "In fact, I would rather take some coal tar dyes into my system than some vegetable dyes. Nor does the Government condemn all coal tar dyes in food. It is true that some are highly poisonous and ought to be eliminated, but if manufacturers would take care in their selections and consult the Government, there would be a lot of troube avoided."

And now humanity finds itself threatened by a new physiological horror—the kaleidoscopic interior. The Pure Food Commission of Illinois has come out with a tacit endorsement of aniline dyes in food products, on the ground that whereas these colorings may once have been deleterious, they are now made by improved processes and are quite harmless.

Bad as the suggestion may be in itself, it becomes startling when one notes the suggestion in the association bulletin that "the popular prejudice is partly due to the fact that coal tar colors give to wool a fast color, and to the notion that this color in the food would

We have heard about ''pink pills for pale people'' and such things, but when it comes to braching the fad of interior mural decorations for the human system, there is something in it a bit uncanny. Just imagine the mental agonies of an artistic temperament, which suddenly realized that a blonde complexion outside has by some strange twist of cuisine become associated with a brunette complexion on its interior, or that a bright and gaudy yellow liver was inflicting itself upon a nature mild and conservatively Quaker-like in other organic functions. Would a pale blue kidney work harmoniously in the same organism with a dark brown stomach? And would it be possible for a yellow journalist like Mr. Heart to tone down his proclivities by eating food carefully and scientifically dyed with grey or green admixtures? Just imagine the horrible consequences if an orange diet should chance to encounter a green aniline colored breakfast on March 17. And surely the artist would preforce be obliged to confine himself to foods whose harmony lay entirely along chromatic lines rather than in edible and nutritious considerations. Thank goodness Illinois stands alone in approving aniline dyes for food.

FOOD STUFF TRADE NEWS OF THE ATLANTIC PROVINCE

Halifax, N.S., April 16.

The Maritime grocery markets appear very steady and there is little change in the price list. All lines appear very firm, particularly beef, pork and dried fruits. With the increased receipts of eggs the price drops, and they are now quoted at 20 cents by the case. A further decrease is looked for. The receipts of butter show little change, though it was hoped that with the fine weather approaching the price would ease off a little. The best creamery is scarce at 28 cents, while dairy rolls of poor quality sell for 24 cents. Small tubs of fresh butter find ready sale at 26 cents.

Fish.—Lobsters are very scarce, the price is high and the demand good. The stormy weather has greatly interfered with the catch at all points, and the fishermen hold out for high figures. At Main-a-Dieu, C.B., the fishermen will be paid $3.75 per cwt. for medium-sized and nine cents each for lobsters over ten inches long, and the same prices will be paid to the fishermen at Louisburg. At Tourchu the fishermen will receive $3.75 per cwt. for lobsters, without any distinction as to size. With such high prices, if the catch is up to the average season, the fishermen will reap a harvest.

A. T. Weldon, the hard-working secretary of the Halifax Board of Trade, has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted. He has accepted the position of general sales agent of the Port Hood, Richmond Railway and Coal Company. Much of the credit for the present splendid standing, work and membership of the board of trade is due to Mr. Weldon's energy, and his courtesy to all, and his efforts to make Halifax well and favorably known everywhere and to all, will strengthen the regret of the general public for his retirement from what may almost be looked upon as a public office.

L. C. Mulhall & Co. have purchased the grocery business of H. W. Baker at Middleton. The new firm is stocking the store with first-class goods, and as Mr. Mulhall is one of the most public-spirited citizens of the town, he will no doubt receive a liberal share of patronage.

A further indication of the development and growth commercially, as well as industrially, of Sydney is furnished by the fact that another Ontario concern has opened a branch in that city. This firm is the Fowler Canadian Company, Ltd., of Hamilton, Ont., dealers in beef, pork, butter and cheese. W. P. Ryan, the firm's representative, has been in Sydney for several days looking over the ground, and he is very favorably impressed with the commercial possibilities of Sydney. The Fowler Company operates its own refrigerator cars, and for the present will carry fresh beef and pork to Sydney by the carload once a week, or oftener, distributing the same to the trade. Later on it is not unlikely that the company may establish a warehouse in Sydney, from which the surrounding districts will be supplied.

THE BAND OF HOPE.

Tom Ratchford, George Musgrave, J. J. Dooley, Councillor Luke Day, James Cogan, John Batherson and Conductor Sandy Watson consumed all of one day and a considerable portion of the evening in a desperate endeavor to establish a new record for smelt fishing. They returned in the gloaming, and, apparently, were not on speaking terms. Mr. Ratchford, on being pressed for an explanation, said that the smelt fishing this year is the worst he ever experienced and that his feelings on the subject of the expedition were unfit for publication. Later it transpired that towards nightfall no less than two fish had actually been hooked, but no one of the party possessing the requisite amount of strength to land them, the pursuit had been reluctantly abandoned and the fishermen returned home.

DID YOU EVER NOTICE that customers who are the best pay, who look you in the face with that frank, honest look are those who buy

Tillson's Pan-Dried Oats

And why? Because it is a food, not a fad—the honest, simple food that develops the muscle, hardens the bone, and evolves the healthy brain and mind.

There are oats and oats, but no such oats as "Pan Dried," because the Tillson process entirely eliminates the hulls and gives them that delicious "toasty" flavor which all others lack. Try a package and judge for yourself.

WHEN YOU SELL PAN-DRIED OATS

you are giving your customer honest value—ten cents worth of food.

WHEN YOU BUY PAN-DRIED OATS

you get the same honest value—nothing more. Your profit is a good one, sure and invariable. No free goods, no schemes nor other fakes to force you to load up with a larger quantity of perishable goods than you can sell.

AS A CANADIAN GROCER,

which is best? To buy Pan Dried Oats on a straight business basis, and support an old established Canadian Industry, owned by Canadians, and operated with Canadian capital, or to buy "fads" on the something-for-nothing plan, made, you know not by whom or where?

The Tillson Co. manufacture all kinds of Cereals, Pot and Pearl Barley, Split Peas, Rolled Wheat, Rolled Oats, etc. Five-bag, or case lots, are shipped direct from factory and freight prepaid to any station in Ontario east of Windsor and south of North Bay.

Ask your jobber to quote Tillson's goods, or if he cannot do so, write to the factory,

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Lemons Still on the Advance—Florida Vegetables Delayed by Drought—Heavy Damage by California Floods — The Montreal Steamers.

The severe drought recently experienced in Florida has made all vegetables from this district scarce and high. Florida tomatoes, however, are being received in heavy quantities and are of beautiful quality. Reports from California state that the Sacramento River flood has damaged the asparagus crop to such an extent that the total yield will scarcely exceed twenty per cent. of last year's supply and will not amount to more than ten per cent. of what was anticipated. One of the largest growers and independent packers on the coast writes: "The delta of the Sacramento and San Joaquin is one solid body of water, extending from Sacramento to Stockton, and from the hills on the east to the hills on the west of the delta, an area of some forty to fifty miles long and twenty to thirty miles wide."

Florida tomatoes are strong and there is no decline in price, f.o.b., owing to the short crop. Texas tomatoes will begin to move about the 15th of May. The cold weather has stimulated the demand for onions, and a brisk trade has been done in all lines during the past few days. It has been a record season for old cabbage, and there is still a brisk movement for remaining stock.

The lemon market is steadily rising and an easier movement is not looked for until the arrival of the first Montreal steamer. The "Fremona" did not leave Messina until the 15th, five days later than was expected. The cargo included 45,000 boxes of lemons, this being some 10,000 boxes short of what it was originally stated to be. This is accounted for by the fact that some of the shippers who had reserved space found later that they had no November cut lemons, while others had not so large a quantity as they had anticipated. It is now practically certain that the "Fremona" will be the only steamer Montreal will get for the May lemon sales. Her cargo should be unshipped and ready for market by May 15th. The "Bellona," the second steamer, left Sorrento on the 8th with a cargo consisting chiefly of oranges. The fact that she will complete her cargo at Burriana, in Spain, being unable to make up her complement in Sicily, invites the inference that she will be the only orange boat for Montreal, unless some tramp steamer arrives later in the season.

A feature of the grape fruit season now closing has been the comparatively light receipts of California stock. The Florida supply, on the other hand, has been unusually heavy.

Five hundred cases of Valencia oranges were sold at auction in Montreal Monday. Prices ranged between $2.50 and $3. The fruit was damaged stock.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Cold weather prevents the transaction of any considerable business in fruits. Bananas are more plentiful this week and better prices are quoted. Lemons are scarce and prices have an advancing tendency, being higher this week. Oranges are firm, supplies being but moderate. Pineapples, while not arriving freely at the moment, will be obtainable in greater quantities shortly, when prices will be easier. Apples are steady under fair demand.

VEGETABLES.—Dealers are awaiting warmer weather, which will bring with it an increase in their sales. As it is now, receipts of new vegetables are light and prices are consequently high, limiting trade. Celery is in good demand at figures quoted. Cabbage is plentiful and cheap. Tomatoes are dear but receipts are greater as each week comes along. Cucumbers are unchanged.

FISH.—Fish market is dull. Business being transacted does not amount to much and there is little interest taken in the situation. Few price changes are noticeable this week. FRUIT.—Navels continue to run exceptionally large, and the dealers are endeavoring to fix their prices in proportion. Lemons remain very firm under a light supply. Oranges are generally moving somewhat more freely owing to the car shortage having been temporarily relieved. Pineapples continue almost prohibitively high, but a drop is expected very shortly.

Strawberries are slightly easier again, but the stock might be better. Grape VEGETABLES.—Potatoes this week are somewhat easier, Delawares being quoted as low as 85c. a bag. The demand, however, is not desperate, and the general situation is quiet to unchanged. The recent cold snap has whipped up a revival of interest in the onion market, but it can be only temporary at the best. Florida tomatoes are probably finer than they have been in years, shipments being unusually free from worms, and pack heavy. This week sees the first arrivals of Egyptian and Bermuda onions.

GOOD WINDOW DRESSING

Guelph Man in Defence of a Neighbor's Window — Was the Bovril Decision Just? He Asks—We Think it Was.

Here's something we like from Guelph. A grocer advocating the cause of a friend, who, he thinks, should have succeeded better in the Bovril competition. We don't agree with him, but we take pleasure in publishing the letter and a cut of the photograph of the window in question with the picture published recently showing the window that was awarded first prize. "Brother Grocer" asks for the opinions of other grocers. We would be glad to have, and publish, them. This is the letter:

Was the Bovril Window Dressing Contest Rightly Judged?

"If you will compare the window which won first prize with the photo which won second, you will wonder really where the superiority of the first prize comes in. The first prize window seems crowded while cut No. 2, although full, yet has an orderly appearance that makes the space seem ample.

The arrangement, somewhat after the style of a stage, shows well from the street. Now, first, what is the aim of a window display?

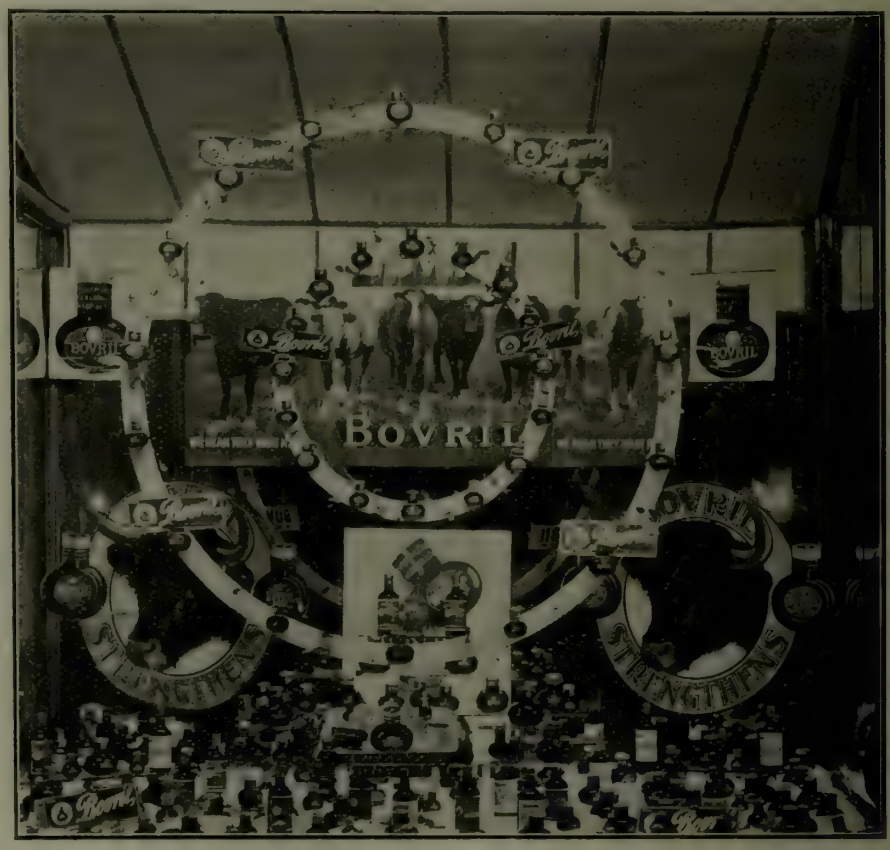
First, to arrest attention and then hold it till the lesson is taught.

The striking Bovril hoops arrest your attention from a distance, and the general neat and artistic arrangement holds your attention to the finish.

In window dressing a window ought to look artistically careless—that is, as if placed carelessly, yet in perfect harmony. This is shown in cut No. 2.

The tiers of Bovril at the bottom give a solid effect with the lighter top as an artistic finish.

Cut No. 2 was dressed by Robt. Millar, head clerk at Geo. Williams', Guelph, who put in some very pretty trims in the past.



The Guelph Window.

The First Prize Winner—A. Hagmeier, Hespeler.

The competition is over and past, and everyone is satisfied, only we would like to know the opinions of our readers on this decision."

A BROTHER GROCER.

The Other Side.

We very readily agree that Mr. Millar has made a very attractive display but we agree with the Bovril judges' award. Mr. Hagmeier's white arch, with its wreathing and centre poster, is a highly artistic conception. The photograph does not nearly do it justice.

The idea set forth by the life preservers is immediately patent to the least acute observer; it does not detract from the artistic value of the display, and is one of the brightest ideas in window dressing the writer has ever seen.

The display of Bovril in the window is not large, but it is sufficient and is made to accommodate itself admirably to the rest of the window arrangement.

Another thing, no part of the display stands before, partly hiding, any other part, thereby creating confusion, The big, bold Bovril sign at the front is good. It pleases us, too, that there is in this window no display of the raw product, but that may be merely a matter of taste.

These remarks are not made as comparing these two windows, but are intended simply to indicate the good points of the Hagmeier window. Mr. Millar displays considerable originality and much care in the execution of the design. In the opinion of the writer his window was a first-rate second.

A Grocer's Business Is No Stronger Than His Weakest Line. How's Your Cigar Trade?

The answer determines the extent of your business, in ninety-five cases out of every hundred, and you know it. The man who handles no cigars is in a worse way than the Grocer who handles an inferior brand: Both are out of harmony with the conditions of our age. Since it is necessary to stock cigars, shouldn't you stock my because of their trade-compelling qualities? The immense superiority of these cigars is generally admitted and has never been disputed.

PHARAOH retails for 10 cents; but there are ten thousand smokers in Canada who believe that it is superior to all 15-cent cigars on the market.

PEBBLE is easily 10 cents' worth of tobacco goodness and it retails for 5. Send along a test order.

J. BRUCE PAYNE, Limited, GRANBY, QUEBEC

A TOBACCO nearly as good as T. & B. is not on the Canadian market to-day. That's certainly a strong reason why you should stock this brand; but when the pipe-lovers of Canada declare so unanimously in favor of it certainly explains why so many Grocers refuse to stock any other pipe tobacco.

T. & B. smokes well and its fragrance delights the smoker's friends as much as its soothing coolness delights himself.

CANADA AND THE WEST INDIES

The Board of Trade Delegates' Report—Splendid Outlook for Increased Trade—Favorable Sentiment Among the Islands.

Jas. D. Allan, at one time president of the Toronto Board of Trade, and at all times one of its most valuable friends and counsellors, Tuesday presented the joint report before the members of that body of the Canadian delegates to the West Indies. The party consisted of A. E. Jones, Halifax; H. B. Schofield, St. John, and Mr. Allan himself. The report dealt in detail with the actual conditions of trade obtaining in the different islands, and towards the end conclusions were drawn and suggestions made as to the possibility of increased trade and more extended reciprocity between Canada and her sister colonies. With regard to the latter the commission is exceedingly optimistic, and the report declares that: "From the expression of friendship and goodwill given utterance to, we were shown plainly that they are desirous of giving Canada the fullest possible share in their trade. In every place, also, we were extended the most unbounded hospitality and shown every social and other attention."

The delegates sailed from Halifax on Feb. 15th, and held the first meeting on their way south at Bermuda; another was held at Demerara, and thereafter at the following points, at all of which the commission was met by representative business men and others of the community, who furnished full details of trade and in other ways supplied much valuable information: Trinidad, Grenada, Barbados, St. Lucia, Dominica, Montserrat, Antigua, Nevis and St. Kitts.

The report deals systematically and concisely with the prevailing conditions in the following branches of trade:—

Imports—Flour, biscuits and hard bread, oats, split peas, Canada peas, cheese, butter, bran, hay, confectionery, bacon and hams, beef and pork, dry and pickled fish, condensed milk, oil meal and oil cake, carriages, cordage, boots and shoes, manures and fertilizers, paints and oils, paper, soap, refined sugar and dry goods. The exports—Cocoa, sugar, molasses, lumber, fruits and a number of miscellaneous articles which were exhibited and explained to the commission in Demerara.

Flour.

With regard to the flour situation the report says: "The use of Canadian flour in the West Indies is becoming gradually more universal, but owing to the fact that goods shipped via New York are credited to the United States in the statistics kept in the West Indies, it is impossible to ascertain how much Canadian flour reaches there. The prejudice against Canadian flour seems to be gradually dying out, but in many cases the theory that our flour will not keep as well as the American is still adhered to. Information on this point, however, was more or less conflicting; the statement being freely made also that whereas some years ago Canadian flour did not stand the climate well, there has of late been a great improvement, and we have been told in several instances that it was equally as good as the American in this respect."

A very large proportion of the consumption is of "Super" grade, and dealers would prefer a somewhat whiter flour than is shipped from Canada at present under this grade. In Trinidad the total quantity imported from the United States is 200,000 barrels, as compared with 9,000 from Canada. Statistics were given of the trade in all the islands, of which Barbadoes and Trinidad were the two largest handlers.

Oats and Peas.

The whole of the trade in oats and split peas is supplied by Canada, although most of it goes via New York. White oats, packed in bags of 160 lbs., and peas in barrels of 210 lbs., or in bags of the same weight, are what is wanted.

Cheese.

Canadian cheese is holding its own fairly well. In Demerara its chief competitor is the Gouda, made in Holland, which, though of only equal quality, is preferred owing to being in a shallow box, with partitions between.. Canadian cheese put up in ten-pound sizes, packed four the same way, would have a better chance. In Trinidad some complaints were made as to the keeping qualities of Canadian cheese, and in Dominica the United States have more than double the trade of any other country. In Barbaros, however, the imports in 1905 were 39,348 lbs. from Canada and 9,239 lbs. from the United States.

Butter.

Canadian exports show fair results in the better grades, but in many of the islands the trade calls very largely for a quality which can be sold to the populace at a very low figure. In Demerara and Trinidad this demand is supplied by French butter, which is of a quality and sold at a price with which Canadian butter cannot compete. The French article sells for 22 cents a pound, but by far the greater proportion of the butter is sold by the pennyworth over the counter. The demand for cheap butter among the other islands is filled by oleomargarine from the United States. "Bluenose" butter, shipped from Nova Scotia, is well liked, though considered by some inferior to the Danish.

Confectionery.

Very little Canadian confectionery is sold in any of the islands, most of that used coming from Great Britain. It must be specially packed in tins or glass bottles, in weights from one-half pound upwards. There is no reason why Canada should not get her fair share of this trade.

The consumption of bacon is comparatively small, but a large quantity of ham is used, most of which comes from the United States. Out of the total meat trade of Trinidad, which amounts to nearly eight milion pounds, Canada supplies only 140,000.

The trade in dry and pickled fish is monopolized wholly by Canada and Newfoundland.

Condensed Milk.

Canada supplies only a twenty-seventh part of this commodity, part of which is condensed skimmed milk. Complaints have been made as to its keeping qualities, and some of the importers say that they are unable to get orders filled. The consumption is reported to be increasing rapidly.

Soap.

Canadian soap obtained a secure hold on the trade in Demerara several years ago, but has since been almost entirely replaced by English soap. With the notable exception of Antigua, where Canada still has the bulk of the trade, this was found to be the case in most of the other islands.

Refined Sugar.

There is a considerable importation of granulated and cubes, coming from the United States almost altogether. With equal prices, buyers would be ready to bring all their supplies from Canada.

West Indian Preference.

A memorandum expressing the opinion of the Halifax Board of Trade as to the attitude which Sir Wilfrid Laurier should assume on the subject of the tariff relations of Canada and the West Indies was handed to the Prime Minister on board the Empress of Britain.

The gist of the report was as follows:—

"The Boards of Trade of Montreal, Toronto, St. John and Halifax in February last organized a delegation to the West Indies to discuss trade matters generally and to ascertain in what respects the business between Canada and West Indies is capable of being more fully developed. The gentlemen who went as representatives of the above boards have returned and report a very cordial desire on the part of the merchants in the West Indies to give Canada as large a share of their business as possible.

"Our delegates, in the course of the various discussions which took place, took the opportunity to discuss that inasmuch as Canada had granted to British goods lower rates of duties than those charged to foreign, the British West Indies might adopt the same way, as the application of our British preference had increased our imports from Great Britain and her colonies.

"This idea was on the whole favorably received, though some doubt was expressed that the Home Government might not approve of the principle. It is felt that if Canadian goods were granted a preference in the British West Indies it would be of very great advantage to this country, and would enable a large trade to be done in agricultural products, such as flour, oats, peas, etc., which are now sent here from the United States."

In our next issue we hope to give the report's comments upon some of its exports, together with a few general remarks on the subjects of preference and transportation.

WITH THE RETAILERS AGAIN.

A. Irving, for some time past New York manager for the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., has bought out the business of W. C. Cork, at 964 Bathurst St., Toronto. Mr. Irving's unusually large experience makes him peculiarly well fitted to score a big success as an independent retailer, and he is fortunate in possessing the additional asset of a thorough knowledge of the requirements and possibilities of a medium-sized store. Eighteen years ago he held his first important position as manager of John Sloan's sample room (at that time Sloan and Crowther) on the corner of Scott and Front. He was with this firm for close upon a dozen years, and left them to accept the position of west-end city traveler for the Salada Tea Co. Six years more saw him installed in Philadelphia as branch manager for the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., and within the next two he was promoted to the head office at New York, in full control of almost 1-3 of the American business done by the company. Ill-health, however, compelled him to relinquish this position, but 'tis an ill wind that blows no one any good, and in this instance New York's loss is Toronto's gain, to the extent of a fine new store on Bathurst St. and a human enclyclopedia of grocery knowledge inside it.

It isn't safe to be unduly optimistic with regard to other than one's own affairs, but the present opportunity of being handed down to posterity as the genuine article in prophets is too tempting to be resisted, and we have therefore no hesitation in rating Mr. Irving's immediate chances of success as A1.

DETERIORATION OF TEA.

A circular from the Salada Tea Co., asking the wholesale and retail trade to return any Salada tea they had in stock for over six months, was shown The Canadian Grocer the other day. A representative asked Mr. Larkin the reason for this. He replied:

"Yes, we are losing the freight, which we prepay, and also the return freight; then we have to empty the cases, open the packages, and sell the returns as bulk tea for whatever prices it will fetch, because of the fact that all tea deteriorates in quality at least one cent per pound in six months, and from two to four cents in the first year. Take a very fine tea, for instance, that costs, let us say, 37c. at auction; this grade, especially in Ceylons, will during the first year lose at least five cents per pound in quality. A tea costing 10d., i.e., 20 cents, will lose about three cents in quality, so that by holding tea one not only loses interest, storage and insurance charges, but it can be fairly estimated that the tea loses in value ten per cent. or over during the first year. During the second year it loses still more, probably 15 per cent., during the third year an equal amount; but after that it does not deteriorate, because, as a rule, it is about as bad as it can be.

"Tea is at its best the day it is fired in the gardens, and although in sealed lead packets tea keeps very much better than in bulk, still it does not retain its original flavor. The trouble lies in the fact that the flavor of tea is contained in an essential oil, which deteriorates and probably gets rancid no matter what precautions are taken with it. We consider it profitable, therefore, to have our tea go to the consumers as fresh as it is possible to let them have it."

Mr. Larkin was asked how the Salada Tea Company was fixed for stock when the enormous rise in the prices of tea took place three or four months ago. He said: "We were fixed as we usually are. We had enough stock in Toronto to last us about two or three weeks, and the usual quantities on the road between Colombo, London and here. We did not have a stock to carry us over for months without buying, neither would we want to have. The trouble is, that if we had, we would not be serving the consumer well. We would be serving them with tea that was old, and which, therefore, had lost its flavor. If we were positive now that the market was going to advance another five cents per pound, we could not speculate for our wants; that is, for the tea that we put in our packages. It would not pay us. The quality would not be Salada quality. There is only one time in the year that we have more than our normal quantity of tea in stock, and that is during the monsoon period, when all the tea coming forward is comparatively poor, but in this case we only provide ourselves with stock sufficient to last us seven or eight weeks. Fresh tea is all important, and, therefore, we cannot afford to speculate and hold.

"Many retail grocers, if they hear that the tea market is likely to advance, buy heavily of bulk teas, forgetting all the time that if there is an advance in tea of even three or four cents per pound, in the course of a year their tea has deteriorated in value to fully that extent, besides the loss of interest, insurance, etc. I have known when I was on the road," continued Mr. Larkin, "tea to be in stock with some retailers for six or eight years, when it was positively unfit to send out at all. The moral is, speculate as much as you like in other goods, but buy your tea from hand to mouth, and the clever grocer always does this. He has no tea on hand to last him, at the outside, for more than three months. The grocer in England, as a matter of fact, seldom carries more than three weeks' supply."

Too Expensive For My Business!

BUSINESS SYSTEMS LIMITED — SYSTEM THE SECRET OF SUCCESS — TORONTO

Any retailer who says that about Business Systems, is laboring under a delusion.

The size of a business is the factor that determines the cost of installing Business Systems.

Business Systems are, proportionately, just as much an economy for the smallest retail store as for the largest factory.

* * * * * *

In different businesses, Business Systems are designed to fit different ends.

In your business, Mr. Retailer, Business Systems, instead of being "too expensive," are time savers and an actual economy.

You can understand why a system that posts your books and writes out your bills at the same time, is economical, can't you?

That's only one of the things Business Systems will do for you.

* * * * * *

Let us tell you more.

Drop us a post card and we will send you all the details.

It will only cost you a cent to know more.

BUSINESS SYSTEMS LIMITED
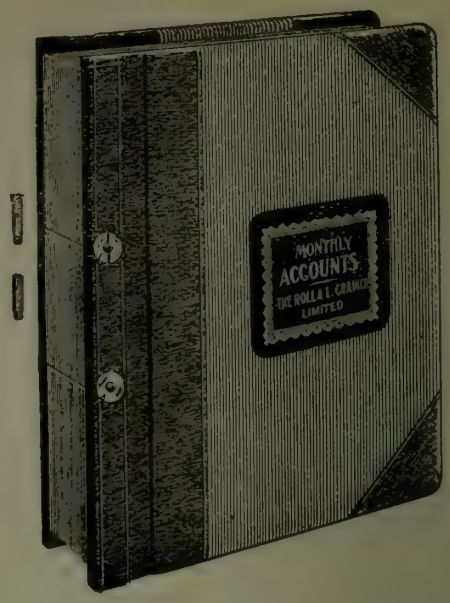
85 SPADINA AVE.
TORONTO, CANADA

A Perfect System Means No Loss

A loss in time, labor and money indicates a fault in the System.

The Crain Continuous Systems



will save time, will save labor, therefore must save money.

You are so taken up with the details of your business that you crowd the most important part of the business—the book keeping. Then why not make this all-important part of your establishment, simple, accurate and time-saving?

The Crain Monthly Account System with one writing will keep your accounts up to the hour. With it accounts are always ready to hand out. It is only half the labor and costs no more. Then why not have the best?

This is only one of the many Systems we manufacture, but it is the all-important one for the busy merchant or manufacturer who has accounts to render.

Write us for particulars.

BUOYANCY

What a welcome sound that word has !
It means life, energy, success in business, as truly as when the sensation possesses a person's feelings.

impart just that happy condition to the grocer's languishing trade.

jars and packages are dainty in appearance and look well on your shelves. Buyers are often influenced by the outside appearance of the packages and it is to your benefit to stock only those goods which are contained in dainty and attractive packages, providing of course you can rely upon the quality of the goods inside. With C. & B. goods the superior appearance of the jars, glasses, etc., is merely an indication of the superior quality of what is inside, and you can rely on every consumer finding that the goods in every way come up to their appearance. C. & B. on our wrappers is a guarantee of the quality of the contents.

BRADSTREET'S
Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World
Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

Reputation and Profit

The wise grocer is just as anxious to secure a high reputation as he is to make money. Since both are essential to lasting success it is evidently short-sighted policy to stock an inferior brand of canned goods. You clinch both Reputation and Profit by stocking the housewife's favorite, the far-famed because that brand is simply a revelation of sterling goodness through and through. Some competitors wonder because we don't claim more in our advertising, but we prefer to let Old Homestead Brand prove our claims.

Let your customers decide for us. If you've never carried Old Homestead Brand let's ship you a trial order and we're willing to stand by the decision of your customers.

There's just another interesting reason for stocking

a cash reason—there's more profit, direct and indirect, in handling Old Homestead Brand of canned goods than any other most grocers know about.

Yes, you clinch both reputation and profit by stocking Old Homestead Brand.

The Old Homestead Canning Co.

During the First 3 Months of 1907

increase over the same period of 1906 amounted to 25½ per cent., and in 1906 its increase over 1905 amounted to 23 per cent.

If we continue for the next nine (9) years in the same ratio of increase we will be doing as much in "SALADA" alone as the total importation of tea into Canada now amounts to.

Greig's White Swan Flaked Wheat is a Winner

Made only from the finest selected Canadian wheat, it is distinguished for the large, thin flakey flakes that make it so vastly different from any other wheat produced in Canada. There is no comparison in it with ordinary kinds of rolled wheat. Its outstanding merit places it in a class by itself, and it readily commands the trade of particular people. All barrels are attractively lined with crinkled tissue paper, thus ensuring freshness and cleanliness at all times. Samples and quotations at your station will be cheerfully furnished on request.

SOME PROBLEMS OF THE GROCERY TRADE

Address of Great Interest delivered by Wm. Georgeson before the Winnipeg Retail Grocers' Association.

At a meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association of Winnipeg, held in the association rooms on Thursday evening of last week, William Georgeson, of the Codville-Georgeson Co., delivered an interesting address. He presented a strong argument for trade organizations, making plain the distinction between organization for legitimate protection of trade interests and organization for depredation. With the latter he had no sympathy, and he thought it unfair that the newspapers and magazines should create the impression that all trade organizations are formed for the purpose of plundering the public. Instancing the need of proper trade organization, he stated that before the organization of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild one wholesale house had only $4,000 profits at the end of a business year to divide among 14 partners.

The question of the proper limits of wholesale and retail trade is a vexed one and it is a question which is often avoided. Mr. Georgeson dealt with it frankly and boldly, claiming for the wholesale trade the right to sell to contractors, railway companies and restaurants with stores in connection with them, but conceding to the retail trade all hotels and boarding-houses.

Good to Get Together.

On being introduced by President E. B. Nixon, Mr. Georgeson spoke in part as follows :—

I am indebted to this association for the privilege of being present this evening to discuss with you matters of mutual concern, and to offer my assistance for the benefit of all interested to improve conditions in the trade. It is fitting and proper that we should come together, as we are come to-night, to exchange views and thereby to help each other. No possible harm can be done by such an undertaking and much good may result.

The lot of a retail grocer, as a rule, is not a happy one. Retail grocers who have been successful to a marked degree, who have attained great prominence in their communities, or who have added materially to the wealth of the town or city in which they live, are few and far between, and when material success has been achieved, it can be traced usually to some outside venture, such as, for instance, an investment in real estate. For the others (and they are a vast majority) life is one round of drudgery and hard work to the end. Very few indeed in Canada have been able to obtain a competency, and many have fallen by the wayside. In almost every other line of legitimate trade a business may be built up to such an extent that the future offers to the worker a measure of relief in old age from the strain he has been undergoing, but in the retail grocery trade, as a rule, such is not the case.

Too Many in Business.

The primary cause of this is that there are too many engaged in the business. In the old days, when the father decided that one or another of his sons was not equipped to take up the practice of law or medicine, or to make a name for himself in letters, he sent his boy to a divinity school preparatory to his entering the ministry. This, it is said, is why there are so many ministers. In these days, when all other commercial ventures fail, very many deem themselves competent to go into business as a grocer. This is why there are so many grocers. In this connection it is only fair to say that sufficient attention is not given by the wholesale dealer to the qualifications of his prospective customer before opening an account.

A second reason is that the volume of trade is too small, and that the profits, generally speaking, are insufficient.

Another reason is the notable absence of a community of interests. This is a day of centralization of effort which involves an economic principle, and which in spite of its importance, has heretofore received insufficient attention from members of this branch of trade.

Best Remedy.

What, then, is the best way to remedy these difficulties ? How may these and other evils be checked ? The answer to these questions may be found in this and similar associations. In a compact, well-rounded organization, plans which will secure to the grocer a living profit on the commodities he has to sell may be formulated and worked out. How may retail grocers realize this "living profit" ? The number is not large. The trade knows that a large proportion of their sales show a less percentage of profit than the cost of running the business and that these commodities therefore are being sold at a loss.

In these days when the public and the press are clamoring so loudly against "trusts" and "machines" and "organizations" it is difficult to draw the line between institutions organized for protection and institutions organized for depredation. In the magazine or newspaper article the whole trust question seems to be very simple, but in actuality it becomes a most complicated study. This much, however, is certain, that no reasonable objection can be made to any combination or arrangement that has for its intention the securing of a living profit upon any commodity. The principle of limited prices is in force in various branches of the wholesale trade. It has been found successful in operation and not unfair to the consumer. There is no reason, therefore, why the practice should not be extended to the retail trade.

Selling to the Trade Only.

One of the most troublesome subjects to deal with is the sale by wholesale dealers to those outside the trade. It is certainly difficult to draw the line between those who should, and those who should not, buy goods at wholesale. The general rule should apply that consumers are the legitimate trade of the retailer. Railway companies, railway contractors and contractors generally are, in many cases, heavy purchasers, and have always been considered the proper trade of the wholesale merchant, and any suggestion that this class should not buy their goods at wholesale would be regarded as absurd. They, of course, keep stores for the sale of goods, and while these sales are largely local in character, yet they come within the scope of traders and must be so regarded. The same rule should apply to restaurants, where goods are sold, even though a large percentage of the purchases are for local consumption. All other classes, hotels, boarding houses and private families, are reasonably the trade of the retail grocer. The line should be sharply drawn as to these classes, and under no circumstances should they be permitted to buy from the wholesale dealer. It is difficult at times to refuse to sell to those intimately associated with the business, but it is nevertheless an injustice to the retailer to do so.

Credit.

The credit system is a most troublesome one for the retail grocer to deal with. Departmental stores have, in many cases, been able to make a success of selling for cash only, but, as a rule, the retail grocer has been obliged to suit the convenience of his customers by "charging" his purchases, and this means doing business on credit with its consequent evils. A close collecting grocer is obliged to have regard to the troubles that abound amongst his customers—heavy household expenses, sickness in the family, failure of the provider to secure employment and other difficulties of a similar nature—to say nothing of having to await the results of ventures of a speculative character. This is altogether apart from the general trouble that so many are prone to, namely, that of living beyond one's means. It is most unfair that the retail grocer should be an enforced contributor to charity because of the credit system. This is especially aggravating when it is taken into account that what he sells shows such a meagre profit. It is abundantly manifest that if the credit system is to be maintained some drastic measures should be taken to provide for prompt collection of all accounts. This can best be accomplished by an arrangement that will include all grocers in an organization, having for one of its cardinal principles the prompt payment of all accounts on or before a given date in each month ; failure to so pay meaning the closing of the account without fear or favor or regard to persons. By arranging with the wholesale trade that none but members of the association shall be eligible as customers, much will be done to strengthen the hands of the retail trade. I am safe in saying that any reasonable plans that will assist in putting the retail grocery trade on such a basis that it will at least show a fair return on the capital invested and fair remuneration for services rendered, will meet with the hearty support of all wholesale grocers.

Suggestions for Improvement.

It is difficult to imagine that ideal conditions in the retail grocery trade can be brought about, but I do feel, and feel very strongly, that steps should be taken without delay to secure much needed improvements. I think there is much food for reflection on the following subjects :

1st. The protection of the trade so that it will be kept in legitimate channels and that only competent persons should be supported in the business.

2nd. That what is sold should bear a living profit and a fair return for capital invested.

3rd. That discrimination by manufacturers favoring one retailer over another should be abolished.

4th. That the selling by wholesalers to consumers should cease.

5th. That the evils of the credit system should be minimized.

I take it that these subjects will furnish sufficient food for reflection for at least one evening.

At the conclusion of Mr. Georgeson's remarks he was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

BACK FROM EUROPE.

D. J. Rattray, of D. Rattray & Sons, general commission merchants, Montreal, has just returned from an extended tour through Europe, visiting Spain, France, Italy, England and Scotland, in the firm's interests. Mr. Rattray devoted much of his time looking into conditions in the dried fruit business, and putting before their correspondents the interests and wants of the Canadian trade. This firm's business has increased tremendously during the last few years, and their success is due to a great extent to the periodical trips made to Europe and elsewhere, which not only posts their correspondents but also puts them in a position to give reliable information to their trade throughout Canada and the States.

J. D. King, for 18 years in business in Wingham, died there recently. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter. A good business man and an enthusiastic horseman, he enjoyed the respect of the community and had a large circle of personal friends. The business is being continued by his sons.

AGENCY WANTED.

A WELL known provision house of over 40 years standing in the United Kingdom, with a large staff of travellers calling upon the leading grocers (wholesale and retail), is open to represent a sound Canadian firm of packers. Address "Proprietary," care of Street's, 30 Cornhill, London, England.

AGENCIES

Well connected salesman, covering Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for first-class house, will shortly open in Winnipeg as "Manufacturers' Agent," with facilities for storage, etc., calling upon wholesale and retail trade. 511 Union Bank Building, Winnipeg, Man.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

BROCKVILLE.

One of the biggest seasons for maple syrup for some time is the present one, there being plenty of syrup and sugar coming in all the time. Prices running from 80c. to $1 per gallon; sugar selling at 10c. per pound.

The canned vegetable line has been rather quiet during the winter, not so many tomatoes being sold as in former seasons; no doubt owing to the advanced prices. Corn and peas are selling rather better than in other seasons.

Now that the boats have started to run again, things commence to look like summer. The ferry boat to and from Morristown has been running for a couple of weeks, while the Riverside and Island Belle are on their respective routes.

The First Celebration, which is to be made an annual affair, to be held on 1st of July, seems to be an assured success. At a small but enthusiastic meeting of citizens held recently the following officers were elected to look after the event:

W. C. McLaren, president.
H. A. Stewart, vice-president.
J. A. Derbyshire, secretary.
W. A. Gilmour, treasurer.

Mayor J. H. Fulford was unanimously elected honorary president.

Committees were then named to take in charge the different sports.

On motion it was decided to call the organization the Brockville Citizens' Association formed to further celebrations and other events for the interest of the town.

A meeting of a number of citizens of Brockville was held last evening for the purpose of forming a co-operative bakery company. The object of the organization is to furnish to shareholders of company a loaf of bread weighing one and one-half pounds for four cents. The residents of the town are now paying six cents. Provisional officers were elected as follows.

President. W. F. Chapman.
Vice-president, W. P. Carswell.
Secretary-treasurer, D. C. McIntyre.

Shares are to be sold at $2 per share. Each shareholder may get one loaf per day for each share he holds, but no more. No one but shareholders will be dealt with.

The council of the Board of Trade held their regular meeting on Thursday evening, the 18th inst, with the President, J. H. Gilmour, in the chair. Communications were received from the Boards of Trade of several towns asking for the cost of printing by-laws, etc.

Rev. D. Strachan intimated that he had a donation of $100 to be allotted in prizes for the best kept lawns in front of private residences.

The council expressed its appreciation of the action of the president, J. H. Gilmour, in the giving of prizes for essays on Town Improvements.

A special committee was appointed to place before the town council a by-law to prohibit dogs running at large.

A committee was also named to wait on council in regard to advertising Brockville.

CHATHAM.

Clarence Blackburn is the latest addition to John McCorvie's grocery stoff.

Ald. Wm. Potter was acting-mayor in the absence of Mayor Stone last week.

Joseph Graham, the King street west butcher, returned from London last week with a bride, in the person of Miss Lillian Evans, daughter of Geo. Evans, of Wellington street, London. The ceremony took place at St. Mary's church, London, on Tuesday, the 16th, Rev. Father McKeon officiating. Mr. Graham's many friends here join in wishing the young couple every happiness.

E. A. Mounteer, the well known baker, was the first Chathamite to experiment in the burning of ashes. He reports good results.

The consensus of opinion among local merchants is that Saturday last was the biggest day this year.

The Chatham Table Supply Co., composed of W. & F. Baby, have disposed of their business to a St. Catharines firm. The new proprietors will take charge on May 1st.

Fight Co-operatives.

The local Retail Merchants' Association came out vigorously against the co-operative bill introduced into the Dominion House by F. D. Monk, M.P.

A special meeting of the local executive was held on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 17th, at which the bill was considered in its various aspects. The consensus of opinion was that the passage of the measure would prove very detrimental to the interests of retail merchants.

Immediately after the meeting the local association telegraphed D. A. Gordon, M.P., and H. S. Clements, M.P., asking their assistance in having the bill laid over. Geo. Stephens, ex-M.P., gave valuable assistance, telegraphing to a large number of members. On Friday Mr. Stephens received word that the bill would not be further taken up at this session.

The local association are quite elated at the blocking of the measure.

INGERSOLL.

It is a recognized fact that one of the best advertisements that a grocer can have is a neat and attractive waggon. In this respect W. I. Hogarth is right up to the minute. His deliveries are now being made in a handsome waggon, which, while built with an eye to durability, is light and can be turned in very little space, a point that is very important, particularly at this season of the year when a driver has to exercise care in avoiding boulevards and lawns.

A gloom was cast over the town on Thursday last on the receipt of the sad intelligence of the death of Fred Gayfer, at Wataskawin, Alberta. The deceased, who was only in his 39th year, went to the west from Ingersoll about six years ago, engaging in the drug business with marked success. For several years he conducted the drug business at the corner of Thames and King streets here, and he was widely known and universally esteemed. He was a brother of J. E. Gayfer, druggist of this town, and is survived by a widow and three children. The late Mr. Gayfer was widely known in western Ontario, having at one time taken a very prominent part in athletics. He was a member of the old champion lacrosse team of this town, and for several years was an enthusiastic curler.

It is with deep regret that citizens learned that I. W. Kingswood, who recently disposed of his grocery business to McBain & McLeod, had been seized with an attack of smallpox. Mr. Kingswood had been ill for a few days, and on Friday last his ailment was diagnosed as smallpox. On Saturday he was removed to the isolation hospital, where he is progressing favorably. His many friends will hope for a speedy recovery.

A great deal of interest is centred on Reeve Buchanan's by-law to regulate the handling of bread. The by-law, which was introduced at the last meeting of the council, provides that the bread be either wrapped in paper or placed in a paper bag. The question that is now being debated is: "Who will pay for the additional expense?" A great many citizens argue that it will be the consumer, as is very often the case. The other aldermen are saying little or nothing on the matter, but from what your correspondent could gather there is every probability of the by-law being defeated. The chief contention against the by-law is that it will incur too much expense for the bakers to provide loaves of the weight as at present at the usual prices. It is generally admitted that every effort should be taken to have the bread delivered in the most sanitary way possible, but if steps in this direction will lessen the quantity the feeling seems to be that it will be a hardship for the consumer.

According to reports, the fruit growers of this vicinity will suffer heavily by the repeated frosts. The premature warm weather of the early part of the month caused the cane on the berry bushes to produce their tender buds, and when the frosts came the result was that the raspberry bushes were almost totally destroyed. Thimbleberries, although suffering heavily, are not injured to such an extent as the red ones.

The loss to fruit consumers, as well as growers, will not be inconsiderable, as these two berries are the most popular in the eyes of the majority of housewives, and when the necessarily limited supply comes in the prices will, no doubt, be advanced considerably over those of former years.

Fall wheat has also been seriously damaged by the frosts. The constant thawing and freezing has bulged the grain out of the ground until the roots have been broken, the result being that in many sections large patches have been killed entirely.

KINGSTON.

Kingston merchants benefitted by large orders for supplies for the crew and party going to Simpson Island, somewhere near the north pole, I guess, from the amount of stuff bought. A. Maclean & Co. got nearly a five thousand dollar order, meat, flour, tea, etc. J. S. Henderson, 1,000 lbs. coffee and extras. W. P. Peters, flour merchant, sold them three thousand dollars worth of flour, feed, etc. The party was mostly made up of Frenchmen hailing from Quebec.

A. Maclean, wholesale grocer, took a trip to Jamaica with his wife and enjoyed it very much. He just escaped being there during the earthquake. A. Maclean does a large meat business, employing a lot of men. His son Andrew looks after the wholesale grocery department.

Robt. Crawford, coal dealer, bought the old premises once occupied as a wholesale grocery by Fenwick, Hendry & Co. for $4,500. It has a good water front and is valuable; should have brought $15,000.

N. C. Polson & Co., wholesale druggists, are doing a large export trade. They are cramped for room and must shortly look for larger premises. It is a busy place and the click of typewriting would deafen you.

The good-looking jeweler called for Jim the grocer and took him to the Board of Trade rooms to listen to a lecture by Professor Ellis, of the collegiate institute, on the early days in Canada. He spoke for two hours, and was listened to by a delighted audience. He spoke of the Indian warfare, invasions, sieges, etc.

He dwelt on Kingston for a considerable time and said that he always had the highest respect for it from the fact that it was venerable, being the oldest city of note in the province and just the place for the Dominion Historical Society to meet. If they come they will be well used and shown many old landmarks, forts, towers, etc.

The only objection to the lecture by the Grocer was that he said Johnston street should be spelled without the "t." The grocer said it was an injustice to the trade to leave out T. This caused a laugh and made everyone feel good.

W. Pickering is settled in his new store on Princess street and will make things lively for his neighbors in trade. His store is neat and full of good things to eat. He has a meat shop in connection. Half of the grocers run meat shops now and the butchers don't like it.

Some of our best grocery stores are models of antiquity. They pay no attention to window dressing or store decoration and their places look sloppy.

They get into a rut and can't look over it. Jim the grocer was out one day on horseback and a little boy looked at him a-while, then said: "Mister, why don't you jump off and look at yourself?" This advice would apply strongly to some of the careless retailers whose windows speak to the passers-by of the negligence of the inmates.

The Larder Lake syndicate, with headquarters in Ottawa, sent its agent up to Kingston and scooped in a lot of hard-earned cash. May it turn out well.

The real estate men have got the people into a stampede. They are like fishermen who put all kinds of baits on the hook to catch the suckers—Silver frogs, birds, spoons, nuggets, etc.

Never venture, never win. Larder Lake seems to be in the lead just now and we hope to see coppers turn into gold sovereigns.

The finest maple syrup in Canada is being sold here by makers from Delta and Elgin for 80c. and 90c. a gallon. There is a lot of mixed stuff sold here and the Government inspector will likely call at two or three places to get samples and send them to Ottawa for analysis just to let the department know he exists. What rot! Just like the baker when he had his bread seized for being light. He mourned his loss until his help said: "What's the use whining? They won't be around again for a year. Can't you make it up?" Then the baker wore a smile again and was happy.

Bread wholesales here for $1.10 for 26 one and a half pound loaves and retails for 5c., making $1.30 a dozen. The bakers here make exceptionally good bread and the greater part of the choice butter spread on it comes from the Victoria Creamery, Lindsay. This creamery had the honor of supplying Government House, Toronto, during the Duke and Duchess of York's visit to Canada, so it has been used by royalty.

The Government Dairy School is closed. The students have gone to their homes and only Prof. Mitchell is seen around the buildings. It looks lonely, for there is generally a jolly lot attends.

Mr. Stonehouse, the genial overseer of the butter department, has gone back to Port Perry to open up his factory. The reason so many butter factories close up during the winter is on account of the farmers feeding turnips to their cattle. Why can't they use mangolds or sugar beets? They are certainly injuring themselves by the turnip habit.

LONDON.

The first of this season's cheese has appeared on the local market—a week or two earlier than usual. The cheese is of very good quality, and retail grocers are paying 12c. to 12½c. per pound for it.

As a result of the efforts of the Retail Grocers' Association, the price-cutting in canned goods and sugars, which has been indulged in by certain retailers for some time, has been prevented from spreading to other stores, and those who have been engaged in underselling promise to quit it as soon as they decently can. After all, the regular trade has not been seriously affected by this cutting, which, it seems, is not the drawing card to the housekeeper it once was.

The Retail Grocers' Association will meet shortly to make arrangements for their annual picnic. Last summer the grocers failed to agree on a place in which to hold the event, some favoring Niagara Falls, where it had been held for years, and others preferring Detroit. The result was, as neither side would give way, two excursions were held on the same day—one to the Falls and the other to Detroit. This year it is hoped all will unite on a trysting place.

Notwithstanding the agitation of the local grocers for telephone competition the city council has given the Bell Co. an exclusive franchise for another three years. There were two things that assisted in putting the franchise the Bell people's way. In the first place, the so-called independent company failed to satisfy the council that they were able to "deliver the goods"; as a matter of fact not having any organization or anything in the nature of plant on the ground and being unable to show that they could get things in readiness in the near future. Then the Bell Co.'s proposition included an offer of $4,000 a year bonus, which, at a time when the assessment rate was being fixed, and every effort was being made to keep it down, was no small matter to the aldermen. The grocers, however, are not discouraged, feeling that the agitation has had good effect in an educative way, and they hope that by the time the present franchise expires the possibility of obtaining relief from the monopoly will be vastly improved.

In retail lines business is quiet. Wholesalers report a fair movement in staple lines, the time of the year considered. The backward state of the season and the wretched condition of country roads have had the natural effect on trade, but with warmer weather and the roads drying out, business is sure to take on fresh life. There is little change in wholesalers' prices. Sugars remain very stiff. Teas keep very high and very little is being imported. Stocks in hand are still considerable. A great amount of second-hand teas have recently been sold by brokers at substantial profits to the holders, but at the same time much below what they can be imported for to-day. These lots have been pretty well disposed of, and dealers will very soon be forced to buy in the regular way.

A western Ontario canner, while in the city to-day, informed your correspondent that trade has been very good all through the season. He further stated that, outside of gallon apples, for which there is quite a large demand in the old country, the export trade to the British market is very limited. Very little of other lines of fruits and vegetables is sent abroad. Being a member of the Canners, Ltd., this gentleman naturally thinks the factories at present in operation possess capacity sufficient to supply all the canned goods required, and declares that if all the talked-of factories are started the business will be overdone.

John T. May, for seventeen years with D. S. Perrin & Co., manufacturers of biscuits and confectionery, has goine into the retail grocery business, having opened out a fine store at 346 Kildout street, with a large and varied stock. His many friends wish him the best success.

NOVA SCOTIA NOTES.

Windsor, N.S., can boast of a store as much up to date as any in the provinces. Murphy & DeMont keep one of the best assortments of fine groceries to be found in any grocery store and are strictly up-to-date in every respect. A few days ago they had a fine display of Shield Brand coffee, and later followed it up by another, of Magic baking powder. Both of these displays proved great attractions.

Frank Lynch, Windsor, N.S., carries a fine line of groceries, etc., at his popular store on the outskirts of the city. His trade shows a steady increase right along, and his prices are right.

A. W. Hart, representing Lynch Bros. & Dolan, the well known firm of biscuit manufacturers, has worked up a fine trade for his firm in the Annapolis valley and western Nova Scotia. Mr. Hart is a hard, conscientious worker and knows how to talk his line of goods.

Jas. G. Harris, representing the Stewart Confectionery Co., Toronto, is working Nova Scotia. It will not be Jas. G's fault if every store in the province does not stock these superior goods, which give the best satisfaction wherever they are handled.

Capt. Chas. Davidson, Hantsport, N.S., reports business as opening up very well. As soon as the roads are in good shape business will be good in the Annapolis valley. The firm of J. Frank Crowe & Co., Halifax, do a large business in the Annapolis valley, their representative being very popular.

Cowan's Perfection Cocoa is doing some very effective advertising in the Annapolis valley, their signs and advertising matter being very effective.

Another attractive piece of advertising at present being used in this part of the country is E. W. Gillett Co.'s pamphlet, printed in colors, showing the goods which this well known firm manufacture. The whole book is got up in a superior style.

W. H. Stephens has sold his grocery store in Wolfville to H. A. Barss of that town. Mr. Stephens will leave for the great northwest shortly, where he will permanently reside. He is a pushing young business man who will make his mark wherever he may put out his shingle.

Quite a number of farmers in the Annapolis valley will this year plant cucumbers and tomatoes for the pickle manufacturers. This should be a profitable business to the farmers.

Farm produce is exceedingly high this spring. Eggs, 20c. to 25c. per doz.; pork, 9c. per pound; potatoes, very few and prices high; hay away up. It pays to farm this year down this way.

A. J. Laurence, of McCormack's Jersey Cream biscuits, has worked up a wonderful trade for his goods in the valley and south shore of Nova Scotia. Arthur is at home in every section of his territory, and no more popular traveler visits the trade.

Our friend, R. W. Gruchy, the flour man, is still selling his flour by the carload. He is one of the oldest and best known flour men of the province, and with a good firm back of him it is no wonder he does a good trade.

Cigar men come and go, but A. A. McClaskey goes on forever. No man ever had the unbounded success selling cigars our friend has had. His sales of cigars are simply enormous; every man who handles cigars, and most every man who smokes them, is a friend of McClaskey.

PETERBOROUGH.

M. Carton, of this city, has disposed of his grocery stock in New Liskeard. Mr. Carton formerly conducted a wholesale grocery in this city and at that time had a very large connection among the grocers of the Cobalt district and he has decided to retire from active life entirely. Chas. Rucher is conducting the wholesale house here now and he has met with considerable success.

The annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association was held Thursday night when the officers and standing committees were elected. The meeting also arranged for the big banquet mentioned in these columns last week. A strong committee was appointed and they will arrange for the speakers and carry out the banquet, which will be held in the near future.

The retail merchants, especially the grocers and fruit dealers, are very angry with the city council. The merchants have been compelled to take down their signs and have been forbidden to place any goods upon the streets. Fruit must not even be exposed, according to the new by-law. At the same time, the council has been very negligent as far as street watering is concerned and on Saturday and Monday a lot of damage was done to stocks. The merchants have made it so uncomfortable for some of the aldermen that when the deputation appears before the council on Monday night it is firmly believed that the sign by-law will be repealed. A couple of the aldermen have changed their minds and will vote for an amendment.

Navigation on the Otonabee River was opened last Saturday when the first steamer from Rice Lake came up. This boat brings up a good crowd of marketers and on the first trip carried about fifty. A couple of the ports where the Monarch usually calls were still blocked with ice, but by next Saturday the ice will have all disappeared, and probably a hundred and fifty farmers will be brought up.

The supplementary estimates brought down in the Dominion House provide $1,200 for a new wharf on the river in this city. This improvement will greatly assist navigation and will provide much better accommodation for farmers coming to the city by boat and it is expected that a larger number than ever will avail themselves of this mode of travel during 1907.

The cereal companies are both complaining yet about the shortage of grain. The firms have lots of grain stored at their northern elevators but there are not enough cars to carry it. The receipts of grain have improved very little during the past few weeks and it is never known when they will have to close down for a half day.

While there has not been much said of late about the retail grocers organizing, interest in the scheme has by no means died out. The grocers are individually working, not so much with others as with themselves. They wonder why they have not been organized long ago. They every one realize the advantage it would be to them in buying stock alone, to say nothing of the control of trade. Still they feel that the public would become suspicious that they were charging too much and go some place else, probably to a merchant who made a boast that he was not connected with the association. The merchants also feel that if they joined an association the other grocers would become acquainted with their business and take advantage of them.

This week one of the oldest grocers in the city expressed his views on this question to The Grocer's correspondent. He had figured on the thing for a long time and his decision was that practically all the ill-feeling existing between merchants was purely imaginary. "We grocers," he said, "do not know each other. There are lots of merchants here that I do not know, only to see them on the street. I have never met them socially and very seldom in a business way. I know that lots of the merchants consider that they have a grevience against another grocer. But that grivience would amount to nothing if the men concerned were acquainted. I believe this banquet the retail merchants purpose to hold will be a good thing. It will bring us fellows together in a social way and that is the only way to establish confidence in one another. Then at the annual meeting I propose to advocate a revival of the Retail Merchants' Association. It has been dead for a long time and there are many things at the present time which require a united front to handle. The scheme I have in my mind is that a regular meeting be held once a month or once every two weeks and after the routine business is through that we have a little social time for an hour, during which we can have some mode of entertainment and talk over business and political matters. I believe that that is the only way to overcome the petty jealousies among business men. Once we are personally acquainted we will understand each other. Our ideas will be broadened and we will come to understand that every man is in business for himself and because one fellow takes a progressive step it is not to injure his fellow man, but to better himself. If one man is more up-to-date than the rest of us we have only ourselves to blame. A good live organization, no matter whether it be only grocers or the Retail Merchants' Association, would soon dispose of the trivial matters which are now causing so much trouble."

ST. CATHARINES.

In the matter of managing their business and arranging goods, a merchant must be up to date in his ideas if he wishes to secure and retain his customers. The old-fashioned notion of having store shelves up to the ceiling, when a stepladder was required to bring down the goods has vanished and a modern system inaugurated in its place by which the goods could more readily be reached. This system is in vogue in St. Catharines. As to the classifying and exhibit of goods, that is a matter of choice. Some grocers prefer to have one specialty for exhibition and some another. Cards announcing arrival of early spring vegetables or other commodities for spring use are got out so that the passer-by will be attracted and thus induced to purchase, though he or she may never have been a customer. Merchants in St. Catharines not only take this method of informing the people of the lines of goods they handle but they go farther, and announce through the newspapers of other places their inducements for people to come and deal with them. One grocer—well, he is a grocer, but deals in a variety of articles, such as fancy toys, crockery, glassware and a host of other kinds of goods and who also has a fine window display—ex-Alderman James T. Petrie, and who calls his emporium the "American Bazaar," at the inaugural opening of the branch electric railway from Fonthill offered great inducements for the outside public to trade at his store and he was successful in obtaining their patronage. In almost every grocery store the telephone comes into daily active use and then again the merchants have drivers and wagons—or sleighs, as required—so that the orders are promptly filled and as quickly delivered. The old system of long time book accounts with customers has become a thing of the past. Nearly all of the grocers have the "cash" system or "short time accounts," as is necessary in some instances, for Government employes receive their pay only once a month and as the close season of navigation lasts for months these men will scarcely have any ready money when springtime comes and work begins. Many of the manufacturers pay their employes each fortnight; others pay weekly, so that in all instances "short time accounts" are admissible.

Farming operations have been at a standstill owing to the cold, raw weather. Little ploughing and seeding has been done. Still this class seem to be getting along very well and the pay they receive for the commodities they offer is very good. The market has been well patronized lately and ready sales are made at the prices quoted: Hay, at $15 to $16 per ton, and there were many loads on Saturday; potatoes, 70 to 80 cents per bushel; chickens, 14 to 16 cents per lb.; turkeys, 20 to 22 cents per lb.; butter, 25 to 28 cents; wood, $5 to $6.50 per cord; eggs, 18 cents dozen; beef, per hundred pounds, $8 to $9; pork, $8 to $8.50; veal, $8 to $9; mutton, $10 to $11; straw, per load, $5; early vegetables and luxuries, such as lettuce, onions, asparagus, radishes, brought good prices. Choice potted plants in bloom, among them being a load of white lillies, brought handsome prices.

William Davidson, formerly of the merchant milling firm of Black & Davidson, on St. Paul Street, has opened out a flour and feed and vegetable store. Mr. Davidson is well and favorably known and should command a fair share of public patronage.

The canning companies have begun spring operations, though not in canning goods for the market. The proprietors are negotiating and contracting with farmers and gardeners for rhubarb, strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, tomatoes and other commodities for the season's business. There are six canneries in St. Catharines, all of them manufacturing and preparing different kinds of goods for domestic and foreign trade. Large quantities of canned fruits etc., are consumed in this city, and as there are numerous small towns and villages in the Niagara peninsula the canners of this city have an extensive trade.

HAMILTON.

The Retail Grocers' Association are going to ask the city council to pass a by-law regulating hawkers, pedlars and transient traders, along the lines of the new bill passed by the Ontario Legislature last session.

This city has been over-run with tea pedlars and others from London, Toronto and Guelph, and the grocers have lost a goodly share of business through the pedlar and his one line. Consumers have been imposed on by these fakirs, leaving caddies of tea to be paid for when the agent calls again, and strange to say they get their money when the grocer who supplies the sugar and soap gets beat out of his account.

Another grievance is the fruit pedlar. These people are mostly Italians, who are here in scores, huddled together in tenements where cleanliness is not next of kin. Your Kingston correspondent says that down there they sleep on the bananas to ripen them. Possibly that's what adds to the flavor of the Kingston bananas. However, the grocers are after them. They are willing to give them the same privileges as themselves—but no special license to peddle.

The annual picnic agitation is on. It will be held in July at Niagara Falls and, of course, will be a record breaker.

"FOLLOW-UP."

In modern business organization and system some form of "follow-up" is regarded as highly important, essential both to the holding and extension of trade and as the only means of reaping the legitimate fruits of advertising. Very few retail grocers have even thought of such a thing, and yet modern grocery conditions are such that some simple device for keeping tab on casual and likely customers so as to keep in touch with them seems a necessity. A lady comes in response to an advertisement; whether she buys or not, if her name and address can be ascertained, the grocer should devise some means of keeping her in touch with the business. Then there's the summer visitors', campers' and tourists' trade. That is becoming important in many parts of Canada and should be looked after systematically. Here also the "follow-up" will be found not only serviceable, but essential.

WHAT TO DO NEXT MONTH.

About this time every grocer should go to the back of the lot, into the cellar or up on the roof, some place where he can be alone for five minutes, and think out what he should be doing next month. Things go so much better if they are planned out a little ahead. We asked one of the brightest grocers in an Ontario city, and under the caption "What will we do next month?" he sent us this:

"We will certainly clean up. The cold weather has made everything look shabby. We will paint the front, air the cellar, look over the stock and reduce the price of goods that are slow sellers.

"We will make better arrangements for the sale of our own brands or blends of tea and coffee. We can do ourselves a heap of good along this line, and we know it, but we want somebody to sic us on. We know something about tea and coffee ourselves and we are going to prove it, not let the lead package man walk all over us. We are going to help along this Retail Grocers' Association, if somebody will only take hold of it and give us a chance to join.

"I will write to Mr. Beckett and ask him to make a move at it. Will you write to him? That will help the boys along with their petition for Wednesday afternoons off during the summer. I will hunt up my fishing rod and line and get a day off."

SHREWDNESS OR OBSTINACY?

The Woodstock Express is doing what it can to consummate the proposition of some London capitalists to establish a canning factory in the former city. The company want a loan of $15,000, and the ratepayers appear to be somewhat backward in displaying that enthusiasm for which The Express is trying to give them credit. It deprecates a timidity which can be so blind to its own interests as to turn down such a gilt-edged proposition. It points with pride to Woodstock's rapidly increasing industrial development, to the inestimable benefits which would inevitably accrue to the city from the acceptance of such an opportunity, and views with alarm the equally incalculable detriment to civic progress which would follow its rejection. But some of the ratepayers are evidently of Scotch persuasion, and like to be sure of their ground. The point is—Can they afford to be too canny?

REFORM THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Orillia Board of Trade is reaching out for help in its campaign for civil service reform. It is calling on the boards of trade throughout the Dominion to endorse its proposal that the service be placed on a basis of competitive examinations. Promotion by examination may not be the perfect way, but it would be infinitely better than making the public service the reward of ignorant, unthinking partisanship. The other day the board of Kentville, N.S., approved by resolution the Orillia proposal, and every board of trade in Canada should do so without delay.

BUSINESS MEN AND JURIES.

Public duty is a fine thing, and every man owes it to his city or town, or to his country, to a greater or lesser extent. But it can be carried to extremes. Sacrifice of personal interests for the benefit of the multitude, to serve the state, is all right if too much be not asked. Business men are too broad-minded to object to give a reasonable amount of their time and services to the Government once in a while, but when it comes to being called upon to sit in a special jury twice in four months, as happened to some Montrealers, meaning a loss of their time to business, a loss which cannot always be reckoned in money, then it is time to register a complaint. According to the present system, eighty names are taken from the grand jury list. Twenty-eight names from eighty in all are selected, but in place of the next jury being selected from the fifty-two names which remain, a new list of eighty is made out and the twenty-eight necessary jurors are therefrom selected. In this way the remaining fifty-two are treated as if they had already served on a jury while the twenty-eight who had seen service stand a chance of being again compelled to serve. The Montreal Board of Trade Council at a recent meeting decided to point out to the Government the necessity of changing this system of selecting jurors.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Rev. A. E. Burke is an industrial as well as a religious leader in Prince Edward Island. He recenty wrote to the Kentville, N.S., Advertiser: "Had a conference of the five boards of trade of the Island of Charlottetown yesterday on transportation. All boards fully represented. A resolution for tunnel, and nothing but tunnel, was unanimously and enthusiastically carried. Delegates were not divided at all, but united as a people could be." This tunnel will have to be built.

Kentville, N.S., Board of Trade has elected Rev. Canon Brock an honorary member. This led to a resolution making all clergymen within the jurisdiction of the board honorary members. This is going some, and it's going in the right direction.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

Pointers:—

Fish—Revised.
Maple products—Easier.
Provisions—Lower.
Butter—Lower.

Montreal, April 25, 1907.

Navigation not having yet opened, activity in general grocery lines has not yet commenced. There is a good general business of a hand-to-mouth character, but outside of this there is a feeling of quiet in the markets.

In canned goods, gallon apples are in good demand in certain parts of the country, while a nice business is being transacted in corn, peas and tomatoes. There is a lot of salmon selling also. Sugar is steady this week. Some are buying good sized lots at the recent advance, but the majority are content to obtain present requirements and leave it at that. Molasses is unchanged, and business in corn syrups is reported by jobbers as being not quite so brisk. Good trade is going on in teas. Japans and Ceylon greens are asked for. Stocks are becoming smaller each week. Currants are easier in Greece. Raisins are quiet, while prunes are brisk. Coffees and spices are featureless. Evaporated apples are still selling at 10 cents. Beans are in very good demand at prices quoted. Maple products are easier owing to a larger make than was expected. Provisions are easier and prices are lower. Butter has declined. Collections are good in most cases, a few complain of slow pays among their customers.

SUGAR — No further advance in sugar is expected at the moment, although conditions are such as might warrant higher prices. Granulated is scarce, and owing to the difficulties experienced by railway companies in making deliveries, raw sugar is in rather short supply. Some are buying freely at present prices but most people are conservative.

DRIED FRUITS — Except that currants are easier, this week's market is absolutely featureless. This line cannot, according to reports, go any lower and be exported, owing to Government arrangements in Greece. Raisins are quiet. Prunes are selling at prices quoted. Reports as to damage in fruit districts in California are still being circulated.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—A good steady business is going on in canned goods. Corn, peas, tomatoes and fruits are in fine demand. Stocks are in most cases sufficient to take care of the demand. Salmon is selling very freely. Gallon apples are in strong request in some quarters.

TORONTO — There is little that is interesting in the canned goods situation here. A fair trade is passing but the increased demand which spring usually brings has not yet arrived. For a week it has been told that one firm were offering future tomatoes at 85c., and it was thought to be an evidence of bad conditions. The fact is, the firm were in a deal of some kind and made a sort of sporting offer, which was taken up; but they deny that they are selling futures at anything but the opening price. Some tomatoes, held by independent canners, are offering, and there is a tendency to overestimate the quantity available.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Quiet and firm.
Rice—Very firm.
Provisions—Easier.
Cheaper butter expected this week.

Toronto, April 25, 1907.

Most wholesalers here admit that trade is quiet. Some claim to be busy with lake and rail orders for the north and west and one or two say trade is pretty active. Some continue to complain of the slowness of collections. The backward spring has undoubtedly retarded trade and the grocer shares the result. There are no features to trade this week. Even the wholesalers who are busy fail to see anything but sorting-up orders. One house said the demand for canned goods was increasing, but they were the exceptions to prove the rule of quietude. Some claim that independent canners who have held their goods gre weakening the market with offerings. Specific instances, however, were not forthcoming. There seems to be no pressure to sell on the part of the jobbers and the spring demand has not yet arrived. Sugar is quiet after the stir occasioned by the advance, but the market is regarded as firm and unlikely to decline. Rice and tapioca are firmer. Sultana raisins are costing more. Tea continues active at firm prices.

TEA.—The tea trade in Great Britain has been lagging some, pending the budget announcement. That having been made, renewed activity is assured. Illustrating the strong position of tea the world over, Thompson's Tea Circular says: "A sharp advance on the terminal market usually has the effect of attracting tea from various foreign ports, but it is significant of the healthy state of trade in the tea consuming centres of the world that the imports of tea other than British grown during the first three months of the year were barely one million pounds ahead of the previous period."

The cause of the great rise in price that has taken place in Ceylon and India teas is due in the first place to the greatly increased consumption in Great Britain, then to the fact that Russia and Germany together took 58 million pounds in 1906 against 39 millions in 1905, an increase of 19 million pounds. North America took 40 million pounds in 1906 against 32 millions in 1905, while every other market in the world took increased quantities; the total increased consumption in 1906 over 1905 being 32,577,577 lbs., or an increased consumption of over 25 per cent. outside of Great Britain alone during the year 1906 against 1905.

COFFEE.—The market continues quiet. Receipts at the Brazil ports are still large. The question is what will the next crop be and as to that opinions vary from large to small. The world's visible supply in bags, on April 1, was 15,397,742 and on March 1 it was 15,-201,422, and a year ago, 10,747,916.

SUGAR.—The market is not very interesting this week. Prices for refined remain firm at the advance but there is not much trade passing. European beet is a shade lower than last week, but spot cane raws in New York closed week before last at 3.73½ per lb. for centrifugals 96 degrees, advanced last week to 3,76½ and continued there this week. Willett & Gray's last weekly report says:

"Last week the indications were that the European beet sowings would be increased 5 per cent., but now F. O. Licht, European beet crop expert, estimates an increase in sowings of only 2½ per cent., which is favorable to market values.

"Taken in connection with the present indications for the cane crop of Cuba, these notable features have a bearing for good upon the course of prices for some time to come.

"In Cuba 134 centrals are working with receipts of 37,000 tons for the week against 183 centrals at highest point with 65,000 tons weekly receipts.

"The visible crop now is 1,110,000 tons, leaving 140,000 tons to be reported to reach our minimum estimate of 1,250,000 tons. Another week's report will probably give a basis for a maximum crop estimate.

"The tone and tendency at the close are to continued firmness, with gradually improving tendency."

The statistical situation is as follows: Total stock of Europe and America, 3,-472,199 tons, against 3,730,735 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 258,536 tons, against a decrease of 242,753 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,572,199 tons, against 3,840,735 tons last year, or a decrease of 268,536 tons.

St. John, N.B., April 22, 1907.

Meats of all kinds have advanced considerably in price during the past week. Spring lamb is commencing to come in now and is selling at $3 to $5 a carcase. Eggs are somewhat easier, case eggs selling at seventeen cents. Butter is rather scarce and the prices remain firm. No chickens are in sight and the price of fowl has gone up considerably. In wholesale lines, pork has dropped half a dollar. In the fish market the price of Grand Manan herrings has been cut down in order that the old stock may be disposed of. Fresh gaspereaux are in and are selling at $2 a hundred.

An advance of nearly ten cents is reported in the price of linseed oil. Bran by the car lots is something unknown here at present, while small lots are scarce and sell for $27 a ton.

Maple sugar and syrup is coming in quite plentifully, the former is being sold for 14 and 16 cents a pound and the latter for $1 to $1.15 a gallon. The quality is very good.

The winter port steamship business is nearing an end. Up to date 101 steamers have filed papers at the customs house for outward cargoes. The volume of the export business is not as large as the previous season but the tonnage of the steamers is greater than any other previous year. During the past week, six steamers sailed, taking away cargoes valued at $1,012,231. The total valuation for the 101 cargoes that have gone forward is as follows:

Canadian goods	$11,069,397
United States goods	5,760,140
Total	$16,829,537

Nearly 5,000,000 bushels of grain have been taken away in these steamers in addition to large quantities of flour, meats, butter, cheese, etc. There have arrived in port to date 111 steamships with a tonnage of 432,814, against 103 steamers last year with a tonnage of 355,264, showing a gain in tonnage of 77,550 tons.

The steamer Vinland, from Kingston, Jamaica, arrived in port this week with a large consignment of fruit. The steamer Orinoco, which arrived from the West Indies Saturday morning, brought 1,260 puncheons of Barbadoes molasses, 1,966 barrels of sugar, 825 bags of sugar, 150 bags of cocoa, and 650 crates of onions in her cargo.

The schooner Falmouth arrived from Fajardo, Porto Rico. last week with a cargo of molasses.

According to a statement issued by the American consul, there was an increase of $184,777.36 in the exports to the United States for the quarter ending March 31, over the same period last year. Following is the comparative statement:

Quarter ending March 31, 1907	$617,300 45
Quarter ending March 31, 1906	433,123 09
Increase for 1907	$184,777 36

The common council of St. John for the year commencing in May will have three grocers in its ranks instead of one, as is the case at present. E. M. Spragg, the Adelaide Street grocer, was successful in defeating Ald. Rowan at last Tuesday's elections by 19 votes, while W. B. Baskin, a grocer on the west side, defeated Ald. Tilley by the small margin of four votes. Alderman J. W. Vanwart was re-elected by acclamation. Geo. W. Slocum, a commission merchant in the country market was unsuccessful in his contest against Ald. Christie, meeting defeat by a two to one vote.

The south wharf was gay with bunting and flags on Wednesday last, when Charles S. E. Robertson, of the W. E. Hatheway Co., Ltd., was wedded to Miss Constance Sturdee, daughter of the late Sheriff Sturdee of this city. Among the many costly gifts received by the newly wedded couple was a chest of cutlery from the W. F. Hatheway Co., and a set of cut glass from the employes. "Charlie" is very popular in commercial circles.

Fred W. Tufts has disposed of his business in nuts and confectionery on Charlotte Street to Josh. Ward, and has accepted the position of manager of the Rockwood Park interests of the White Catering Co., Ltd. Frank White, head of the firm, has just returned from a visit to the various amusement centres of the United States, and will introduce many novel features at the park.

The Cowan Company have had a young lady demonstrator in the establishment of W. Alexander Porter, for the past week, serving cocoa.

W. Alex. Porter has returned home from a visit to Boston.

The "Two Barkers'" store on Princess Street was burglarized last Friday night, presumably by boys, as only about a dollar in cash and some groceries were removed.

Canned Goods Consumption.

Inquiries among the local retail grocers here as to the consumption of canned goods, particularly tomatoes, corn and peas, this year as compared with other years, resulted in the statement that the trade in this line is about the same as usual. Some of the dealers were of the opinion that the sales in this line were somewhat heavier than in previous years, but the majority of them thought there was but slight, if any, material change in the consumption. The demand at the present time is as usual at this time of year—fairly heavy.

Organization.

The retail grocers of St. John, N.B., appear to be very apathetic on the subject of organization. Several of the dealers called upon were of the opinion that such an organization as has been advocated by The Grocer would be a very considerable benefit to them, but they were not disposed to take the leadership in trying to form such an organization. Other dealers eemed to think that there was no need of such a body and they would not bother their heads about it.

True it is, that there are a few who endeavored some years ago to get their fellow tradesmen together to form an association for their mutual benefit. but little came of it. Several meetings were held and steps taken to elect officers and discuss plans, and then the energy oozed out, as only three or four were taking an active interest, and, finally, the scheme fell through. Some of the men who were behind the proposal at that time still feel that such an organization could be made to be of great benefit, but they are dubious of making any move in that direction again, after the first failure.

One of the largest dealers who was asked for his opinion on the matter said he could see no great need for such an organization now. There was practically no price cutting here at present. and as far as bad debts and dead beat customers were concerned, he exercised proper caution, so that he should have no such losses.

The feeling of the majority seems to be to let well enough alone and while the present apathy is on, there is but slight prospect of anything being done to bring the dealers any closer together.

GROCERS' MEETING.

The montly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held in the Temple Building on April 15. There was a large attendance. The only matters of importance taken up were the two excursions to be held in June and July. The date fixed for the moonlight excursion is June 17, and for the expedition to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, July 17. A committee to look after arrangements, etc., will be appointed at the next meeting.

A BOOSTER

That's what all wide-awake buyers are looking for. Something that will help a good business to get more business. We are continually on the lookout for these trade helpers and generally have a few on tap ready to hand over to some live buyer who wants to increase his margin of profit.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, April 25, 1907.)

There is little change in business conditions since last week. Finer weather is giving the railways an opportunity to overtake their work but the congestion of freight is still very serious. In spite of all adverse conditions, however, spring trade shows a considerable increase over any previous year and business men are optimistic.

Quotable changes this week are few and unimportant, values holding steady in all lines.

CANNED GOODS—Except for some changes in roast and corned beef given below, there are no quotable changes this week. All staple lines continue in strong request. We quote:

The retail druggists are now making ready to close on Sundays, a move that citizens generally approve of.

The tendency of the age is for shorter hours, and grocers should heed this. The grocer who now keeps open until 10 and 11 o'clock at night does not get the respect from his customers that he would if he closed at 6 or 7.

Chas. Austin, formerly with Dalley & Co., and who was a hustler in the Two-in-One business, has bought out James Bews' grocery business, and his prospects are fine for a good trade.

Mr. Bews retires with a competence sufficient to keep him in luxury the rest of his life.

A special meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association was held Monday night. The annual picnic question was discussed, and it was unanimously decided to have an outing this year. Jas. Main was elected chairman, and that alone is a guarantee of success. Give "Jim" enough "rope" and he will make it the best picnic ever.

A resolution was endorsed asking the city council to change the time of the civic elections to an earlier date; also in regard to jobbers selling to consumers, hotels, etc.

It is thought here that manufacturers of soaps, cereals and other such lines, when making up their prices, should take some thought as to what would be a fair profit for the retailer. Nearly all of these goods are put on the market at net prices that do not leave the grocer a legitimate profit. Some of these people say the grocer will have to sell the goods, and it is no business of theirs what profit he makes. But we hope to see the day when the worm will turn—some day when our provincial association (which is to be) will be able to make suggestions, both to the manufacturers and jobbers, that the interests of all would be best conserved by mutual counsel.

There are so many families moving into the city that there is a house famine, and tents are being put up in different parts of the city. The building trade is pushed to its utmost. Real estate is being turned over in big deals. Hamilton is out for a 100,000 population, and it won't be long at that. Grocery stores are being opened up freely, so that there is no danger of the new settlers either running out of provisions or credit.

STRATFORD.

Your reporter has made several inquiries among the retail grocers this week as regards the consumption of canned fruits, etc., and finds out that in the majority of cases the demand is not nearly so great as this time last year. Still, there is a very good demand. Last year there was a very large quantity of canned goods disposed of in this city. Of course the price has a good deal to do with the demand. Previous to the recent increase in price, one merchant laid in a pretty heavy supply of canned fruits, and, as a consequence, is not suffering much. Other merchants did not raise the price to the consumer in proportion to the advanced price to the retailer, and as a result they are not deriving any fortune out of the sales. Although many of the merchants report that the sale has not been as large as last year, there are others who say that the sale has slightly increased.

By reports it is learned that the fruit crops in this vicinity have been hindered in growth by the backward spring. One farmer, who has quite a pear orchard, says that this line of fruit, especially the Kiefers, will be a total failure, and peaches will also be a light crop. The winter has been very destructive to the San Jose scale, and it does not seem to be nearly so active this season as in former years.

Apples promise to be an exceptionally good crop. There is also a good showing for the smaller fruits, and unless some further set-back occurs, the fruit crop on the whole will be a very fair one this season.

Saturday's market was largely attended by sellers and buyers. A large quantity of eggs was offered and sold at 16c. and 17c. per dozen. Butter advanced one cent over the week previous, selling at 24c. per pound. Other produce sold at the same price as a week ago.

William Horner, an old Stratford boy, has recently returned from the Canadian west, where he has been much prospered in his business. Mr. Horner conducted a good grocery business in Lethbridge, Alta. About four years ago he was burnt out, but he erected a fine new store. Mr. Horner has decided to not return to the west, but will likely take up his residence in this city, where he has one sister.

Many of our grocers are making a special display of their maple syrup goods. The small sign, "pure maple syrup for sale here" is seen in almost all of the grocery and confectionery windows. On the market this article is still selling at 40 cents per quart.

Trade at present among our merchants is not just as brisk as it might be. Several of the retail grocers say that they had an exceptionally good Easter trade, but that since then trade has not been very good. However, the housecleaning days are about here, and they expect to have a good season in selling house goods.

The grocers are giving quite a bit of attention to window dressing, and are advertising special lines in a most attractive way. The merchants are rapidly becoming educated to the importance of making attractive window displays. They realize that a good display, with the price properly ticketed, will do wonders in the way of getting citizens to buy. It has been truthfully said that the window is a fair index to the store, and this is being exemplified in Stratford. Displaying special lines of goods in this way has its advantages. The display may include the very article that a shopper would want, and then again, it may include some article to which no thought of purchasing has been given to the pedestrian or the regular customer. Changing window displays frequently is also a good way to attract the attention of the passer-by. It is gratifying to note the progress that the merchants are making in dressing their windows.

One or two of the grocers in the city are cutting prices in one or two lines of goods. Particularly is this being done in regard to canned tomatoes and flour. Notwithstanding that the price of both articles was raised some time ago, the price to the consumer remains the same. When in conversation with one of the city grocers, he remarked, in answer to a question put by your correspondent, "Yes, we have a Retail Merchants' Association, and there is a branch called the Grocers' section, but that is all it amounts to. They seem to avoid discussing this question, re price cutting. There is need for a strong association. What's the use in cutting each other's throats?" It is to be hoped that the merchants come to an understanding amongst each other and that a proper schedule of prices is arranged. This is an important matter and should be brought before the Retail Merchants' Association. Why not appoint a committee to interview the chief offenders, with the object of arriving at a proper understanding. The cutting is also extended to the sugar trade. Many dealers feel, in view of the recent advance in the wholesale price, that the price should also be increased to the consumer.

A committee meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association was held Monday night, at which the proposed new delivery system was discussed. The association meets Thursday night, when it is expected that the matter will be decided on.

GALT.

There is considerable talk in Galt at present regarding the half-holiday question. For a number of years Galt has been behind its neighboring towns in that there has been no half-holiday during the summer months. While the stores in general close at six o'clock each evening, it is thought by a large number that a half-holiday would be very beneficial to the employers and employes and would not conflict with the business to any degree. The matter will shortly be taken up by the Retail Merchants' Association, and, while some opposition is anticipated, the prospects for the half-holiday, probably on Wednesday of Thursday, are bright.

A member of one of Galt's leading grocery firms, when interviewed to-day, emphatically expressed himself in favor of seven o'clock closing on Saturdays. "The idea that business places should remain open on Saturday nights until unreasonable hours," he said, " is a survival of the days when every man received his wages at six o'clock on Saturday night. These days are past and gone, and I doubt if there is one establishment in Galt to-day where the employes are paid on Saturday. Why should the employes of grocery and other firms be compelled to work sixteen hours? If a man cannot do his business in ten hours he should sell out."

While a number of other business men in Galt favor early closing on Saturday there is small probability of any action being taken, at the present time, at any rate.

There is at present no Retail Grocers' Association in Galt. Why this state of affairs should exist is inexplicable. Galt is one of the best grocery towns in Ontario, and this reputation should surely be a leading reason for an association being formed here. True it is, that the grocers heartily co-operate with the Retail Merchants' Association, but there is surely room in this town for both associations.

The grocers are still complaining of the poor freight service. One grocer told your corespondent that to get an order from Montreal to Galt required nearly two weeks. The gentleman's comment was brief and to the point when he asked "Why?"

The death occurred here recently of Chas. Ellerby, aged 46 years. Up to the time of his death Mr. Ellerby conducted a grocery business in Galt, and was held in high esteem by all. He leaves a wife and family.

Eggs, which have been so plentiful here during the past few months, are becoming a scarce commodity, and the price is due to advance considerably.

Allan Deans, of the firm of Deans & Walker, said to-day that in all his grocery experience he had known no year in which the crop of navel oranges had reached such a high standard. "The fruit, during the season which is now drawing to a close," he said, "has been excellent, and on this account the demand has been unprecedented."

The supply of maple syrup this season has been larger than ever before, and the extent to which it has been appreciated is evidenced by the fact that although the supply has been very large the demand was even larger, and many seekers after the luxury were disappointed. A farmer within a few miles of Galt manufactured over 200 gallons of syrup, all of which was disposed of on the premises. In these days of adulteration the genuine production is evidently greatly appreciated. The syrup at the local groceries was disposed of at $1.50 per gallon.

The high winds and dry weather of the past week have caused the local merchants to speak in uncomplimentary terms of the works of nature. The dust has penetrated every nook and cranny, and the man with the duster is real busy.

LATE GEORGE Q. O'NEILL.

Montreal Grocery Traveler Dies Suddenly on the Road.

Death came very suddenly to one of the oldest travelers in the grocery trade on Wednesday, April 17, when George Quaile O'Neill, one of Mathewsons' Sons representatives, was taken from this world.

Late Mr. O'Neill had just alighted from the G.T.R. train at Brockville on Wednesday afternoon and was waiting at the Union Station for the train to Ottawa. He was talking to a few friends on the station platform, when suddenly he collapsed. He was carried to a nearby office by friendly hands and a doctor was summoned. Before the arrival of the medical man the traveler died.

For twenty-five years Mr. O'Neill traveled for Mathewsons' Sons, Montreal, and during that period he made friends by the score in all parts of the country. He was a man to make friends and keep them and his death will come as a surprise and a shock to hundreds in the grocery trade upon whom he was a regular and particularly welcome caller. Everybody liker Mr. O'Neill, and well they might. One of the members of the firm he represented, speaking to The Grocer, said: "There was never a more faithful, unselfish worker than that same George Quaile O'Neill; absolutely loyal to the institution with which he was connected. He could be depended upon to do the right thing at the right time in every instance. We will miss him sorely."

In life, Mr. O'Neill was a resident of Huntingdon, Que., where he was buried last week. He was sixty-eight of age and is survived by a wife and one daughter.

EXPOSITION POSTPONED.

The National Packers' Exposition has been postponed, at the request of the exhibitors, until next fall. This has been rendered necessary owing to the fact that the Coliseum, in which the exposition was to have been held, has been found inadequate for the accommodation of an exhibition of this character.

David Arnott, general store, Slocan, B.C., has been succeeded by McVicar & Pinchbeck.

EXHIBITION OF GROCERIES.

Large Attendance at the Montreal Food Fair—A Great Success.

Wednesday evening of last week the Exhibition of Groceries in Montreal was officially opened by acting Mayor of the city, Ald. Giroux. Mayor Ekers himself was to have opened the fair but was unable to be present and the acting mayor took his place.

The attendance was record-breaking and augurs well for the balance of the period during which the show will be held. The success of the exhibition is quite assured.

The arrangement of the booths at the arena where the show is being held is most artistic, and the appearance of the fair is much better than anything of similar nature yet seen in Montreal.

A. P. Murray, chairman of the advisory committee, was on hand at the opening and introduced Ald. Giroux, who then spoke a few words on the benefit of such a fair to the city generally. Ald. Dagenais, chairman of the Board of Health, next addressed the gathering. He was followed by Mayor Galbraith, of Westmount, and C. H. Catelli, president of the Chambre de Commerce Francaise. All spoke of the value of the food fair and congratulated the management on the successful opening. They urged the public to support the movement strongly as it was to their benefit to do so.

Those present at the opening included, besides those mentioned: S. J. Mathewson, Col. A. E. Labelle, A. Lauiel, president of the Retail Grocers' Association; J. A. Beaudry, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association; Harry Clark, W. H. Dunn, W. S. Laflamme and others.

Success has attended the Exhibition of Groceries in Montreal up to the time of writing and it is likely that there will be continued patronage on the part of the public until the closing day.

Wonderfully large crowds have attended afternoon and evening since the exhibition has opened. Saturday last was hospital day. The proceeds of the day were divided between the two principal hospitals of the city, the Notre Dame and the General. On that day it is estimated that fully three thousand attended.

Frequent remarks are heard on the artistic manner in which the booths are arranged and more than one visitor who had seen like fairs in the States expressed the opinion that Montreal's exhibition surpassed anything of a like nature ever held in the United States or anywhere else.

A couple of very successful banquets have been held, and retailers and wholesalers have been given every opportunity of meeting one another on other than a business footing.

Next week's issue of The Grocer, May 3, will be a Special Exhibition of Groceries number and will contain a full account of the fair and descriptions of the individual booths occupied by various firms.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

More interest is being taken in cheese as the season advances. Every week there is an increase in the make over the previous six days and trading is bound to become more active as supplies become larger. The April make of cheese this year, however, has not been so large as the make for the same period last season. The situation is satisfactory enough at present, and produce men are not grumbling over conditions existing.

Prices are a little easier than they were a week ago but on the whole are well maintained. Cheap cheese is not the rule on the market just now. Business being transacted is mostly local, although there is some attempt at export trade. Quotations will have to reach a lower basis before an activity is noticeable as affecting Canada and the Old Country.

From all reports there will be demand for new Canadian cheese in England before the very last of the old stock is gone. Supplies in Great Britain are not by any means heavy and the market must be supplied from some source, and what is more natural than that Canada should be called upon to furnish this staple food of the country? Already cable offers have been made, although just what deals have been closed we cannot state. If one may be so bold as to look ahead it would seem that trading during the coming season will be large.

Butter has suffered a severe decline since last week. Prices then were as high as they have been at any time during the winter, owing to the scarcity of stock on this market. In a few days there was a drop of 9c., a decline which was expected and therefore not so surprising. As was stated in these columns an increase in receipts was sufficient to bring down prices.

During the week quite a lot of nice, new butter has been received from various sections of the country. A considerable quantity of Australian butter was brought into Montreal by various parties, arriving in the city this week. Had the butter been received last week, the profit made by the importers would have been very satisfactory; as it is they are making just enough to bring them through nicely after paying all costs. The butter was quickly taken up, so bare is the market.

From now on receipts of new butter will naturally be larger, and it is not expected that present high prices will hold very long. A drop is expected any day.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

Prices for live hogs are nominally on the same basis as last week, but in reality are lower, for the packers are keeping pretty closely to $6.15 f.o.b. country points this week, and last the price was often $6.25. The result is that deliveries are light, but this is not unwelcome because shipments to the old country are being kept down to the lowest possible point and stocks for the domestic trade are fairly large. Receipts of hogs in Canada have been running 23,000 to 25,000 and were down last week to 16,000 or 17,000; but an ordinary week's shipment of bacon to the old country is about 4,000 boxes, and they are down to 2,500 boxes.

The old country market is about the same, but slightly firmer for Canadian because of decreased supplies. Danish deliveries are, however, no lighter. On the contrary, they are increasing, and last week amounted to 37,000 hogs. Advices now received state that they will reach 40,000. The Danish farmer has made up his mind that hogs are a profitable product.

In the home market the packers are keeping a stiff upper lip, but the decrease in export business is turning a good deal of product into home channels and stocks are ample. While they will not admit a probable decline they say there will be no scarcity and that everybody who wants a bit of bacon will be able to get it. Some of the smaller dealers however, are inclined to make concessions.

The weakness of the provision situation in Chicago has its effect on this market. The New York Journal of Commerce, in its weekly review, on Monday, said:

"The past week has witnessed nothing of importance in these markets and very little change in prices and no activity, as there is no one in the market but the packers and a few professionals, while the latter were afraid to sell short because the packers own the stocks and could squeeze them, and no one but packers have bought, because of a material increase in receipts of hogs at the west during the week and because of present high prices, in which nobody seems to have confidence enough to buy for future delivery, except the packers, with whom it is believed to be a matter of compulsion to protect their high-priced stocks rather than from choice. Indeed, the Cudahy Packing Company has been a seller of both lard and ribs during a part of the week, and the packers are probably divided on the market, some of them having been sellers of their product right along, in view of the high prices and hand-to-mouth cash demand, which has not been up to the normal, considering the general employment of labor and good times in our chief industrial centres. The weight of hogs coming in has continued to be materially ahead of last year, as it has been for some months past, indicating a good supply of mature hogs during the summer months, which renders the outlook anything but bullish.

EGG FLOOD IN NEW YORK.

The egg situation in New York is interesting and not altogether free from sensationalism. Thus far this season the receipts have been unprecedented, and if they continue at the present rate a slaughter of eggs may come to pass.

Heavy egg handlers estimate that within the past five weeks 875,000 cases of eggs have been received in that market, and that of these not less than 350,000 have been laid down in cold storage. At this time last year the cold storage houses held scarcely 20,000 cases. The price is about the same for the two years, 18½ cents. At the present rate it is estimated that by July 1 every cold storage egg house in Greater New York will be filled to its capacity, and that all receipts beyond that must go on the market. Not only is such a situation likely to slaughter prices of spot eggs, but it is likely to seriously impair the value of so large a stock held in warehouses and bring their value down below the cost, as it now stands.

NEW YORK SHORT OF BUTTER.

Handlers of butter in New York are looking forward with some apprehension to the possibility of a fine butter famine unless receipts increase shortly. The normal consumption of that market is about 35,000 to 40,000 tubs a week, but for the past three months the average receipts of fine butter would not equal that by probably 15,000 tubs a week. To supply the deficiency dealers have been drawing on their reserve in cold storage, till to-day there are probably not over 1,000 tubs of reserve stock on hand. Prices have touched 36c.

WINNIPEG.

The Winnipeg produce market is in rather unsettled state at present and a wide range of prices are quoted for both butter and eggs. There is very little creamery butter offering and the market being quite bare, the price is well maintained; but with dairy butter the condition is different, the supply being large, the quality indifferent, and the price uncertain. With finer, warmer weather the market is likely to see a further decline.

BUTTER.—Creamery butter is selling to the retail trade at an average price of 32c. to 35c. per lb. for the fancy variety. The dairy butter market is uncertain and produce houses are paying 20c. to 24c. per lb. The quality of most of the dairy butter offered is said to be indifferent.

EGGS.—Produce houses are paying country merchants 18c. to 20c. per dozen for fresh eggs. The market is weak and a decline is likely.

CHEESE.—Prices are quoted as follows:

BUTTER — Butter has not taken the long drop expected of it, but commission men here declare it is now more than half over the brink. The country roads have been so bad that the creameries have not been able to get sufficient new product to begin on, and creamery prints have been scarce. The price soared to 32c. last Saturday, but is back to 30c. as the top. Dairy, on the other hand, is easier. The cream that would have gone to the creameries, had they been operating, was turned into butter on the farm. Prints have maintained their price but choice rolls are a cent cheaper. Much lower prices all round are looked for by the end of the week.

UNDRAWN POULTRY

Declared Best After Investigation by Massachusetts Health Officers.

Experiments pursued by Dr. Charles Harrington, secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, and recently made the basis of a special report to the Massachusetts Legislature, are being quoted with much interest by all handlers of cold storage goods, notably poultry, as they completely vindicate the claims of poultry dealers that undrawn poultry are preferable to drawn.

The investigations were made pursuant to the following resolution adopted by the legislature of 1906:

"Resolved, That the State Board of Health is hereby directed to investigate what unwholesome changes, if any, take place in flesh of poultry shipped or stored without the removal of the head, crop and entrails, as compared with the flesh of poultry from which the same have been removed. For this purpose the board may expend a sum not exceeding $3,000, and it shall report the result of its observations and conclusions to the next general court."

"As soon as practicable after the passage of this resolve," says Dr. Harrington, in his report, "three lots of fowl and ducks were purchased as material for the investigation. These were kept for several weeks under identical conditions as to housing, care and feed, and were then killed and prepared in the most careful manner for cold storage. The material obtained consisted of one lot of fifty ducks, which were given no food during the 24 hours prior to slaughter; one lot of 100 fowls, similarly treated, and one lot of fifty fowls to which was given a full meal of soft feed the night before slaughter. All of each lot were killed and prepared for storage on the same day; one-half were carefully and thoroughly drawn and dressed and the rest were left undrawn. The individual birds were separately wrapped in paper and packed, and the whole of each lot were transported without delay and placed in a room of the Quincy Market Cold Storage & Warehouse Company, maintained at a temperature of about 0-degree F.

"At the expiration of about two months work was begun, the chemical side of the investigation being assigned to an expert physiological chemist of long experience and thorough training, and the bacteriological side to a bacteriologist and parasitologist of the same standing. The drawn and undrawn birds were removed from storage in equal numbers as occasion required, and each bird was submitted simultaneously to both chemical and bacteriological study. The results of the work thus far obtained warrant the following conclusions:

"1. During cold storage at from 15 degrees below to 5 degrees above 0-degree F. no chemical changes occur. This is shown by the absence in both the drawn and undrawn birds of ptomaines and decomposition products in general and by negative reaction on the part of animals inoculated with extracts obtained from both kinds of material.

"2. When removed from cold storage and exposed to ordinary temperatures, the condition of exposure being the same, the undrawn birds show better keeping qualities.

"3. Freezing renders the muscular tissues more susceptible to bacterial invasion after they are thawed out.

"4. The usual method of drawing poultry leads to heavy bacterial infection which promotes more rapid decomposition than occurs in undrawn birds.

"5. By ligature of the gullet below the crop, poultry can be completely drawn without any spilling of the intestinal contents with consequent bacterial invasion of the abdominal cavity, and poultry so drawn would undoubtedly withstand decomposition and deterioration much longer than that which is undrawn.

"6. The practice of depositing poultry in cold storage when in the beginning or advanced stages of decomposition, in order to save it, is dangerous to the health of the consumer, since when it is again withdrawn for sale its condition is unaltered.

"7. Proper and adequate inspection of poultry as it enters cold storage is desirable, and storage of material already in process of decomposition should be prohibited.

"8. The practice of placing cold storage poultry in cold water for a number of hours for the purpose of thawing causes heavy bacterial infection and consequently more rapid decomposition than occurs when thawing is allowed to proceed slowly at room temperature. Such treatment causes also a material increase in weight, by reason of absorption by the tissues of water, to the detriment of the purse of the purchaser, and hence is fraudulent.

"Several questions in connection with the subject of cold storage of poultry are still in process of investigation, the results of which will be submitted in the final report."

TILSITER CHEESE.

Tilsiter cheese is a Swiss delicacy sought by all cheese connoisseurs, but it has the further advantage of being very acceptable to the ordinary palate. It is now made in Ontario, at Wellesley, in the factory of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., under the supervision of Mr. Burgener, a Swiss gentleman with a wide reputation as a fancy cheese maker. The cheese is being put on the market by the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto. The stock now available has been cured for nine months under scientific conditions, is ripe and mellow and of very fine flavor and texture.

GROCERY TRADE NEWS OF THE ATLANTIC COAST

Halifax, N.B., April 22.

The canned goods trade in Halifax is excellent, said one of the largest wholesale grocers in Halifax, when asked as to the condition of business here. There is a good demand for canned goods throughout the whole province, and there is every reason to expect that it will continue. The amount of canned goods turned over this season is unusually large, and prices are firm. It is thought that on the whole business is ahead of last year, when a large amount of stock was handled. "I find the canned goods trade is increasing in this province," said a prominent business man to your correspondent. "There is one thing that is restricting trade to some extent," he said, "and that is combines. The prices are too high, and therefore the consumption is not as great as it otherwise would be. Combines injure business in my estimation, as they fix the prices, and the dealer has to live up to them or else be shut out." The dealer referred to handles immense quantities of canned goods, and has in stock probably $30,000 worth all the time. He is a firm believer in free trade in business and thought that strong efforts should be made to break up the combines, which, he says, exist to-day. If there was competition among the canners prices would be lower and the consumption far greater. This fixing the prices by combines of what a dealer should sell his goods for, he considered a poor piece of business and a restriction on trade.

Importing Scotch Potatoes.

Potatoes—The importation of potatoes from the other side of the Atlantic to Nova Scotia is something new here and shows the condition of the market in this province. The potatoes were imported from Scotland by local commission men, and of the 5,000 bags brought out, 4,000 of them were re-shipped to Jamaica and Cuba by the steamer Boston on her last trip. The commission men who have large contracts to fill were obliged to resort to this course to fill their orders. These potatoes are of medium size, but they are not superior to the article produced in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick. They sold here for about 80 cents per bushel. The potatoes are very small so far.

Provisions Scarce.

Recent advices from Prince Edward Island state that owing to the series of ice blockades this winter, there is a heavy shortage in sugar, molasses, flour and kerosene in Charlottetown. For example, half of the grocers in that city have not a barrel of sugar in stock. A carload that recently arrived for a wholesale house, was distributed in barrel lots. While there is no bread famine, the stock of staple brands of flour is getting very low.

Agriculture in Nova Scotia.

An interesting report has just been presented to the Nova Scotia Legislature by its special committee on agriculture, which is composed of ten members of the House. The report in part says:

Never, in the history of Nova Scotia, was the outlook brighter for engaging in agricultural pursuits. The prices realized for all products of the farm, whether in live stock, dairying, fruit, or field produce, have been during the past year exceedingly high; and appearances would indicate a continuation of these high prices for some years to come. The crops of the past season, with the possible exception of potatoes, have been up to the average, and from different parts of the province the reports of increased numbers of live stock being kept are certainly most encouraging.

After referring to the excellent work of the Agricultural College and Farm, and the increased interest that is being taken in the meetings of the agricultural societies throughout the province, the report concludes:

The excellent and instructive work that has been done by the traveling dairy, we trust may still be continued. The improved quality of the butter made in the province the past few years can, in a very large measure, be attributed to the educative influence of the traveling dairy.

Your committee are pleased with the work done by the Nova Scotia Farmers' Association and the different county associations, in arranging institute meetings and securing speakers for the same, and would urge the employment of local speakers conversant with our conditions.

Farming in Cape Breton.

The Canadian Exchange & Trust Co., Limited, the incorporators of which are A. J. G. McEchen, Dr. W. H. Rice, R. S. Cottrell and F. Lighter, has recently been launched. The main object of the company is to acquire vacant farm lands in Cape Breton, particularly near the Sydneys and Glace Bay, and to bring from different parts of Europe persons who have had experience at market gardening. The land will be sold to these people on reasonable terms, and they would be given a chance to pay by installments. It is evident that there is an opening for such a business, and the venture will probably prove successful.

W. J. Hopgood and Son, have purchased the stock of T. Major and Sons, who are retiring from business.

Mr. Wallace D. Black, formerly of "Springfield" farm and apiary, Lower Truro, has gone to Norris Point, Newfoundland, where he is to take up the management of a large farm.

The marriage took place at Yarmouth, N.S., last week of Arthur Goudey, traveler for Edward Allen, wholesale grocer, and Mrs. Annie Hamilton. The bride is a daughter of the late Hon. William Law, and a sister of B. B. Law, M.P. for Yarmouth, N.S.

The schooner A. K. McLean, which arrived last week from Barbados, landed at this port 226 hogsheads and 210 barrels of molasses. The West India line steamer Orinoco from the West Indies discharged here among other cargo, 18 hogsheads, 7 tierces, 150 barrels, and 4,765 bags of sugar.

Interested In Fisheries.

Among the visitors to the city last week was Mr. Matsuzaki, secretary of the Bureau of Fisheries, which in his country is combined with the department of agriculture and commerce. He is deputed by his government to gather up available data in the big maritime countries which can have any practical bearing on the industry he represents. The fisheries of Japan are worth 100,000,000 yen ($50,000,000) annually. The domestic consumption of this product is very large, mostly as food, but a considerable quantity as fertilizer. Fish culture is carefully attended to, and one thing uppermost in Mr. Matsuzaki's mind is the transplanting of lobsters from Canadian to Japanese waters.

While here he inspected several of the big fish establishments and cold storage plants in this city and was very favorably impressed with what he saw.

A. G. Johnson, Secretary Elect Retail Grocers' Association, Ottawa.

Mr. Johnson is a grocer born and bred, his father, A. P. Johnson, having been established since 1874. He is well known in Ottawa and enthusiastic in association work among his fellow-tradesmen.

CEREALS AND CONFECTIONERY

Grain Markets Advancing on Account of the Damage to Crops and the Late Season Which Threatens the Spring Wheat Crop.

Reports of crop damage and poor prospects are wrestling in the markets with reports of largely increasing visible supplies and last year's enormous productions and, temporarily, at any rate, are having the best of it, with consequent higher prices. Nothing very serious has yet happened in Canada, but the season in the west is now several weeks behind and that fact is regarded as very serious. The year 1893 is quoted as a precedent, when there was a very late spring in the prairie country followed by a short dry summer and the wheat crop averaged only seven to ten bushels to the acre.

The situation in the western states however, does seem to be very serious. There, zero temperature, drouth and the green bug have been causing widespread damage, and the spring wheat crop is threatened by the late season. One report thus describes the situation:

"Zero weather and below has prevailed over the greater part of the winter wheat belt, causing serious apprehensions of damage to sections where the wheat is jointed. At the same time, the long drouth has continued throughout the southwest, where it has existed for two or three months. There have been rains predicted all the week, but only showers have materialized, and not enough to break the drouth in any section, though in some small areas it has been enough to stop deterioration, which has been pretty general throughout the winter wheat belt since April 1. There has also developed more winter killing east of the Mississippi than had been supposed. Nor is this all. The green bugs have still been with us, and have continued to spread further north and east, until the wheat area west of the Mississippi is pretty generally damaged or threatened. Texas and Oklahoma have been nearly ruined in many sections and will have very short crops, as will sections of southern Kansas, and possibly Missouri." Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas produce about one-third of the total winter wheat crop of the States.

In view of these circumstances millers are thinking hard. Prices of flour are firm but still unchanged, and a fair trade is passing. As the season advances trade in oat products is assuming smaller proportions. Oats have shared in the crop killing, and it looks as if they would go higher.

Confectionery.

This is the age of handsome, labor-saving fixtures in the grocery trade, and the grocer who would share in the large profits of handling high class confectionery must present the goods in an enticing way. Individual circumstances will determine what that way is to be, but in most stores where a separate department, with its own attendant, is not established, a modern plate glass silent salesman will be found most effective. If placed where everyone who comes into the shop cannot fail to see it, such a fixture would soon pay for itself.

WORLD'S WHEAT CROP.

The United States Department of Agriculture, in its compilation of the world's wheat crop of 1906, gives a total production for the year of 3,423,704,000 bushels, or about 106,500,000 bushels greater than in 1905, which was the previous record year. As the average yearly production for the past 15 years was 2,974,100,000 bushels, the 1906 crop shows a gain over that average of 449,594,000 bushels, or about 15 per cent.

RETAIL GROCERY ORGANIZATION

New York Journal of Commerce.

The question of organizing retailers in various sections of the country, a matter which is being pushed just now by the national retailers and by their allies in the field of the south, is a matter in which the wholesalers are taking much interest, particularly those interested in the wholesale organizations.

There is an impression abroad that wholesalers are generally opposed to having the retailers organized, but nothing could be farther from the truth. As a matter of fact wholesalers regard the organization of retailers as distinctly an advantage to them, if the organization is undertaken along broad and elevating lines. One of the great difficulties wholesalers encounter in their dealings with the average retailer is the fact that the average retailer is not so closely observant of trade movements and broad commercial conditions as would be desired for intelligent dealing. It is recognized that through organization the retailer is made to progress commercially and become a better business man.

Again, through organization, it is far easier to accomplish trade reforms than by dealing with disorganized individuals. To-day some of the most satisfactory business arrangements in force have been negotiated and maintained through the instrumentality of associations representing whole sections of territory, and in some instances negotiations have been successfully concluded through the National Association of Retailers, representing not less than 350,000 retail grocers in the United States. To deal with such a mass individually would be entirely impossible.

The only objections wholesalers find with retail organizations is the disposition in some sections of the country to organize and conduct buying exchanges of retailers under the name "retail grocers' association." Such associations as these are usually exclusive of their membership and do not represent the whole trade, or even a controlling portion of it. Yet wholesalers and manufacturers have even been able to conclude trade arrangements with these which have proved mutually beneficial. The interests of retailer and wholesaler alike demand that uniformity of conditions shall exist so far as possible, and that such ruinous practices as rate cutting and selling staples at cost shall not exist. Trade well regulated ought to furnish a reasonable living profit for both factors, and if it can be secured by organization no reputable person or house or organization will or should be found antagonizing it.

A BUSY PLACE IN COLLINGWOOD.

Ed. Fawcett, Collingwood, an interior view of whose grocery is shown here, is one of the most progressive retailers in the Georgian Bay basin. The gentleman to the front is Mr. Fawcett, and that's one of his characteristics; he's always fighting somewhere in the van of trade. Mr. Fawcett has been in business for himself five or six years and each year has been better than the one before. He takes great interest in the appearance of his store, and lays himself out to have his place clean, neat and inviting. Besides being a good buyer he knows how to please customers.

J. J. Speirs, Toronto and western Ontario representative of Chase & Sanborn, dropped into The Grocer office on Monday. He was leaving for head office in Montreal, presumably to look over the splendid new coffee roasting house and offices of his company, to be opened May 1st.

More Light on the Pineapple Situation—Crop Promises to be Up to the Average—Strawberries Poor Quality Thus Far.

Reports are still in circulation to the effect that the Cuban crop of pineapples will be at least 150,000 crates short of last year, but, as we pointed out last week in another part of the paper, this rumor has probably arisen from the fact that the crop is considerably delayed this year owing to the severe drought followed by heavy rains. Prices for the larger sizes, which are hard to get, remain firm, and the smaller are somewhat easier. There has been no radical change in the banana situation, save that here again rumor is busy with reports of damage to the crop from lack of rain. It is true that dealers, especially in Montreal, have experienced some difficulty in obtaining sufficient stock to supply their trade, but this was due solely to lack of transportation. The crop was there, but the steamers were somewhere else. This difficulty has now been overcome, additional steamers having been put into commission, and everything is expected to be satisfactory for the summer trade. The stock so far has not shown up quite so well as last years, and prices remain high largely owing to the scarcity of small fruits on the other side.

Receipts of strawberries are unsatisfactory, both as to quality and quantity. The berries are too soft at the time of shipment to travel well, and reach the Montreal and Toronto markets in poor shape, necessitating their immediate sale at whatever prices happen to be going. The Louisiana has practically supplanted the Florida stuff, and is selling freely under a good demand. At the present writing it seems unlikely that the North Carolina crop will exceed one-third of its usual proportions on account of the continued frost.

It is estimated that the crop of Texas onions will not be above 800 carloads this season, and if the present drought is not soon broken up the situation will assume a serious aspect. Potatoes show a slight increase in price, with a scarcity of supply and a good market all over Ontario. There are no stocks worth speaking of held by any of the Toronto dealers.

White & Co. opened their spring fruit auction season last Wednesday with a fine offering of oranges, cabbage, celery, onions, tomatoes, cocoanuts, dates, apples, lemons, bananas, pineapples and numerous other lines.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS — Owing to cold weather and storms fruit continues high, particularly in the south. Business locally is handicapped by the continued cool weather. It will be noticed that there are many price changes this week. Oranges are selling fairly freely. Lemons are temporarily scarce, the direct shipments being waited for by fruit men. Meanwhile prices are stiff. Apples are rather slow, the tail end of the season's business now being the trade occupying the attention of dealers. Bananas are high at the seaboard owing to storms. Locally, prices are advanced.

VEGETABLES — Although there is usually a very good trade at this time of year ,at present business is not good. Cold weather and storms in the fruit-growing districts are responsible for the dull feeling. Dealers expect, however, to do a better business when the boats begin to ply between Montreal and river ports nearby. Meanwhile prices are high.

FISH — Haddock and cod are quoted this week at slightly lower figures, and demand for these lines is very good, according to reports from dealers. Halibut is unchanged. Car lots of this line will soon be arriving, when prices will probably be lower. Haddies are not arriving in good quantities and as a consequence trade in this line is limited. It is hoped that another week will bring some improvement in the situation.

FRUIT—Pineapples are coming down at last, and promise to reach a more reasonable level within the next week. Large sizes are difficult to get hold of. Mexican oranges are now at their best and selling freely. Grape fruit has not been coming forward in anything like first-class condition and prices have fallen off a little. Reports indicate a high demon market for the coming summer.

DEFENDS PITTED PRUNES.

Reply to the Critic Who Was Not in the Business.

A fortnight ago The Canadian Grocer quoted from the New York Journal of Commerce an opinion by a "large packer" to the effect that the pitted prune would not be a success because the pit was essential to the flavor. The Journal publishes a letter signed "Packer," replying to this view. Referring to the previous article he says:

"That portion of it representing the views of 'one of the biggest packing concerns on the Pacific coast' is properly open to criticism. What value can attach to the opinion of one who has not been intimately connected with the work thus far done? The packers in question, to quote their own language, 'have made no arrangements to pit prunes this season and at present we have no intention of doing so,' and by reason of this very lack of experience their sweeping condemnation of the article is entitled to but little weight.

"It is so easy to find fault. It was ever thus. We venture there was never a food product put on the market as entirely novel as pitted prunes, which was not the subject of adverse criticism from some source. It is well, we think, that the croaker's views should not prevail.

"We and the others engaged in pitting have at the expense of time, patience and ingenuity devoted to the work, reached results that in our judgment justify a belief which is directly contrary to that expressed in the item recently published. We believe that we have in pitted prunes an article that is destined to occupy a very large place among California dried fruit products. The results we have now achieved in the work of the extraction of the pit have reached a high state of perfection. The finished product will commend itself generally to buyers, not alone by its exceptional qualities, but also by reason of its cheapness. The fruit can not only be used for every purpose to which ordinary prunes are devoted, but is as far superior to the unpitted article as the seeded raisin is to the unseeded. It can be eaten out of hand as a confection, and is also admirably adapted for stuning purposes. The consumer will not be slow to recognize the merits of the fruit, and its progress in finding a wide distribution will not be hampered by such a patently biased article as appeared in your issue of March 29.

"It is true that the keeping qualities of the prunes have not been fully demonstrated, and that is solely due to the fact that sufficient time has not elapsed since the work began."

A Grocer's Business Is No Stronger Than His Weakest Line. How's Your Cigar Trade?

The answer determines the extent of your business, in ninety-five cases out of every hundred, and you know it. The man who handles no cigars is in a worse way than the Grocer who handles an inferior brand: Both are out of harmony with the conditions of our age. Since it is necessary to stock cigars, shouldn't you stock my because of their trade-compelling qualities? The immense superiority of these cigars is generally admitted and has never been disputed.

PHARAOH retails for 10 cents; but there are ten thousand smokers in Canada who believe that it is superior to all 15-cent cigars on the market.

PEBBLE is easily 10 cents' worth of tobacco goodness and it retails for 5. Send along a test order.

J. BRUCE PAYNE, Limited, GRANBY, QUEBEC

A TOBACCO nearly as good as T. & B. is not on the Canadian market to-day. That's certainly a strong reason why you should stock this brand; but when the pipe-lovers of Canada declare so unanimously in favor of it certainly explains why so many Grocers refuse to stock any other pipe tobacco.

T. & B. smokes well and its fragrance delights the smoker's friends as much as its soothing coolness delights himself.

T. & B. Sells more than Tobacco.

IS IT ABILITY OR OPPORTUNITY THAT MAKES FOR SUCCESS?

Abundant success, high social position, superior early educational facilities are supposed to beget sloth, dissipation, and general mental and moral degeneracy. And yet when we come to make an effort to collect striking examples in this class we find ourselves embarrassed to discover them. We find that all the noise is made over a comparatively small number and consists in a perpetual repetition of the same old things about the same men.

All this of course is not strange, argues Prof. Lester Frank Ward of Brown University, when we remember that about 80 per cent. of all distinguished persons are born in large cities, and that nearly all others go early to great intellectual centres; that over 90 per cent. of them belong to wealthy or well-to-do families, and are exempt from all material concerns; that nearly 90 per cent. of them belong to the higher social classes; nobility, public officials, liberal professions, business men; and that 98 per cent. of them receive a liberal education in their youth. How could the little remnant of country-born, poor, toiling, and uneducated geniuses, queries Dr. Ward, be expected to constitute any considerable part of the real working force of society?

But the public knows nothing of these great social facts. It is habitually fed on the current error due to the fallacy of history, which consists in reiterating the exceptions and ignoring the regular phenomena of society.

Robert Burns constantly is numbered among self-made men, and in Dr. Ward's opinion he was as much so as any that could be named, writes Thurston F. Blair, in discussing self-made men. But Burns was a village celebrity at 16, and soon began to write. It is clear that he must have received considerable instruction at a tender age. His biographies inform us that his father was at great pains to give his children a good education. Little more than this would be needed for a man like Burns with a genius for the simple, sweet poetry that he wrote. Nothing is said about his circumstances, but that he had considerable means and leisure to devote to these things and to reading and informing himself there can be no doubt.

Among musicians, Haydn is the one most frequently mentioned, but Dr. Ward remembers that Weismann thought "We safely may conclude that Joseph Haydn never would have surpassed his father's national songs and harp had he not chanced to become the chorister in the little town of Hamburg and had he not afterwards entered the music school of Vienna, of which Reuter, the organist of the cathedral, was head."

Opportunities, in Prof. Ward's argument, are of various kinds. There are certain forms of opportunity that are mistaken for chance or luck. Hence the saying, "It is better to be born lucky than rich."

Dr. Ward remembers that Henry George said: "Had Caesar come of a proletarian family, had Napoleon entered the world a few years earlier, had Columbus gone to church instead of going to sea, had Shakespeare been apprenticed to a cobbler or chimney sweep had Sir Isaac Newton been assigned by fate the education and toil of an agricultural laborer, had Dr. Adam Smith been born in the coal regions or Herbert Spencer forced to get his living as a factory operative, what would their talents have availed?"

There being no self-made men, then, as Prof. Ward reads history, how much truth is there in the popular view that highly favorable circumstances tend toward intellectual degeneracy? And here, in marked contrast with the previous class, the professor is confronted with an embarrassment of riches. When he looks over the long list of the great contributors to human progress it becomes clear at once that, with a few exceptions, all the truly great men of history have belonged to this class and never had to give a moment's thought to the material concerns of existence.

There is no need to search for talent, says Dr. Ward. It exists already and everywhere. The thing that is rare is opportunity, not ability. The fact that many do struggle up out of obscurity does not so much show that they possess superiority as that they happen to be less inextricably bound down than others by the conventional bonds of society. And those who have succeeded in bursting these bonds usually have done so at such an immense cost in energy that their future work was rendered crude and well nigh valueless.

To attain to a position where they can labor in any great field they must carry on a life-long battle against obstacles; they must display enormous individuality, amounting to conceit; they must become heated contestants and bitter partisans. All this narrows the mental horizon and renders the results superficial and unenduring. There is no more vicious popular fallacy that that the powers of the mind are strengthened and improved by adversity. Every one who has accomplished anything against adverse circumstances would have accomplished proportionately more had those circumstances been removed.

BUSINESS MEN IN PUBLIC LIFE

Ald. J. A. McCrea, Guelph.

Ald. J. A. McCrea, of Guelph, was born some fifty odd years ago, when Ontario was nearly all forest, near the village of Alma. Although raised on a farm he always had a desire for trade, and when a mere lad he landed in Guelph with twenty-five cents and a letter from his minister, to learn the grocery business.

He started with J. E. McElderry, in the store of which he is now proprietor. After serving his apprenticeship he secured a situation on the road selling woodenware. He used this situation as a stepping stone to better things, and after several changes he finally settled down as Davidson & Hay's western traveler.

For eighteen years Mr. McCrea carried a grip and proved an old adage wrong, namely—that a man on the road had either to smoke or drink.

One result of Mr. McCrea's grip lugging is that he has always the glad hand for the travelers, and never sends a man away feeling very "blue."

Mr. McCrea tells a story of how, when a beardless boy, he went up, grip in hand, into a store, the proprietor of which had a terrible reputation among the travelers as a "fierce one." He went in when the store was crowded and the proprietor called out, "I don't want any goods to-day! Good day"; but he only replied, "I'll wait a moment." When finally the storekeeper reached him he angrily demanded his business. When told, he swore, and asked what kind of fools Davidson & Hay were to send a mere boy to take his order. Mr. McCrea saw that the case needed hard treatment, and said, "Mr. ———. I have forgotten more about the grocery business than you ever knew." Well, it took the man back for a moment, but he held out his hand and afterwards could always be counted on for a big order every trip.

Mr. McCrea also managed a store in Thorold. Some ten years ago Mr. McElderry offered him a partnership in his old store and the firm was changed to McElderry & McCrea. Two years later Mr. McCrea bought out Mr. McElderry and the firm has been called J. A. McCrea until recently, when he changed the name to J. A. McCrea & Son. Mr. McCrea has always been a public man, serving as elder in the church, Sunday school superintendent, school trustee and finally, last year, as alderman. This year he was re-elected, and is serving the city as chairman of the finance committee. He was president one year of the Retail Merchants' Association, and is always an active worker in the Board of Trade. The merchants of Guelph are fairly friendly, and there is talk of a public collector in uniform to collect all poor debts.

Mr. McCrea believes in up-to-date fixtures, fresh goods, reasonable prices, courtesy, advertising and hustle.

He always runs a hundred line ad. during the week and a two hundred line ad. on Friday night, advertising special prices for Saturday.

The two lines—crockery and groceries—help each other, as a woman feels free to buy china any place, and naturally she has to pass through the groceries to reach the china. The firm employs sixteen hands on Saturday and ten all the time. There is a separate staff for taking and putting up orders, and two delivery waggons on week days and three on Saturday. A big farm trade means a big city trade, as one is essential to the other, and nothing builds up a firm's reputation like good butter and eggs. When good butter is discovered a contract by the year is usually entered into and the firm's and maker's name printed on the wrapper.

Mr. McCrea does not believe in letting politics interfere with business and usually manages to have the council committee meetings at night, as he often says public work is his rest and recreation, and I believe he enjoys a night in council as well as most people enjoy the theatre.

At the time of the elections this year Mr. McCrea was lying insensible from the effects of poisonous coal gas from the furnace, but he headed the polls, which clearly shows he is as good an alderman as he is a grocer.

PROPRIETARY PRICES.

Denver Experience in Regard to Manufacturer Taking Action.

The question of manufacturers' fixing the retail prices of proprietary articles has been much discussed by the trade is Canada. Here is a view of the matter presented by S. W. Babcock, secretary of the Grocers' Association of Denver, Col., in a letter to Secretary Green of the National Association. It was printed in the association bulletin:

Dear Sir,—As there is at the present time quite a little discussion on the manufacturer maintaining the retail price, I would ask that you, through the Trade Press Bulletin allow me to use your space in giving to the retailers a little insight as to the effect of this method on the merchants of Colorado, and, more especially, Denver.

A careful study of the matter so far as Colorado is concerned will demonstrate beyond a shadow of doubt that our plan, instead of curtailing profits, has increased them, and that making each component part of the grocer's stock carry its just proportion of profit and expense will increase the percentage of profit perceptibly.

I have never asked, either as secretary of the association, or personally, any manufacturer to maintain a price on his goods for the benefit of the retailer. But if I can convince him that it is just to do so and that his business will be benefited by so doing, and he does it of his own accord and on his motion I am much pleased.

I don't wish to be understood as pleading of you to take our side in the matter; I know a secretary's business better than that. But I wished to place my personal position before you as being a supporter of this idea as a matter of being the right thing, the principles of which I believe, cannot be assailed, except as matters of policy, location, money or individual, and for each of these reasons I have had men oppose me, but when I came down to the last question, "It is not right? so far I have never failed to get the answer "That may be, but—"

We have worked for many moons trying to fix the soap situation in Denver. The average profit on soap to the grocer of Denver was virtually nothing, and one manufacturer told me, straight to my face, that I might just as well wish for the moon; another that only a fool would dream of such a thing as maintaining a retail price on soap, but about four thousand boxes of soap have been sold at a profit of 65 cents a box, and I defy one manufacturer to break the price. We have maintained it since last October with only one break, in which instance the jobber was requested to get the soap, which he was glad to do.

A few days ago, I had the extreme pleasure of telling the manufacturer who called me a fool, that his particular brand was absolutely dead so far as Denver was concerned, and to take it out and bury it.

A Guarantee that is Worth Something

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

& SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

is printed and packed in every box of SUN PASTE Stove Polish. Our guarantee stands at par because all you have to do is to notify us if any of our SUN PASTE is found defective in any way and we do the rest. It is no surprise to us, however, that so many thousands of storekeepers are selling our SUN PASTE year in and year out with never a defective tin. We make the goods right. That is the kind of Paste Polish you find it worth while to push.

EXCELLENCE is said to be granted to man "as the reward of labor."

Plodding diligence brings it.
Faithful watchfulness brings it.
Patient investigation brings it.
All these labors and many more enter into the production of

"WOOD'S COFFEES"

But in them supreme excellence is the watchword and the realization.

You Wonder Why

we are so certain Acme Cans are absolutely the best made! It is because we have spared no expense in equipping our factory in the most modern fashion. Everything is up-to-date. Again, we say because we employ only trained workmen—men who know their business from A to Z. Another thing which contributes to the merit of our cans is the fact that we use nothing in raw material that is not guaranteed first-class.

Acme Cans Are Best

jars and packages are dainty in appearance and look well on your shelves. Buyers are often influenced by the outside appearance of the packages and it is to your benefit to stock only those goods which are contained in dainty and attractive packages, providing of course you can rely upon the quality of the goods inside. With C. & B. goods the superior appearance of the jars, glasses, etc., is merely an indication of the superior quality of what is inside, and you can rely on every consumer finding that the goods in every way come up to their appearance. C. & B. on our wrappers is a guarantee of the quality of the contents.

A special window display of C. & B. goods is sure to attract attention and custom. Why not put one in your window to-day?

The Turned-Down Corners

Here and there in the Ledger of Life you have turned down the corner of a page for remembrance sake—you'd forget something if the turned-down corner wasn't there.

To-day, turn down a corner deep and wide to remember this one sure fact: "Quality is remembered long after price is forgotten." Every time you come to that particular page—remember. Every time you try to sell inferior quality, think of the turned-down corner—what it stands for, and what it really means to your success.

"Taylor's" Candied and Drained Peels

Made in England from the best Corsican peels only. Prepared from finest selected whole fruits—not from fruit skins from which the essential oil has been extracted. Highest quality. Always the same.

"Thistle" Brand Canned Haddie

FACTS NOT FIGURES

Do not overlook the fact, that the chief point of value to be considered in the management of a Grocery business, is to always have in stock the goods, that show you the best margin of profit, at the same time giving your customers entire satisfaction.

Blue Ribbon Tea does both for you.

It brings you a host of pleased customers.

It yields you a handsome profit.

In other words, it spells Success — what we are all aiming for.

"CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited"

That's the Factory the Favorite Canned Goods Come From—familiarly known as

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

The superiority of the brand is enhanced by the superiority of the factory. The best factory on the continent was necessary in order that we might reach our ideal! It was not enough that the fruit and vegetables which reached our canning department should be rarely pure and free from all taint. It was also necessary to build an ideal factory in an ideal location to assure the reality of the the brand which captured and holds the market, because of sheer merit and merit alone. Mr. Grocer! If you could examine our factory—see its spotlessness—the cleanliness of our methods, you would understand why the women of Canada insist on Old Homestead Brand of Canned Goods.

THERE IS A REASON

To explain the phenomenal increase in the sales of our Coffees. It is :

We give better value than our competitors.

We have on hand over 1,250 bags of green coffees, imported direct from the countries of growth, all selected with the greatest care for their high cup qualities.

We roast them by gas with the most improved machine known.

Our blends are combinations of coffees perfectly adapted to each other so as to produce strength and flavor.

Our experience is not of 50 years. We have no use for such an old thing.

We are modern and only want a trial order to prove what we say.

Credit and Money

Nine-tenths of the grocers who sell Windsor Salt (pure, white, crystaline, won't cake) have money in the bank. They discount their bills. Their credit is "A, Number One." Happy grocers they!

Windsor Salt plays its own little part in bringing about this contented state of things. It never disappoints the grocers' customer who buys it. It serves to hold confidence in the quality of a grocer's general stock. It establishes permanent family trade. It helps a grocer's credit—it brings him money.

The delicious goodness of Ripe, Juicy Fruit and Fresh Vegetables is preserved in

FARMER BRAND Canned Fruits and Vegetables

It is the opinion of shrewd dealers from seaboard to seaboard that this fact accounts for the exceeding popularity of Farmer Brand with the women of Canada.

We went into the canning business to can fruits and vegetables better than any concern occupying the field. There were good men and shrewd, too, in the business, but they only canned fruits and vegetables.

We proposed to can the delicious goodness of ripe fruit along with the fruit—the wholesomeness and energy-building qualities of fresh vegetables along with the vegetables, and we grew all we canned in a soil peculiarly favorable and in a climate which drew the best from earth and air. Can you wonder at the sterling Goodness of

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

St. George's Baking Powder

will prove to be a better seller than any other Baking Powder you ever carried

People are being educated on every hand into the importance of Pure Food.

The government, the magazines, the newspapers, are all in the good work—and the demand for adulterated articles must cease.

Your customers are learning how pure and good St. George's Baking Powder is—how free it is from alum, ammonia, lime and other adulterants. They have been reading about the law in England that makes it illegal to sell alum baking powders. They are beginning to realize what a large percentage of Canadian baking powders contain alum and acid phosphate. They know St. George's Baking Powder is guaranteed to be made of Cream of Tartar, 99.90 per cent. pure—and they will be asking you for St. George's.

It will pay you to stock St. George's—Alum and other adulterated brands will soon be impossible lines.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

BELLEVILLE

The grocery trade, especially retail, reports a very satisfactory state of business right along and we are looking forward to a prosperous spring trade. The outlook for Belleville's progress in all lines has not been more promising in many years and with the coming in of new industries, and the consequent increase of the city's population, it naturally follows that the grocer is bound to share in the prosperity.

The opening of spring is having a tendency to make a shortage in the produce of the farmer, as that worthy is remaining at home as much as possible, looking after and preparing his land for the coming harvest. The farmer is one who never forgets the Biblical injunction that "He who sows shall reap." As a consequence, since the nice, warm weather has arrived his and his family's absence from the market has had a tendency to produce a scarcity in the necessary farm produce, and therefore prices remain firm. But they cannot be blamed. As this county is one of the largest producers of cheese in the province it can hardly be expected that we will ever again see the days of cheap butter, as it is easier, and, the farmers claim, just as profitable, to send their milk to the cheese factories, and at the end of the season draw their dividends. Even in the winter the price of butter has not been lowered, as during those months when the factories are closed the farmers make and put down their own summer's supply of butter. For some months now the price of good butter has hovered from 25c. to 30c. a pound, and now the city housewife is becoming accustomed to paying it. Eggs also keep between 16c. to 18c. a dozen. Not long ago at this time of year 12c. was looked upon as a fair price by buyer and seller.

There is at present quite a scarcity of apples, and one day this week not a grocer in the city could fill an order. Each Saturday, however, there is generally a good showing on the market and they are soon picked up. Most of the apples from this district are exported. Hastings and Prince Edward counties are noted throughout the country for their great and productive orchards, which are mostly sold outright to the buyers, who come from all parts of Ontario. Thousands of barrels are packed and shipped from these parts each year.

The decision to rebuild the Hotel Quinte, which was destroyed by fire in January, is good news to the grocers, as it will be of much benefit to them. The city council, at its last meeting, ratified the special bill passed by the Ontario Legislature giving the city power to grant the new hotel a fixed rate of assessment of $10,000 for fifteen years, and also city water at $100 a year for the same length of time. Strange to say, the only opponents of the measure in the council were two grocers, Alderman Panter, chairman of public works, and Alderman Vermilyea, chairman of waterworks.

Jason Thompson, the well-known grocer, of Rossmore, just across the bay from this city, has just been appointed postmaster there and the appointment is a popular one.

Thomas Foley, who for the past ten years has been connected with one of the leading groceries in this city, has started in business for himself in Saskatchewan.

Tom Greer, who for many years has been a popular grocery clerk in London, and latterly in this city, has gone into the clothing business here.

Charlie Cherry, the popular traveler for Todhunter & Mitchell, coffees and spices, was a recent visitor here, and he reports splendid business all along the line. He thinks Belleville is on the middle edge of a great boom, and prodicts a bright future for the beautiful City of the Bay.

Another welcome visitor was Tom Wilson, an old Belleville boy, now traveling for a large tea house in Montreal. Tom is always glad to get back to the old city, where he spent so many happy days, and generally gets a long list of orders here. He was for some years with the Eby, Blain Co., and at the time he severed his connection with that firm The Grocer's Kingston correspondent gave him a well-deserved recommend. He is the eldest son of the late Jacob Wilson, one of Belleville's highly respected citizens.

Will. Cole, a well-known grocery traveler, and a native Belleviller, has just engaged as traveler with Warren Bros., of Toronto.

The city grocers were pleased to have a call last week from The Grocer's business manager, W. H. Seyler, who reported business booming wherever he has called. He paid a pleasant visit to John Harker, Belleville's longest subscriber to that journal. He will always be a welcome visitor here.

CHATHAM.

W. A. Stevens, of Halifax, is spending a couple of weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Stevens.

Elmer Ainslie has taken a position in the grocery department of J. S. Richardson's store, Tilbury.

Local grocers are taking an active part in the work of the newly organized Board of Trade. The mercantile committee includes John McCorvie, Wm. Anderson, Harry Northwood, Jas. Massey and H. Malcolmson, while the trade are represented on other committees as well.

Wm. Potter and John McCorvie were in Dresden last week, assisting in the revival of Dresden Encampment, I.O.O.F.

President G. W. Cowan, of the local Retail Merchants' Association, has received the following letter from D. A. Gordon, in answer to a communication sent to that gentleman by the local association asking him to oppose Mr. F. D. Monk's co-operative societies bill.

House of Commons,
Ottawa, April 23, 1907.

Mr. Geo. W. Cowan,
Chatham;

Dear Mr. Cowan,—I received your telegram and I immediately took up your protest with the Government. I might say you have the credit for being the first to enter a protest against Mr. Monk's bill. I succeeded in a few minutes' time in getting same held for this session. I am under the impression that your association will require to put in some earnest work in order to defeat the bill, or to secure such amendments as will safeguard the public interests.

Yours truly,
D. A. GORDON.

Mr. Cowan announces that the association intends to do the earnest work that Mr. Gordon talks about in his letter.

A well-attended and thoroughly representative meeting of the grocers of the Maple City was held on the evening of Tuesday, the 23rd, at Harrison hall, for the purpose of organizing the grocers' section of the local Retail Merchants' Association.

The work of organization was enthusiastically taken up by all present, the following officers being elected:

President—John McCorvie.
Vice-president—J. A. Wilson.
Secretary—Wm. Anderson.
Treasurer—Geo. Bartlett.
Executive—Harry A. Andrew, F. S. Bounsall, Ald. J. N. Massey, Ald. Wm. Potter.

The meeting, which was called merely for organization purposes, informally discussed the line the organization's work would take, and mapped out some subjects to be dealt with at future meetings. Prominent among matters which just now call urgently for attention is that of freights, in regard to which the local retailers feel that they are at a distinct disadvantage. Tea and coffee pedlars will also come in for attention. It is also hoped that the organization will prove very effective from a social standpoint, in bringing the various members of the grocery trade together, thereby doing away with any jealousies that may have existed hitherto, and promoting a spirit of unity among the trade. An encouraging feature of the meeting was that all classes of the trade were represented.

KINGSTON.

Kingston is quiet now. Queen's College has closed its doors and 1,200 students go out to all parts of the world feeling good over their successes—B.A.'s M.A.'s M.D.'s gold medals. What a good start for a young man? What possibilities before him if he only keeps to the right? He will meet temptations every day, for the devil has traps along the way. Who has not known a bright young man who has headed his class at college but who has met with Old Rye and Old Tom, and the rest is too sad to relate. Young man, you may down these two in a wrestling match but they will finally get you down and keep you there.

Navigation has now opened up and the sailors are on the Q. V. Mr. Seyler, of the staff of The Grocer, dropped off here on his way up from Montreal's food show and found his way up to see

Jim the Grocer. Of course Jim thought when he saw him come in he was a traveler for a first-class house, or may be a preacher collecting for a mortgaged church. Anyway, Jim was being talked at by Tom Wilson with an armful of tea samples.

Jim's clerk told him the gentleman was connected with The Canadian Grocer. That settled it. Tom was left standing behind the stove and Jim and The Grocer man shook hands. Then Tom came up and a pleasant talk occurred for about an hour.

It was raining and the streets were muddy and Jim appreciated Mr. Seylor's visit all the more, and regretted it was not later in the season so he could show him the pretty spots around the old limestone city.

Kingston is to have a zinc smelter. What does the Hamilton correspondent say about it? I am told Hamilton chased one away as it is injurious to fruit trees and everything else around it. If that's the case we don't want it. Thorold, I hear, is getting one four miles out of the town.

The corner stone of Queen's new biological building was laid by the Lieutenant-Governor. A big crowd witnessed the ceremony.

Our much esteemed member of the Ontario Legislature, Mr. E. J. B. Pense, bought a fine team of black horses. He was driving one lately up Barrie street and it wanted to let him know it had running qualities. Mr. Pense played lacrosse, etc., one time and he soon brought Mr. Black to time. I guess the horse didn't like the rough macadam road.

James Crawford has had his store painted and papered, new silent salesman put in, also cash railway for rapid transit of dimes and dollars.

Victoria Day celebration committee are arranging for a Marathon race and expect Longboat to compete.

Mr. Thickchest, of Kilgour Paper Bag Co., was in town. He is becoming more popular every visit and his goods are always right, which is a great source of adding to a traveler's popularity. He must have a good house and good reliable goods to back him up. Their new twine holder is cheap but first-class.

Congested freight! Why, some merchants have drafts over a week old and no sign of the goods yet. C.P.R. and G.T.R. are getting sleepy and can't meet the requirements. Can't get cars enough to carry the freight? Good sign; country must be prospering.

Some of the immigrants sent out from London are poor additions to our country. An Englishman said of them: "What can you expect of such as are sent? They only get bread and treacle and haven't got the bone and muscle of Canadians, and can't work along-side them."

One of the greatest and best picnics ever held in Kingston was the grocers' picnic a few years ago, and one of the best events of that famous picnic was the Comfort Soap race, conducted by the veteran traveler, W. D. Cockburn, who is responsible in a large way for the popularity Comfort Soap has retained.

The ladies, numbering about 40, who started in that famous race were delighted with the soap traveler. My, how they all fought to come in first. Some pulled the one ahead of them back; others tumbled in front of ones catching up. The prizes were gold and silver watches, and every lady got all the soap she picked up.

GUELPH.

Wealth is good, health is better, but to succeed in business tact is essential to-day and every day. Any person can perhaps sell an article, but every person can't pacify an angry woman sending her away feeling the store is right and she was slightly mixed, that's all.

But then you know that's why he is boss. Daring is necessary in buying these days. I heard a man, an old fruit handler, say he would like to work for our "Engineer," as he is such a game buyer—takes such risks and chances, but every chance is figured to a cent and a way is seen before the deal is closed. But that's why he is the engineer.

Did you ever hear of a really honest man? They tried to find 50 in Pittsburg and found 28. Now here's another. Did you ever hear of a truly honest grocer? One who sells pure vinegar and employs a chemist, to be sure of it. One who wouldn't sell alum baking power and told the people so. One, who ground his own spices. One who, when he found a wholesaler selling impure goods, made that dealer hump? I did, but he didn't live in Canada.

He lived in a suburb of New York. He had a wealthy class of trade, and he and a few of his customers banded to have goods analysed. This got out and his trade increased enormously. It pays to be honest, but sometimes its pretty hard to make it pay up.

A millionaire was troubled by sleeplessness. He offered thousands of dollars for a cure. Doctors tried every drug known, but after all had failed he was cured by a month's exclusive diet of—what do you grocers think?—rice. Yes, just rice, and I defy any man to eat rice and rice only for his suppur for one month and not sleep like a log. This is worth $5 please.

Give the people what they want and how they want it. If you haven't got it, get it, take the order. One of the most successful grocers I have ever known was never known to be out of anything. He always got it if he had to send to New York.

Our fine fire chief, Mr. Hewer, is giving up fire-fighting and going to fighting women over the price of sugar. He recently bought out his brother who owned a corner store on Nottingham St.

There is great rivalry among the window-dressers as to who can dress the best window. The best trimmers change twice a week, but one artist, and a boss, too, only changes every two weeks. Whew! I should think he would have to dust pretty well.

PETERBORO

The annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association was held here on Tuesday night, when an entire new lot of officers were elected. The society has for years been practically dead. Very little effort was made by the officers to keep the members together and to keep up the interest. The main object of the new executive is to increase the strength of the Retail Merchants' Association and they will start at once on the good work. The first thing they will do is to hold the big banquet already referred to in these columns. This affair will be a big one with far-reaching effects and by the way the members took hold of things it promises to be a great success.

The meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. parlors at 8 o'clock, with President Robt. Fair in the chair. After the routine business was put through the members began figuring on a new set of officers, with the following results:

President—C. B. Routley.
Vice-President—J. H. Connal.
Secretary—Jas. R. Bell.
Treasurer—Walter Oke
Executive Committee—The above officers and Robt. Fair, H. LeBrun, R. J. Kingan, Jas. Lang, Jas. Lynch, C. M. Brown, J. D. Craig, T. C. Elliot, R. McWhinnie, Thos. Barrie, F. J. N. Mitchell, W. Adamson and Dickson Hall.

The matter of arranging for a banquet was left in the hands of the executive committee to fix the date, place, speakers, programme, etc.

An interesting feature of the new list of officers is that the vice-president, secretary and treasurer are all retail grocers.

Quaker Wheat Berries, about which something was said a few weeks ago, have been placed on the market. The Quaker Oats Co. turned out the first batch last week and it proved very successful. The wheat is inflated and makes an excellent and most nutritious breakfast food. Already a large number of orders have been received for it, and there is every reason to believe that it will be very popular with the public.

Fresh fish made its first appearance on the local market on Saturday and sold at 20 cents per half dozen. Of course, they were only suckers, as the season for bass, 'lunge and pickerel is closed. But the suckers sold as fast as the fishermen could count them out. Another very popular delicacy which appeared for the first time this year was frogs' legs. A number of boys spent the day around the ponds and swamps and in the evening sold them to the restaurants.

The fishery inspector this year has his hands full. There is only one man instead of three, and the fishermen, knowing this take advantage of it and are catching large quantities of fish out of season. When the inspector was seen by your correspondent he said that he never saw so many fish in the Otonabee river, the lakes and the little creeks.

He spoke of several large breeding beds where a man could get a carload of fine big lunge in a few hours. The trouble in fishing just now is that one cannot gather the finny creatures in fast enough. The prospects for a great summer for the tourists visiting the lakes were never so bright, but the staff of inspectors should be increased to protect the fish for the next few months.

H. Paten who is connected with Jordan Bros'. greenhouses here, has shipped a consignment of 250 carnation roots to Adelaide, South Australia. This is the first time an attempt has been made by a Canadian to send flowers to the distant island continent. The roots were selected and packed by Dale & Co., of Brampton, and the greatest care was taken in the operation. They were carried by the Dominion Express Co. to Vancouver, and sailed on the steamer Moana on Friday last. Mr. Paten has been in Peterborough for some time and he deserves great credit for undertaking this experiment. Florists throughout the Dominion will watch with great interest the result. If the roots live and flourish there will, no doubt, be opened a good trade in this line with Australia, as the people there are passionately fond of carnations.

All the cheese factories throughout this district are open, and the first cheese was made on Wednesday. The delivery of milk was only fair as the farmers did not look after their cows properly last season and a large number of them are late coming in. But the quality of milk and cheese promises to be much better this year as many new features have been adopted by the cheese factories and the farmers. The cheese board will open on Wednesday, May 15th, when it is expected that prices will be good. Those quoted at Belleville last Saturday were 11½c. to 12c.

So great is the demand for ice cream and ice cream soda that the price this year will be increased by most of the dealers to ten cents. This will mean that a much better article will have to be produced, as some of those who were prominent in shoving the price up served the poorest cream and soda. A couple of the dealers, however, intend to continue selling at five cents. They claim that there is enough profit in it at that price and to double the price would mean to reduce the consumption or to drive the trade to the Greeks, who refuse to join any combine.

Another deputation of merchants waited upon the council on Monday night in connection with the overhanging sign by-law and the by-law which prohibits merchants displaying goods on the sidewalk. They succeeded in having the aldermen refer the two by-laws back to committee to be reconsidered. It is likely the question will be finally settled next Monday night.

STRATFORD.

The situation among the retail grocers, as regards the price cutting, remains the same.

A meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association was held on Thursday night of last week, for the purpose of discussing the early closing by-law and the transient traders' by-law, but, owing to the small attendance, nothing definite was done.

Tomato growers predict that the crop will be short this year on account of the cold weather. It is the practice of tomato growers to set out the seeds in the hot-beds, relying on the warm April sun to nurture the little plants. This April there has been little or no sunshine, with the result that thousands of the little plants died in the hot-beds, and when the plants are set out about the middle of May the acreage will be considerably short of normal.

The market here on Saturday last was not as large as usual, owing, no doubt, to the excellent seed weather which prevailed. Prices ranged about the same as usual, although eggs dropped one cent. Maple syrup has also taken a considerable drop, from 45c. to 35c. and 30c. per quart.

Green vegetables. That's the product that is selling well with our grocers at the present time. A number of the dealers have very pretty displays of green vegetables in their windows and, being fresh, the demand is good. Prices are very reasonable, considering the early season.

The auto delivery system has evidently fallen through as far as our merchants are concerned.

It is understood that the half holiday will be worked up amongst the grocers in Stratford this coming summer. In previous years every other business, or almost every other business place but that of the grocers, closed one half-day in the week. The half-holiday movement will be pushed by the clerks this summer.

NOVA SCOTIA NOTES.

Kentville is a very progressive town. There are a great many apples grown in this section. In the matter of catering to the wants of the people, DeWolf & Lamont and Will E. Smith lead. During the past week Mr. Smith has had on sale some exceptionally fine beef that would not have disgraced the store of some swell meat market about Xmas time. He has lately had both his grocery and meat stores finished in white enamel. Everything about the store denotes prosperity.

DeWolf & Lamont have lately added a meat market to their other lines and carry a fine assortment of meats of all kinds, both fresh and smoked. This popular firm's already large business is rapidly increasing. They handle large quantities of all kinds of feed, flour, etc. Their grocery department always contains a very fine selection of the best groceries.

T. P. Calkin & Co. carry a large stock of hardware and farming tools, and also do a big plumbing and fitting business. They have a branch at Middleton and report business as very encouraging for this time of year. Poor roads keep some trade back.

The Dominion Atlantic R.R. Co. are busy these days getting their cars into shape for the summer traffic which is always very large by this popular road. Kentville boasts several fine hotels which are well patronized. The Aberdeen and Porter being the principal.

Mr. C. S. Eaton, who recently started in the grocery business here has quickly worked up a nice business. He will add more lines at once.

Messrs. Bowman and Colein, of St. John, N.B., have a fine trade in the Valley, their representative, Mr. Holdsworth, being one of the popular men in this territory.

Eaton & Co., Canning, have one of the best laid out and conducted stores in the Maritime Provinces. The goods are well displayed and kept beautifully and neat. At present they are making a specialty of seeds and their sales are very gratifying. This firm carry a large stock and do an immense business. Mr. Eaton, the proprietor, is very popular with all classes. He always has a kind word and a genial smile for the boys of the road. He knows his business, too, and does not know it all like some other buyers in this vicinity. No wonder men like Mr. Eaton succeed where others fail.

VICTORIA, B.C.

There is considerable interest being taken here in the Wednesday half-holiday question, and many merchants and clerks are anxiously waiting the outcome. The movement was originated by the grocery clerks, who circulated a petition among their employers, and met with very little opposition to their request, but, little as the opposition was, it was sufficient to put a damper on the matter, and now the clerks are organizing and by this means expect to meet with better success.

The clerks are working hard, and an effort will be made to organize all the retail clerks of the city, and if they are successful it is probable that the holiday will be extended to all classes of the retail trade. Other matters are also under discussion, such as 6 o'clock closing for the grocers—who now close at 6.30, Saturdays excepted—practically all other classes of the trade close at 6 o'clock.

The majority of the merchants appear to be in favor of the holiday, but some want a certain day and others object, and suggest some other scheme. The difficulty seems to be in arriving at a solution of the matter that will be satisfactory to the greatest number. Doubtless some concessions will have to be made, and it is hoped that an amicable settlement will be reached in the near future.

Probably the most interesting item in the grocery trade at present is butter, which is a very scarce commodity. At this season of the year such a shortage is unusual. Fresh creamery butter in 1-pound prints is retailing at 40c., and even at that price all grocers report a great shortage.

California new grass butter has just reached this market, and that, no doubt, will relieve the situation a little. Here are a few retail prices:

Fresh eggs are still very firm at 30c. dozen.

Local asparagus, 20c. and 25c. a lb.

Local rhubarb, 8c and 10c. a lb.

Local hot house lettuce, 5c. per head.

Local hot house cucumbers, 35c each.

Local hot house tomatoes, 35c. per lb.

California new potatoes, 10c. per lb.

California green potatoes, 15c. per lb.

California tomatoes, 25c. per lb.

Oranges and lemons rather higher.

Bananas are more plentiful and of better quality.

WOODSTOCK.

If the city of Woodstock has for some time been rather neglected in the correspondence columns of The Grocer, it was not because there were no grocers in the place warranting notice, or because there was nothing of interest to report. Woodstock, a city of less than ten thousand people, has between fifteen and twenty grocery stores. Of course, they range all the way from the fine, modern, well-equipped places of business, to the traditional corner groceries in the outskirts of the city, which do a considerable trade with residents of the immediate vicinity. But the majority of the stores belong to the up-to-date class, and compare favorably with any in the country in a city of similar size. Large stocks of fresh goods are carried, and trade is always good.

The season, which came to a close last week, has been an exceptionally good one for the manufacture of maple syrup in this vicinity. A large quantity has been brought into the city, and for the greater part disposed of at $1.25 per gallon. Occasionally, on a Saturday, such a great amount would come in that the price would go down to one dollar, but it could not be kept at that figure, and early in the week, when the supply was smaller, the grocers would have it up again. For all that, the quantity locally manufactured could not keep pace with the demand for the superior class of goods. "We could get any quantity of a certain class of syrup," said a leading grocer to your correspondent today. "But it was difficult to secure the best," he added. This particular grocer thereupon imported about two hundred gallons of the best class of goods that could be secured from Quebec, guaranteed by the manufacturers to be absolutely pure. "It is selling like hot cakes," he said, "I have it in stock, selling at $1.40 a gallon, and locally-made goods at $1.25, and those who have tried both invariably choose the more expensive article." He gives as the reason for the fact, that better syrup is made in the Lower Provinces, that it is more of a business there, and is carried on more scientifically, and made in larger quantities. Those in the vicinity who are in the business do not agree with this opinion, and declare that they can make just as good maple syrup as anybody, anywhere. So there you are.

One would think that grocers would take a deep interest in any organization which would tend to act for their benefit, but unfortunately such does not seem to be the case in this city. There is in Woodstock a Retail Merchants' Association, in which so little interest is taken that at the last regular meeting there were only three members present. No difficulty has ever been experienced in getting a large membership, but after joining, members simply cannot be persuaded to retain interest, and attend meetings regularly. "The trouble is," said a grocer to me the other day, "that the big merchants up the street do not take any active interest in the association. They should take the lead. There are many matters of interest to all the men along the street, which might be taken up to much advantage and benefit. I am sick and tired of it, and am not going to renew my membership after it expires."

Italian fruit vendors are beginning to complain of the scarcity of bananas this spring. They are rather hard to procure, and the result is, the price has been kept up pretty high, save when some dealer accumulates an over-ripe supply, when they are sold off at bargain prices. There are four Italian dealers in Woodstock, and they are respected and thrifty members of the business community. They import fruit together, by the carload, as a rule, and sell it wholesale to grocers and lesser dealers as they require anything in the fresh fruit line.

WINNIPEG'S COMING FOOD SHOW

Winnipeg's first pure food show promises to be a big success. It will be conducted on the same lines as the shows in Montreal and Toronto, which have proved so highly successful in the past and both the manufacturers and the general public are already displaying a keen interest in the coming midsummer show.

Of course the pure food show is designed primarily to interest the consumer and to educate her in the proper modes of using pure foods. This show is, however, being held under the auspices of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada, and as the convention of that body will be held during the exhibition, an unusually large number of merchants are sure to be present. This makes the Winnipeg pure food show of particular value to the exhibitor.

Booth space is being taken up rapidly and the manufacturers of foods and groceries are making preparations for elaborate displays and careful demonstrating. Among the many who will have exhibits at the pure food show are the following: The Royal Crown, Ltd., Winnipeg; Blue Ribbon Mfg. Co., Winnipeg; Dingle & Stewart, Winnipeg; John Bearns, Ltd., London, Eng., and Winnipeg, Man.; Alexander Milling Co., Brandon; Scott, Bathgate & Co., Winnipeg; W. J. Boyd, Winnipeg; Walter Baker & Co., Montreal; R. A. Rogers & Co., Winnipeg; Blackwoods, Ltd., Winnipeg; Standard Soap Co., Calgary; Nicholson & Bain, Winnipeg; Walter L. Lowney Co., Montreal; McCormick Mfg. Many other manufacturers have signified their intention of exhibiting at the show and the list is by no means complete. The dates of the show are July 1st to 13th.

BUSINESS MEN AND HORSE SHOWS.

While they have become, to a large extent, society events, horse shows are not without interest to business men. Most business men have some interest in the horse. In spite of motors it is still, and will be for a long time to come, a useful factor in the commercial world. Even when the animal's place in the dray and delivery wagon of the manufacturer or merchant no longer exists, as some prophesy, those who love horses will love them still and business men will not be among the forgetful ones.

At the horse show that is being held in Toronto this week is afforded an opportunity of warming up one's affections for the animal, which business men, as well as others, should not be slow to grasp.

TOTAL SHIPMENTS.

Gordon, Grant & Co., Port of Spain, in their mail advice under date of April 1, say of Trinidad cocoa. "Exports for the fortnight amount to 2,947 bags, of which 2,303 bags went to the U. S., and 20 bags to Canada, and from 1st January to date shipments have been 12,864 bags as compared with 15,714 bags for the corresponding period of last year." Of the Venezuela cocoa they say: "Shipments during the fortnight aggregate 12,523 bags, of which 7,777 bags went to the United States and 200 bags to Canada. From 1st October to date exports amount to 76,299 bags as compared with 126,143 bags for the corresponding period of last year. From 1st uroximo the export tax on cocoa will be 20c. per 100 lbs.—instead of 7c. formerly."

TRAVELER COMES TO HIS OWN.

A very quiet wedding took place at the residence of the bride's father, Walter J. Smith, 48 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, on Saturday afternoon last, the occasion being the marriage of his eldest daughter, Nina, to J. H. Boyd, also of Toronto, traveling salesman for the firm of T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B. The officiating clergyman was Mr. J. D. Freeman, of Bloor St. Baptist church. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd left on an early train for a short trip west.

This is very good and The Canadian Grocer is glad. The friends of Red Rose tea in Western Ontario will rejoice also and next week the lucky ones among the grocers will extend the glad hand of fellowship. Mr. Boyd is one of the ablest salesmen on the road, but no good man ever does his best till he is married, and now the friends of the firm look to see red roses blooming on the telegraph poles.

DAVIDSON & HAY CLOSE EARLY.

Davidson & Hay were among the pioneers among the wholesale grocers in Toronto in the early closing movement. Beginning May 1st and until Sept. 1st, the firm will close at 5 p.m. instead of 6. This practice they began ten years ago and have continued, regardless of what the rest of the trade did. It is a practice greatly appreciated by all the employes. Of course they close at one o'clock on Saturdays the year round.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS--
Fish—Revised.
Beans—Lower.
Maple products—Easier.

Montreal, May 2, 1907.

Local navigation will be open in a few days and it will be possible to ship freight to river ports between Montreal and Quebec most expeditiously. Renewed activity will result. Already there are a few steamers in the harbor, awaiting the breaking up of the remaining ice before making the first trip to Quebec. Lower freight rates, possible through the opening of navigation, will be the cause of considerable buying in all parts of the country.

Markets keep steady with little excitement in any line. Canned goods are moving out satisfactorily. Sugar is stationary, although some talk of an advance. Teas are selling very well for the season. Evaporated apples are quiet at 10 cents. Beans are lower this week and orders are good. Peels are going to be higher, according to all talk. An interesting statement of the exports of currants from Greece will be found in the dried fruit market. Coffees and spices are unchanged. Corn syrups are selling particularly well. New molasses is being quoted to arrive, but prices are somewhat fancy. Maple goods are arriving freely, but business might be better. Butter keeps firm, as does also cheese. Honey is slow.

Collections are reported fair to good.

SUGAR—Sugar is about steady. There is a possibility of a price change, but there is no certainty. It is expected that sales will increase after the opening of local navigation.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Figs are being cleaned up in the States, the low prices asked having stimulated consumption. Locally they are practically unchanged. Raisins are without particular feature. There are reports of a sale of one thousand boxes of Sultanas in New York to Canadian buyers. The price paid was above that quotable in Montreal. A statement from Patras, Greece, shows that to the end of March, currants shipped to all countries exceeded the 100,000 mark by 9,625 tons. As a consequence it was possible to draw upon the reserve stock. For the same season last year exports were 100,607 tons. Canada imported direct up to April 1, 1,476 tons, against 1,683 last year. Against this, however, there have been shipments via New York this year amounting to 1,900 tons. Reports from Greece say the market is quiet and inactive. The reduced duty now in force caused many to hold off until it came into effect. Now, however, they are not buying very freely. The reduced tariff makes a difference of about 2s. a ton. Higher prices for new peels are talked. Tarragona almonds are easier.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Latest mail advices report a very firm market for M.P. tapioca, especially for near shipments, and cabled prices have been higher than those touched for many years past. The further advance appears to have been caused by buying on the part of "shorts," who evidently sold spring shipments some time ago and now when they come in to cover, holders have had things all their own way. The same firmness has communicated itself to spot lots in England, and London especially, is practically bare of stocks, except for very fine quality, for which fancy prices are being paid. Dealers here have been rather averse for some months past to paying the high prices asked, with the consequence that they have neglected somewhat to buy ahead. This is to some extent comprehensible owing to the length of time it takes for shipments to arrive from the east, but on the other hand they are now feeling the want of the tapioca which should have been ordered several months ago. There is every appearance of the present high range of values for tapioca lasting for some time to come. Rice is normal.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Canned goods continue to move out freely enough. Demand is for nearly all lines obtainable. Gallon apples appear to be going well. One jobber reports a sale of one thousand cases to Scotland. There is no talk yet about futures and there is considerable speculation in the trade as to what is coming. Nobody cares to give an opinion as yet.

TORONTO—A somewhat freer distribution of canned goods is about the only feature to the grocery trade this week. This has given a noticeably better tone to the market. The Old Homestead Canning Co. had about $10,000 worth of canned goods, tomatoes, corn and some gallon apples consumed in the Ontario Storage Co.'s fire this week. Of course they were insured. W. H. Millman & Son, agents for the Old Homestead Company here, and also selling agents for the Ontario Sugar Company, had $35,000 worth of sugar in the same fire. It, too, was insured. There is some talk now of the late spring affecting the tomato crop, but that is not likely. All kinds of canned fruits are in small compass. Corn is said to be getting into a better position. There is a good steady demand for salmon.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Better tone to canned goods market.
Pineapples lower.
Butter lower.
Unwashed wool quoted.

Toronto, May 2, 1907.

Trade generally is somewhat improved, but is still restricted. The unseasonable weather checked the consumption of groceries, though why it should is always admitted to be a mystery. The week's grocery trade is practically featureless save for a slightly more active movement of canned goods, both fruits and vegetables. This is accompanied by a stronger feeling in regard to tomatoes. Perhaps it is indicative of the strength of the situation that a very modest improvement in consumption brightens things appreciably. Sugar continues firm but unchanged in price. Trade in dried fruits is very limited but prices remain firm. Quotations for rice and tapioca are very firm, and tapioca is said to be advancing steadily on the primary markets.

Tea is still firm, and the movement is most marked in the common and lower grades.

TEA.—The English Budget announcement brought no change in the tea duty and a much more active movement is now assured. Thompson's tea circular of April 18th says: "The known shortage of trade stocks, combined with the feeling that improved trade conditions are imminent, brought about a distinctly better tone at the small Ceylon and Java auctions, and 4½ per lb. advance may be quoted on all leaf teas up to about 8d. per lb. Broken Pekoes did not appreciate in value to the same extent, but even for these there was more enquiry, while the best liquoring descriptions also met with keener competition."

Locally, the trade continues active.

COFFEE — Foreign markets are uninteresting. Local quotations are unchanged.

SUGAR — The market for raws is still firm, but quotations for refined here are unchanged At the end of last week there were 111 Cuban centrals still grinding and the estimate of the total crop of the island has been advanced 100,000 tons, to 1,325,000 tons. Receipts at United States ports were heavier than during any other week of this campaign, 76,891 tons. This accounts for no special anxiety on the part of buyers. Reports from Cuba at the end of the week indicated a very strong tone to the market there, however, and in New York on Tuesday the price advanced 1-32. Stocks of raw in the United States and Cuba were at the beginning of last week 735,000 tons, 130,000 tons more than a year ago. The total stock of Europe and America, 3,516,090 tons, against 3,761,121 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 245,031 tons, against a decrease of 258,536 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,611,090 tons, against 3,881,121 tons last year, or a decrease of 270,031 tons.

His territory will be east and north of Toronto in Ontario. It will not be J. M.'s fault if "Royal Sport" and "Hogen-Mogen cigars are not to be had on his ground. Good luck!

"DO-OVER" SALMON WENT TO THE FURNACE

Seizure in Montreal of 750 Cases of Big Fir, Emblem and Stanley Brands—What Auctioneer Suckling Says—J. S. Donaldson Denies Shipping it.

Fifty-two thousand, mostly ½-lb., tins of canned salmon were burned by order of the Health Committee of the Montreal City Council last week. As a result of these instructions the incineration department destroyed 715 cases of salmon, being in value about $8,000.

This large lot of salmon was shipped from Toronto by J. S. Donaldson, according to the health department, to Suckling & Co., auctioneers, Montreal. Suckling & Co. were to dispose of the lot by auction. Several Montreal wholesalers were approached and allowed to look over the salmon, when the consignment was put up for sale.

During the course of the sale the city health officials put in an appearance, examining the salmon and informing the auctioneers that owing to the decomposed state of the fish it was to be considered seized until further examination was made.

Dr. McCarrey, chief food inspector, found that the salmon was absolutely unfit for human consumption and then the order was given to have it burned.

When seen by The Canadian Grocer, Dr. McCarrey stated that he was informed that the fish had been packed but two years, but he had no means of telling just how long it had been tinned. Some had told him that they had been done over. Many of the tins had no labels on them. The goods were packed in large cases, considerably larger than the average case of salmon. There were many sizes in the tins also.

Montrealers are considerably worked up over the matter. The general public are glad to have had such a narrow escape from poisoning; the grocery trade think that the Toronto people who shipped such a lot of poisoned goods to Montreal have done something which will not soon be forgotten.

May Prosecute.

Some legal action may be taken by the city to prosecute the shippers of the putrid fish. Through the present pure food laws it may be a little difficult to reach a party residing in Toronto. Under the city by-laws it would be impossible to prosecute them. The Federal Food Adulteration Act will, it is thought, cover the case. Section E of this Act provides that those who offer for sale, deteriorated, rotten or putrid foodstuffs, as defined in the enactment, shall be subject to a fine of not more than $50 and not less than $10.

Chairman Dr. Dagenais of the health committee thinks that the shippers of the salmon should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. In his opinion such a small fine would not be sufficient punishment. Dr. McCarrey agrees with Dr. Dagenais, but is doubtful if it could be proved that the shippers or the auctioneers were aware of the putrid state of the salmon when they received it. Possibly some action may be taken under the criminal code.

Suckling & Co., having offices in Montreal, could be prosecuted under the city by-laws as offering for sale food unfit for human consumption.

Further steps will be taken to thoroughly investigate the matter.

What Mr. Suckling Says.

Mr. Suckling was seen at his Toronto office by a representative of The Canadian Grocer, and was very much displeased at the action of the Montreal health committee. He said there was ample opportunity given for testing the salmon and several cases of it were taken away by the trade for that purpose. One broker bought about half the lot for a prominent Montreal wholesale house at 34c. and 36c. a dozen, and was quite prepared to take it, even after the interference of the health officer. Mr. Suckling said: "I think the salmon must have been frozen. On the test that was made about one-eighth of the tins opened were found to be bad, but the rest were perfectly good. The tins, from all outward appearance, were fresh and bright, not the slightest indication of being worn or knocked about. We received them from a reliable firm for whom we had done business before. We sold a thousand cans of practically the same salmon in Toronto last fall, and there wasn't a complaint."

J. A BEAUDRY

Some of this salmon sold last fall is still being sold in Toronto. It is going mostly to the restaurants and boarding houses, which buy it by the box, and if they come across a bad can they simply throw it away. It was sold at about half the price of ordinary salmon.

The impression of the trade is that the salmon was made up of "do-overs." It was all of the 1905 salmon, when the large pack prevented putting the inferior product on the market. New salmon is so scarce and the market so firm that the time is evidently thought propitious for the sale of the refuse.

The cards sent out giving notice of the Montreal sale thus catalogues the salmon, 230 cases of Big Fir brand, 316 cases Emblem brand, 91 cases of Stanley brand. All but the Stanley brand were ½-lb. flats and were labeled. The Emblem brand were pound talls and unlabeled, but the labels were there to be put on. The entire lot was described as red sockeye.

The relation betwen the salmon sold in Toronto by Suckling & Co., in November last, and that confiscated in Montreal may be traced in the following incident.

Towards the end of November, on the 26th to be exact, a Toronto retailer bought from a prominent wholesale house about a dozen cases of salmon, all of it Emblem brand. The salmon was returned to him by several of the customers, to whom he sold it, with the complaint that it was quite unfit for consumption. The retailer passed this complaint on to the wholesale house, with a demand for the return of his money. The salmon was returned, but the wholesaler would not accept it and refused to refund the price, on the ground that he declined to consider himself as in any way responsible for the quality of the goods. The matter was under arbitration from the 26th of November to the 1st of April, and the retailer had finally decided to obtain redress in the courts, when he received word from the wholesaler to the effect that he now HAD AN OPPORTUNITY OF DISPOSING OF THE SALMON, and wanted to ship it that day and would take it back.

J. S. Donaldson, broker, Toronto, was seen by a representative of The Canadian Grocer, and denied that he was in any way connected with the shipping of the consignment to Montreal, also that he was in any way interested in it.

CANADIANS AT VERMONT MEETING.

The first annual State Convention of the Retail Merchants of Vermont was held on April 22nd to May 4th and scored the success which was prophesied for it by everyone who understood the immense amount of labor and thought expended by the managers and committee. Toronto sent three delegates, E. M. Trowern, M. Moyer, and F. C. Higgins, and they are unanimous in speaking in the highest terms of the general arrangements and provisions for their comfort.

One great work which has been accomplished by the association is the killing of the Parcels Post Bill, its extinction, whether temporary or otherwise, being the direct result of the efforts of that body.

It is expected that Mr. Green, the secretary of the association, and Mr. Winters, the general manager of the convention, will attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Retail Merchants' Association in Hamilton in July.

J. Ernest Clark, for a number of years manager of the Harry Webb Co.'s business in Montreal, has severed his connection with that company and joined the staff of Thomas J. Lipton. Mr. Clark will work from the newly opened branch of Lipton's at 75 Front St. east and his particular territory will be the city of Toronto. Well known to the trade as he is, Mr. Clark should make Lipton's goods a prime favorite.

SALMON.

Some people harbor the view that the Montreal salmon incident was an example of making a mountain out of a molehill. Mr. Suckling, the auctioneer, attributes all his trouble to the appetite of one or two Montreal aldermen for playing to the gallery. Mr. Suckling sold a lot of what he says was the same kind of salmon in Toronto, and so far as we have heard there have been no fatalities.

A broker said to The Canadian Grocer: "This kind of thing is very bad for the salmon trade. It's a pity it was published." Of course it's bad for the salmon trade, but the pity is that people, reputable packers, will put such stuff on the market. "Do-overs" should be absolutely prohibited unless some positively sure means can be devised of eliminating the one can in every five, or eight, or sixteen that goes bad. Another thing, the Government should prohibit is the selling of any kind of canned, cooked or preserved food that does not bear the brand of the manufacturer or a reputable dealer who takes the responsibility for it.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST.

The business man who takes for gospel truth the alarmist reports with reference to business conditions in the west that are now appearing in the eastern daily papers is making a very grave mistake. Unfortunately newspaper correspondents have a peculiar and not unnatural fondness for sending out "front page stories" that make interesting reading, and it not infrequently happens that these stories contain gross exaggerations which do the western provinces no little harm. But the business men of Canada should know their own country sufficiently well to understand the situation for themselves.

True, the Canadian west came through the worst winter in twenty years, and the same can be said of the western states across the line. It is also true that the hard winter demoralized the two western railways and that the junior road is still in trouble. But it is also true that the prosperity of western Canada rests upon a sound basis and that, while the country must suffer as a consequence of the adverse conditions of the last few months, temporary troubles can have no permanent effect. The C.P.R. have given a service in the west of which, considering the tremendous difficulties which they had to face, they have reason to be proud. Business men freely admit this, even while complaining bitterly of the delays in their shipments, for they realize the difficulty of the task which confronted that railway during the winter. The C.N.R. has not done so well and is receiving general censure for the poor showing made.

The winter tie-up is, however, only temporary, and the traffic congestion is now being relieved. When the millions of bushels of wheat still in the country are moved money will circulate freely again and the difficulties of the winter will soon be forgotten. The newspapers did not indulge in hysterics when the railways of Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces were tied up with snow blockades in recent winters and there is no more reason for hysterics in newspaper despatches and editorials relating to business conditions in the western provinces.

WEST INDIA TRADE.

The co-operative effort of the Canadian Boards of Trade to send to the West Indies a delegation to enquire into the possibilities of extending Canadian trade with the Islands is amply justified by their report. Despite the climbing figures of the periodical reports of the Dominion's commerce over-seas, Canada's export trade is only in its infancy. While this is true in regard to agricultural products, it is especially true of manufactures. Reports have been coming to hand pretty steadily from Canadian commercial agents containing complaints of over-seas buyers about the unsatisfactory methods of Canadian exporters, discourtesy, lack of continuity in quality of product, faulty packing. Canadian manufacturers have been so busy with their expanding home trade that they have given only spasmodic attention to their trade abroad.

Canada is the largest buyer of West Indian sugar, the chief product of the Islands, but this trade is going to the United States, because the Americans have gone after it. What the Board of Trade delegates tell us is that Canadians can take this trade if they put forth the necessary effort, having in their favor the strong British sentiment of the Islands. The report of the delegates is good reading and the tact and energy displayed shows at least that Messrs. Jones, Schofield and Allan were the right men to send.

BE PROGRESSIVE AND UNITED.

The mail order house builds up its business, and continues to extend its territory by being progressive in its ideas and organized in its work. It is thoroughly organized and works in perfect harmony. They are able to take business from the country, not so much because their goods are better in quality or that they fill orders so much more quickly, but because they do not meet with any organized opposition from the rural stores.

The merchant in town and country is self-centred and exclusive and very often not favorably disposed toward the competitors in their own community. Their own knowledge of business is so much further advanced over their competitors and they are so inspired with the idea that no one can teach them, that they are content to remain where they are, to oppose innovations and to defy all attempts at union and organization.

The moment an efficient organization is formed, and more unanimity of ideas is adopted then will the mail order houses meet with some powerful opposition and a damper on their strong rural trade. The purpose of associations is not to provide assemblies of the dealers for expression of goodwill for the time being and some social enjoyment. The great aim of a retail association is the providing of assemblies for the exchange of ideas and mutual education to enable the retail men in rural districts the more intelligently to cope with the growing power and influence of the mail order houses and make possible organized opposition, and do away with the weak and disunited front which the rural districts present.

EXHIBITION OF GROCERIES IN MONTREAL

It Was a Grand Success—Attendance About 40,000—Nucleus of an Annual Exhibition—Finest Exhibition of its Kind Ever Held on the Continent—Delegations From Ottawa and Toronto—Many Outside Visitors—Three Banquets Held—Exhibitors Spent $50,000.

Montreal's exhibition of groceries closed Saturday evening last week with a crowd that broke all big records established during the fortnight of the fair. That success attended the efforts of the organizers no one will for a moment doubt. From start to finish the exhibition was simply one grand, successful undertaking and everybody is pleased. The exhibitors feel they have received their money's worth, the public have learned many pointers on pure foods; the organizers see the fruits of their labor.

A. P. MURRAY
Sales Manager, Edwardsburg Starch Co., and Chairman of the Exhibition Advisory Committee.

Attendance Large.

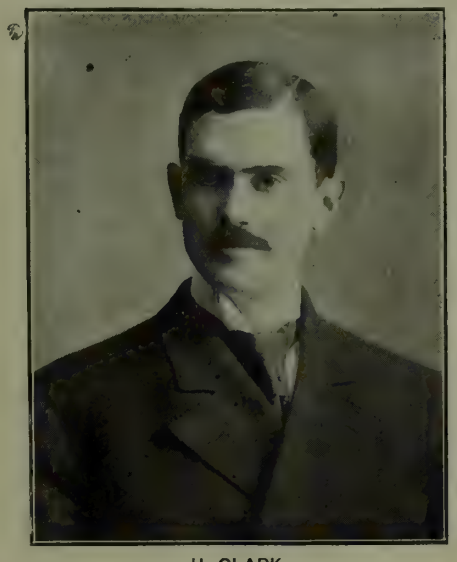
During the ten days of the fair, from April 17 to 27, the attendance was wonderful. The hours were from 10.30 in the morning until 10.30 in the evening. Naturally, there were not many present during the early part of the day, but every afternoon tickets were taken at the door by the hundred, while at night it was difficult for one to move around with any sort of freedom. It was a case of go with the crowd. It is estimated that at least 40,000 people attended the fair. This is a record. Never before has there been a food fair in Montreal or, for that matter, has there been a strictly food fair in Canada, which has secured such patronage. The fact that the public paid to get in lends additional weight to this statement.

$50,000 Spent on the Show.

The committee which had the management of the exhibition did all in their power to make it go. To run it with any degree of success it was necessary to have the patronage of the public of Montreal. The committee went about getting this patronage, and they secured it, from first to last. They correctly took it for granted that the people were not going to pay 25 cents admission unless to see something good; therefore they supplied something good. It was a particularly good exhibition; there was an air of business about the whole thing that breathed success. Nothing cheap or second-class was to be seen in connection with it and there was no faking. Everybody went at the fair to make it succeed. The exhibitors spent in the neighborhood of $50,000 and had on display lines that were varied, attractive, and of merit. As a result people went to the fair, talked about it, and in this way caused others to go. That's why the attendance was great.

What the Exhibition Accomplished.

Was the expenditure of $50,000 warranted in the results obtained? some will ask. This is a question difficult to answer to the satisfaction of all. On the face of things the expense was justified, otherwise the exhibitors would not have spent the money. Results were expected and will be secured, possibly not in every case as directly as could be desired, but no less surely for that reason. Many lines hitherto unknown or but little used, were introduced to the consumer, while standard goods which have been on the market for years were once more brought prominently before the public eye and, what was more important, an educational lesson in the healthful value of pure foods was given. By practical demonstration, conducted on the spot before the eyes of visitors, exhibitors showed in what manner pure groceries were superior to impure. Criticism was invited. Manufacturers stood ready to back their goods. They were only too anxious to show the housewives how much better it was to use in the home foodstuffs that were guaranteed pure rather than goods of which they knew nothing.



H. CLARK
Of Wm. Clark, Member of Exhibition Advisory Committee.

When it is considered that there were at least 30,000 women who visited the exhibition, most of them housekeepers, the good work accomplished by these demonstrations can be more readily understood. These women saw the foods they employed in the home every day demonstrated; they received samples and literature that was readable, with the result that they learned new pointers and were convinced more than ever of the value of groceries which stood the test of purity. These women will ask their grocers for the lines which were exhibited at the fair because they were shown that these lines were pure. They were given samples, which they used at home, and they afterward asked and will continue to ask for these goods to the exclusion of others. In this way much new trade was created. The goods shown will be subject to greater demand than ever. The manufacturer will reap benefit; so will the retail grocer.

The educational value of the food fair cannot be over-estimated. In these days of competition there are lines without number which are cheap imitations of genuine articles. They are not pure, they are not supposed to be pure. But the average housewife cannot discriminate and her grocer is too busy, very often, to explain the difference. He gives her what she asks for. There can be no better test of a product than the food fair. If a manufacturer is not able to demonstrate his goods in public, without fear of consequences, then there must be some reason. Goods that will go through the fire of a food show are likely to be satisfactory as far as purity goes.

was laid aside and everybody was a friend of everybody else. Little grievances that crop up in the trade every day were forgotten and there was a glad hand for everybody from everybody. All the trade had a common end in view and the three branches worked together. There should be more of this. There is not the friendliness and good feeling between the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer in groceries that there should be. Why not? Is it the spirit of competition?; everyone looking out for Number One? At any rate these branches often run against one another. It is the same in every trade. More food fairs will help things in this direction wonderfully.

The Nucleus of an Annual Exhibition.

Montreal has in the exhibition of groceries just concluded the nucleus of an annual exhibition. It is up to the City Fathers to get busy in time for next year, or even the year after. A short time ago there was considerable discussian of this matter and some preliminary arrangements for an exhibition were made, but the whole thing fell through. Here is an opportunity. Other cities have exhibitians, why not Montreal? If the exhibition of groceries drew crowds of itself, certainly it made the basis of an exhibition. That exhibition would be very largely patronized not only by Montrealers but by people from every part of Canada. The city would derive great benefit from such an exhibition. Toronto does; London does; hundreds of small towns throughout Canada do; why should Montreal be slow in this respect?

Outside Visitors.

Out-of-town people who visited the exhibition included a great many in the grocery trade. The Canadian Grocer occupied a booth which was during the fair the meeting place of manufacturers, jobbers, retailers, travelers, in fact of everybody in the grocery trade. Quite a few grocers from outside points visited the fair and called at the booth of The Canadian Grocer.

A delegation from Ottawa, consisting of F. W. Forde, president; C. J. Prevost, treasurer; A. G. Johnston, secretary; H. E. Ellis, executive committee, representing the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association, were down to have a look at the fair. They expressed themselves as more than pleased with the excellence of the show as a whole. It is proposed to hold a similar one in Ottawa this summer, at the time of the Old Boys' Re-Union.

Toronto was represented by M. Moyer, treasurer of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, and Fred C. Higgins, also a member of that body. They were accompanied by E. M. Trowern. W. H. Seyler, manager of The Canadian Grocer, was also down for a day.

The New England organizer of the National Grocers' Association of the United States, in the person of Mr. Winter, spent some time in Montreal and thought the exhibition was the best ever. Mr. Winter was not the only one who had a high opinion of the exhibition. There were numerous visitors who had seen like fairs in different parts of the States, and they all admitted that Montreal's was the best they had attended. True, some of the Yankee shows had been larger, in that the number of exhibitors was greater, but aside from this, there was no point of superiority. This is not a bad record for a first show.

Where the Exhibition Was Held.

Montreal's Arena is the largest rink in the city, but it was not able to accommodate the crowds that flocked to the exhibition of groceries. Still, it was the best obtainable and had to suffice. The Arena is located in Westmount and here the fair was held.

The manner in which the booths were laid out was most artistic. There was an air of harmony about them all that made it a pleasure to view them. The organizers' prospectus stated that no party would be permitted to build their own booth. All the stands were built by contractors and the symmetrical appearance of the show is accounted for by this arrangement.

A central row of booths extended down the rink, a Martello-like tower at either end. Around the sides and at each end were stands of uniform size. There were exits and cross-aisles, located conveniently and as a result it was easy enough to handle the crowds. In all there were thirty-four exhibitors, besides which the booths were occupied by the trade press, while the general office took up two more. Every inch of available space was taken up and many firms desirous of getting in were refused for this reason.

From the Gallery.

A beautiful view was obtainable from the gallery, as will be seen from the photo published. The thousands of lights used to illuminate the show formed a very pretty sight. Over each booth was a sign bearing the name of the exhibitor. This was lighted by a row of electric lamps, and as all the signs were of uniform size and there were lights over each, a complete circle was formed by the lamps. The decorations of white and green hid the rafters of the ceiling, while the earth was covered by a plank flooring. The sides of the rink were done in green, so that the general effect was exceedingly pretty.

One of the first objects to strike the eye was the large 61-word sign of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company. The two towers at the ends of the centre row of booths showed up very strongly, while more than one exhibit caught the eye by its superiority over its fellows in some respect.

Amusements.

Amusement was supplied those who sought it in the form of a moving picture show, which was conducted as a continuance performance, to the left of the entrance. Vander Meerschen's Band was in attendance also, while there was a Chinese restaurant in full operation. Possibly the latter should be considered more in the light of a necessity than an amusement.

Edwardsburg Starch Company.

Few fairs worthy of mention run out their course without having in their number of exhibitors the Edwardsburg Starch Company. Take Crown Brand Corn Syrup as an instance. It is seen in every progressive grocer's store and to miss it at such an exhibition of groceries as was held in Montreal would have been missing one of the purest lines made. This same Crown Brand Table Syrup attracted considerable attention from housekeepers who visited the fair. Large glass jars, filled with the appetizing syrup, were placed on the counter and the clarity of the goods was remarked upon. Small samples, put up after the style of the 2 lb. and 5 lb. tins, which were elsewhere shown, were given away. Crown Brand is obtainable also in 10 lb. and 20 lb. tins, so that all demands may be filled. Benson's Prepared Corn Starch, which is a favorite line with up-to-date grocers, and Silver Gloss Starch, were shown in artistically arranged pyramids, nicely offsetting the display of Crown Brand Syrup. Enamel Starch, which is another of the company's fast-selling lines, was seen in another part of the booth. Edwardsburg No. 1 White Starch in the large blue packages, used extensively for laundry work, recalled the grocery store in that there are few retailers who have not a space for this line which is called for so frequently. The booth of the Edwardsburg Starch Company was the stand making the north end of the centre row, and was located so that it was seen by practically everyone who entered the rink. Large crowds were observed around the three counters afternoon and evening. "Teddy" bears, with appropriate advertising matter, as well as masks, bookmarks, drawing books and cards innumerable were gratuitiously given out during the ten days of the fair.

Edwardsburg Starch Co.—Starch and Syrups.

Wm. H. Dunn's Lines.

The first booth which the visitor encountered on entering was an imposing structure occupied by Wm. H. Dunn for the display of the different lines of food products which he handles as exclusive agent. Here, every afternoon and evening, Mr. Dunn could be found assisted by two or three of his salesmen, welcoming his friends, the retail grocers who visited the show, and supervising his staff of six demonstrators, who, with the different enticing table delicacies displayed before them, explained the various merits of the products to the visitors, who at all times thronged the stand, and who learned by actual test the advantage of securing the best in the eating line.

Pure Gold Goods.

A tasty exhibit is that of the products of the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. This firm manufactures spices, condiments, flavoring extracts, cake isings, quick puddings, etc., but the lines chiefly demonstrated were the jelly powders and salad dressing powder. There were many fancy moulds of jelly displayed, and much favorable comment was caused by a number of cylindrical glass jars, in which several kinds of fruit were suspended, apparently at variance with the laws of nature, being kept in place by a transparent jelly. But what was most novel to the housekeeper was the excellent results obtained by Pure Gold salad dressing powder. A small package makes a pint of delicious salad dressing, and those who tasted the salads which the demonstrator had made up with this product, marvelled at the excellence and economy of this line.

Cailler's Chocolate.

First you tasted Cailler's Swiss milk chocolate, and if you had not previously been acquainted with the Cailler taste you would wonder at there being anything so delicious in all the world. It is an easy matter, with that delicate sweetmeat tickling your palate, to conjure up delightful Switzerland, that little land of white-crested peak and green-swarded valley, of cleanly cattle browsing knee-deep upon the green slopes, of the trim, white-frocked peasant girls, who lead them to and from the milking. Here, under conditions of perpetual purity, in the centre of the Gruyere valley, famous as a producer of the richest milk in the world, this delicious confection is manufactured in the enormous factory of F. L. Cailler, which employs 1,800 people, receives daily over 30,000 quarts of creamy milk, and exports to the outside world yearly about twelve million dollars' worth of milk chocolate; and the reason for the magnitude of this industry seems apparent, for Cailler's "tastes like more."

E. D. Smith's Pure Preserves.

E. D. Smith's pure preserves, jams and jellies next claim attention. The sight of the whole fruit in syrup is good to see (and better to eat), and the jellies so clear and sparkling are as tempting as the best that "mother used to make." It is gratifying then to learn that all this is accomplished with fruit and sugar alone. No preservative or adulterant of any kind is used, and in these days of much adulteration and compounding in food products, the purity of these preserves is a boon to the consumer. E. D. Smith stakes his reputation and bases his bid for trade on the absolute purity of his products, and in this he is supported by the Government analysis of samples of all makes of jams, jellies and preserves. In bulletin No. 119, issued by the Department of Inland Revenue, there is some startling information to be found. Out of 182 samples collected, 153 were found to be adulterated and contain preservatives, only 29 being absolutely pure, and of these 29, ten were made by E. D. Smith,

The Tin Cow.

Next you come to a demonstration of the Borden brands of condensed milk and evaporated cream. You are probably somewhat familiar with the fame of Borden's Eagle brand condensed milk as a baby food, for it is celebrated as such throughout the world, is recommended by numberless physicians, and is championed by thousands of thankful mothers, so there is much justification for the claim of the Borden Company that more babies have been successfully raised on Eagle brand milk than on all other so-called baby foods combined. But you are probably not so familiar with their Peerless brand evaporated cream. In this product you find the milk is condensed by the evaporation process, and is thereby preserved without the aid of sugar. It is of about the consistency of rich, fresh cream and serves all the purposes for which cream is used. It is delicious used on berries or cereals, improves tea, coffee or cocoa, and whips perfectly. Diluted in three or four parts of water it makes a rich milk.

Millar's Cheese.

Millar's Royal Paragon cheese, served on a cracker, proved to be a dainty and tasty morsel. It is the original cheese to be packed in white opal jars, and has never been equalled in quality by any imitation.

Butter Scotch.

Kerr's Butter Scotch is a pleasant surprise. From an inspection before eating, it seems to be made after the style of British toffees, but on trial the memory of all other toffees fades away, for Kerr's has a chewy deliciousness all its own, and surpasses all others.

Royal Electric Coffee Mills.

Emory & Williams, 225 Coristine building, Montreal, Canadian agents for the Royal Electric Coffee Mills and Meat Grinders, furnished one of the most interesting and instructive exhibits of the show.

These handsome machines have daily ground coffee and meat and have fully established their place with the grocery and butcher trade as an economical, up-to-date store utility. Briefly and in part, the features of the machines are:

1st. They attach to the lighting circuit, being adapted to either alternating or direct current (any voltage) and no extra wiring is needed to install the machines in a store which has electric lights. To connect remove an electric lamp and insert the plug on the cord attached to the machine.

2nd. The machines weigh about 100 pounds each, and take up space 7x16 inches, therefore, are easily moved about. Coffee and meat can be ground in the window, on the counter, or anywhere you have an electric light.

3rd. The coffee mills grind two pounds of coffee fine, coarse or medium, in one minute. One cent's worth of power will grind fifty pounds of coffee. Further, the mill is equipped with steel knives or cutters, which cut the coffee berry into uniform particles, instead of crushing it as by the ordinary process. This insures a stronger cup of coffee and more cups to the pound, since the little oil cells in the berry remain unbroken and the essential oil (which holds the strength and flavor) cannot evaporate and is preserved indefinitely. No dust in cut coffee means no mud in the finished product, but a strong, clear cup of coffee.

E. D. Smith's Pure Preserves.

4th. The Royal Electric meat grinders also operate from the lighting circuit—the No. A12 grinder on exhibition grinds 5 to 6 pounds of beef a minute, at an average cost of one cent's worth of power for 36 pounds of meat—small, compact and portable, it does the work of a stationary machine four times its size. Grinds Hamburg, sausage meat, suet, mince meat, etc. Larger machines sold.

Emory & Williams announce that they have placed a goodly number of machines during the exhibit, and consider the pure food fair has been a fortunate and excellent medium for the introduction of their machines, which are new in Canada. They invite inquiries and will be pleased to furnish descriptive literature to those interested.

The Canadian Grocer.

The meeting place of manufacturers, travelers, retailers, wholesalers, visitors and other parties connected with the grocery trade was the booth of The Canadian Grocer, No. 31. Here a display of The Canadian Grocer and other MacLean trade newspapers was made and business men who happened to spend half an hour at the show rarely failed to drop around to the booth of the MacLean trade newspapers to have a few words.

Shown in this booth, besides The Canadian Grocer, were: Dry Goods Review, Hardware and Metal, Printer and Publisher, Plumber and Steamfitter, Canadian Machinery, Bookseller and Stationer, Busy Man's Magazine and The Financial Post.

Other Exhibitors.

Shredded Wheat had a small factory in operation showing just how shredded wheat and triscuit are manufactured.

Quite a nice showing was made by the American Tobacco Company. Their Sweet Caporal cigarette advertising matter was everywhere visible. Many thousands of packages of Sweet Caporal matches were given away.

Bovril was there and many visitors to the exhibition were given a sample cup of this excellent fluid beef.

Lowney's cocoa and chocolate were demonstrated every afternoon and evening. Dainty cups of cocoa were served out to hundreds.

Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour.

The story of Ogilvie's Famous Royal Household Flour was told in a unique and comprehensive way by means of a large electric sign erected over their exhibit, and which flashed out at intervals of a quarter of a minute the following words:

The excellence of the sign was admitted by all of the many thousands that visited the exhibition. It is doubtful if an electric sign has ever been seen in Canada which exhibited so many combinations of letters, for the whole thing did not embrace more than ten spaces. Hundreds of people stood for the several minutes that it took to tell the story, repeating the words and gazing in a sort of fascination at the wonderful changes evolved.

Nor was this the only part of the Ogilvie exhibit, for the firm had taken great pains to demonstrate the practical value of their flour. In the tastefully arranged booth in which the flour in its various neat forms of package was exhibited, was also arranged a complete kitchen with several charming young ladies, with elbows bared, busy in the task of bread and cake baking. Royal Household Flour was by these deft fingers created in a remarkably short period of time into the most delicious loaves of home-made bread, rolls, etc., whilst the pastry cook also showed in a most capable way that this family flour was equally good in the production of pastry, cakes, etc.

The many ladies who visited the exhibition were particularly interested in this corner of the Arena, and numbers of them carried away some pointers which will doubtless be used to delight the palates of husbands, sons and sweethearts in the homes of Montreal and vicinity.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook," containing many useful recipes, were distributed to the public as a souvenir of this most interesting and instructive exhibit. These books contain a large number of practical recipes, every one of which has been demonstrated in the kitchens of the Ogilvie Milling Co.

Lake of the Woods Milling Co.

One of the most striking exhibits at the fair was that of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., manufacturers of "Five Roses" flour, who spared no trouble or expense to make their display a most attractive one. The firm occupied the space of four booths in the southwest corner of the building. A glance at the photograph published herewith gives a better idea of the magnificent display than any description can do. The semi-circle shape in which the exhibit was, gave splendid scope for effect. Two large arches on either side, with a smaller one of Gothic architecture between, towered high above any other exhibit in the building. These were skilfully decorated with bags of "Five Roses" flour, flags, etc., whilst barrels piled high on either side walled off the exhibit. Behind the arches were two magnificent pyramids built of bags of flour, also a most remarkable ball of gigantic propositions completely covered with bags of "Five Roses." This ball was eight feet in diameter. Along the counter in front visitors were reminded of their favorite flour by vases containing each five beautiful roses. Perhaps no souvenir of the exhibition was more in popular demand than was a little pin cushion distributed by the Lake of the Woods Company, a miniature of their "Five Roses" flour bag. At stated intervals during the afternoons and evenings these souvenirs were presented to visitors present and the public were piled up five or ten deep in their anxiety to secure one of the coveted treasures.

Nor was an appeal to artistic beauty alone, a part of the Lake of the Woods exhibit, for much useful literature was distributed to the visiting public in the way of cook books, recipes, etc., telling how "Five Roses" flour could be put to practical use, in dozens of delightful ways, both for bread making and for cakes and pastry, for which it is equally known. The exhibit was an impressive one, both on the general public and also members of the grocery trade present, and will, no doubt, mean an increased business to the firm.

J. Christin & Co.

A splendid display of aerated waters was made by this firm at the exhibition in the Arena. A good-sized booth was occupied in the northwest end of the rink, and here were shown the various high class lines put up by the firm. Among the leading varieties might be mentioned: Christin's Belfast ginger ale, cream soda, lemon soda, strawberry soda, respberry soda, lemon sour, blood orange, plain soda, sarsaparilla, champagne kola. These many different non-intoxicating drinks are put up in large screw-top bottles (20 ozs.), which are very easily opened and can be conveniently closed again if the contents are not all required at first opening. For family use these beverages are unsurpassed, particularly in these days of impure, and consequently dangerous, water. Most all grocers handle the goods of Christin & Co., as they are standards of excellence in their class. The booth occupied by the company was most attractively decorated and would catch the eye at all times, but particularly in the evening when the clarity of the beverages was shown up very distinctly through an arrangement of electric lights behind the pyramids of the different brands. Good, catchy literature was distributed freely, one card being worthy of special notice. It read: "Are you on the water waggon (which was illustrated with a good comic cut) if so don't worry; drink Christin's ginger ale, soda water, etc. Excellent either straight or mixed." And it certainly is.

J. Christin & Co's Aerated Waters.

Mathewson's Sons.

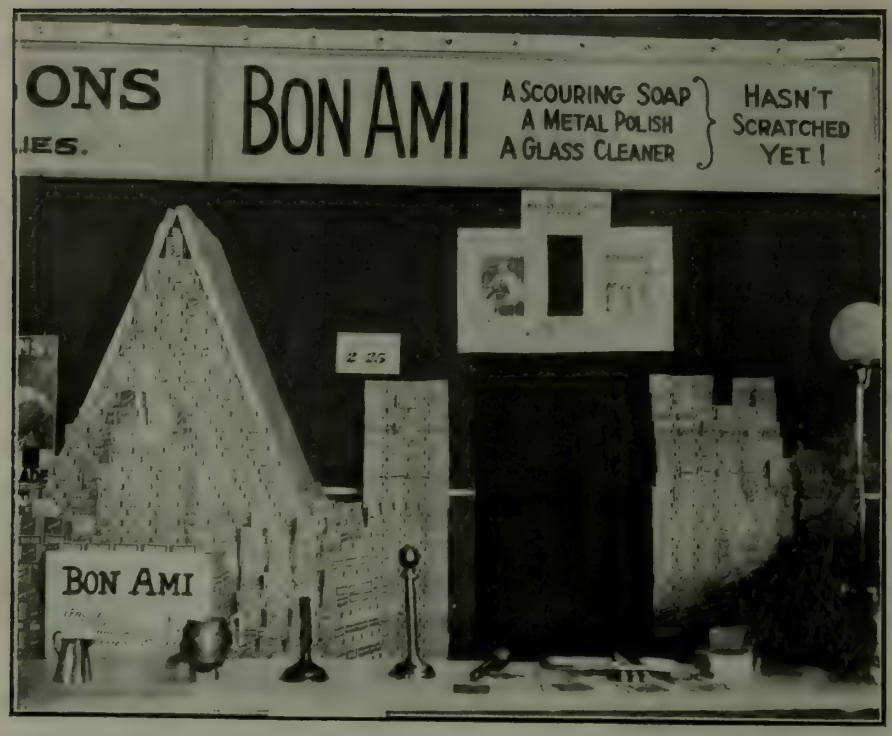
One of the oldest wholesale grocery firms in Montreal and in Canada had a double booth at the fair. Mathewson's Sons' business, which has been carried on successfully for seventy-three years, was well represented at this first real, live exhibition of groceries. This firm, a pioneer in the wholesale trade, a house which carried on a large business away back in the days before Canada was developed, has done a great deal one way and another, for the present grocery generation in this country. As an example might be mentioned Japan teas, which were introduced into Canada by this firm among the first. For years Mathewson's Sons advocated the use of Japan teas, and each succeeding year they say they find this line becoming more and more popular. Japan teas were on display at the fair, the public being given an opportunity of testing the merits of the line. Kilchipur Indian tea was also there ready to be sampled. "M" brand, Japan tea, and Kilchipur Indian tea, will be in greater demand than ever, after the practical demonstration of their merits given at the exhibition. Mathewson's Sons' coffees, famous over Canada, were displayed also.

The old reliable Quaker Brand of canned goods was one of the most attractive lines shown. Seen under this brand were canned peaches, raspberries, cherries, plums, haricots, and all sorts of vegetables. Mr. Joseph Gawne, of the Quaker Packing Company, was on hand to look after this department of the Mathewson's Sons' exhibit.

Two large pyramids of jams, jellies and marmalades attracted the attention of the fair patrons. These were made up from Robertson's Silver Shred Marmalade, manufactured from lemons: wild bramble jelly; ginger, pineapple and green fig marmalade; Golden Shred and Scotch marmalade and raspberry and strawberry jam. Also seen in Mathewson's Sons' booth might be mentioned Victory blue, trade mark registered, and Mathewson's pure spices; also Viceroy salmon, every can of which is guaranteed.

Mathewson's Sons.

Cairns & Sons' Jams—Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Ltd., Canadian Agents.



Bon Ami, the Cleaner.

Fred H. Mathewson was in charge of the booth during the fair and some of the firm were there every night to see the crowds and to put in a good word for Montreal and for the exhibition in particular.

Cairns' Jams, Jellies and Marmalades.

Anyone in search of really good, pure food, in the way of jams, jellies or marmalades, did not find it necessary to go farther than the booth occupied by Alex. Cairns & Sons, mfgs. of high-grade goods in these lines. A most attractive showing of purely-made jams and jellies was made by Hudon, Hebert & Co., sales agents for this firm, which has its head office and works in Paisley, Scotland.

In Cairns' specialties nothing but the very best fruits are used, and the best quality cane sugar is secured. Absolutely no coloring matter is put into the goods and every precaution is taken to see that their purity is the highest. Every year thousands upon thousands of dozens of bottles of Cairns' goods are manufactured in their large factory and exported to every part of the globe. In Canada they are selling particularly well, being pushed by Hudon, Hebert & Co. Raspberry, strawberry and every other line is obtainable. The chief sizes are: 1 lb. and 2 lb., in glass or tin; and 7 lb. tins. A beautiful, tall glass jar, 16 oz. net is one of the most attractive 1 lb. sizes.

Bon Ami Soap.

Bon Ami is pretty well known. It was given another large boost of publicity at the food fair just concluded. Hudon, Hebert & Co., agents for this cleanser, had a nice display in their corner of the rink. Bon Ami has been fifteen years on the market, and, as a very neat little card given away at the booth stated, "It hasn't scratched yet." For a soap of this nature, surely this is a claim, which, when substantiated, proves its superiority. And the claim can be substantiated in the case of Bon Ami because users never have anything to say about the soap except what is to its credit. Bon Ami is a scouring soap, a metal polish, a glass cleaner. It requires little water and cleanses without scouring off or wearing out the surfaces cleaned. Thousands of sample cakes were given away during the fair.

Heinz 57 Varieties.

Away back at the entrance door, looking down the rink the first thing to catch the eye was "57." The next object was an electric light Heinz pickle. Both were used in connection with the booth of H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburgh.

Heinz 57 Varieties.

makers of the 57 varieties, which firm through their Montreal sales agents, Hudon, Hebert & Co., Limited, made a handsome and attractive display. It just happened that the color scheme of the fair management matched the Heinz pickles, being green, and as a consquence the artistic arrangement of the booth was made the easier. All the different lines manufactured by Heinz were shown in neatly arranged pyramids in the space occupied. Heinz beans, soup, apple butter, mustard dressing, horseradish, pickles, olives, India relish and other varieties were given their full share of publicity and were sampled by thousands during the course of the exhibition. Readable literature dealing with the manner in which the various lines are manufactured and descriptive of one specialty or another was freely distributed.

Pernot Biscuits—Leon Fontanel, Agent.

Pernot Biscuits.

No one who tasted the dainty biscuits handed out at the booth of Pernot's Biscuits went away without being convinced that this line was one of the best on the market.

Leon Fontanel, Canadian agent, with offices in Montreal, Victoria and Vancouver, was ever ready to give inquirers particulars as to the merits of the biscuits, and did a great deal to make the name Pernot, as applied to biscuits, more widely known.

One of the largest concerns of this nature in the world is Pernot's. Five factories are kept going to supply the demand. Three are operating in Dijon, France; one at L'Isle-sur-Sorgue, and one in Geneva, Switzerland. The factories cover 45,000 square yards' space.

Demand for Pernot's biscuits in England and the continent is very large, and Mr. Fontanel hopes, with a continuance of their present hard work, to see the biscuits enjoying great sale in Canada. So far the selling campaign has been most successful.

Pernot's biscuits were awarded Grand Prix at Hanoi in 1902, and captured the same honor in St. Louis in 1904, while in 1906 they were judged beyond competition in Milan and Marseilles. In Liege, too, in 1905, they were out of reach of competition.

Almost any size package can be obtained. The lines displayed included half-pound, one-pound, two-pound, four-pound and nine-pound tins. It is worthy of mention that Pernot's biscuits are put up in hermetically sealed tins which are neatly wrapped. The biscuits are, consequently, certain of being kept in good condition for an indefinite period.

For the higher class trade many fancy boxed lines are made, automobile boxes and other novelties.

Very attractive menu cards were given to visitors at the booth, as well as samples of the biscuits and considerable attractive literature.

Ice Cream for the Multitude.

So large were the crowds that visited the exhibition it was not surprising that many found themselves wishing for something cool and tasty to relieve "that tired feeling" always obtainable in a crowd. The Imperial Ice Cream Company was on the spot with the goods to reach the right place. Thousands availed themselves of the opportunity of quenching their hunger-thirst and at the same time becoming acquainted with the specialties manufactured by the Imperial Ice Cream Company.

It is not every grocer that knows from experience what a good trade there is in handling ice cream. One has to learn. The Imperial Ice Cream Company manufacture specialties in ice cream galore. Over three hundred lines are obtainable from them. This will give some idea as to the variety offered.

Their ice cream plant is in operation winter and summer, to provide for parties, luncheons, banquets, afternoon teas, picnics, club and lodge meetings.

The immediate supervision of E. Middleton, one of the foremost ice cream makers in Canada, formerly head of the ice cream department of the Toronto and Ottawa City Dairy Companies, ensures the quality of the goods turned out.

Imperial ice cream bricks, to sell at 30c., are very much in demand when once used. Any flavor is obtainable for the asking, at prices which may be obtained from the management on application to the Imperial Ice Cream Co., 25 Monte de Zouzve avenue, Montreal.

Imperial Ice Cream.

Canadian Canners, Ltd.

Mr. E. G. Roy personally superintended the arranging of the booth and looked after things generally during the fair.

Canadian Canners.

A very artistic booth was that occupied by the Canadian Canners. It was situated next the Administration Offices and was arranged in a manner which showed the time and labor spent upon it.

It is hardly necessary to mention what was shown—all the grocers are acquainted with the lines manufactured by the Canadian Canners. Still, the effort expended in setting up the display merits some reward. The brands shown were: "Aylmer Canada First," "Horseshoe," "Auto," "Log Cabin," "Little Chief," "Kent," "Simcoe," "Maple Leaf," "Thistle," "Grand River," "White Rose" and "Lion."

How many are there in the grocery trade who do not recognize these widely known brands? Certainly there are few, because the demand on the part of the consumers has made necessary the stocking of most of them in order to keep up with the times.

Demonstrators served tasty dishes of jams, jellies, sauces, relishes and salad dressing.

Photographs of the factory, showing the cleanliness in the packing establishment, were noticeable here and there, while flowers helped out the artistic effect.

Cecil Gordon, acting for J. Alex.Gordon & Co., sales agents for the Canadian Canners, and Mr. Collins, Hamilton, from the head office, were always ready and willing to give visitors full information on the lines exhibited.

Wm. Clark's Canned Meats.

At the north end of the building in the prominent central stand was located shapes and sizes and all handsomely labelled. They proved an especial attraction at the food show, and even a modest selection will form an attractive part of any grocery store. Clark's meats are handled in all the grocery and general stores of Canada and consumed by a proportionate share of the community. Never yet has their excellence of quality been assailed. They form an invaluable adjunct to any household for the hasty luncheon, for the unexpected guest, for the summer outing and picnic parties. The firm recently enlarged their factory to cope with their vastly increasing business.

Wm. Clark, Montreal—All That's Fine in Tinned Meats.

"Aylmer" chicken soup and "Aylmer" tomato soup, also finer grades of peas, baked beans, fruits, jams, jellies, etc., to the thousands who visited the show during its progress. Another line much in demand was "Log Cabin" baked beans.

As stated, the Canadian Canners' booth was one to attract attention. Two large crowns at the back of the booth, done in red and white, sheltered pyramids of canned goods arrayed on stands. Mirrors on the wall threw back strongly the reflection of the various lines shown. On the counter ledge were seen in neat piles "Canada First" and "Delhi Epicure" catsup, as well as "Aylmer" a magnificent display of Wm. Clark's famous high class Canadian canned meats. Wm. Clark puts up no less than 87 varieties of canned meats. Each one is a relish in itself and each one is of the highest standard of quality attainable. A few leaders might be enumerated, such as Clark's cooked corn beef, veal loaf, English roast beef, Paragon ox tongue, mince meat, chicken soup, vegetable soup, sliced smoked beef, Geneva sausages, English plum pudding, pork and beans, pork and beans with Chili sauce, potted ham, devilled tongue. Each of these, and the many other brands, are done up in hermetically sealed tin cans of various Laporte, Martin & Co., Ltd.

As will be seen from the picture appearing in The Grocer, the booth in which Laporte, Martin & Co. displayed their goods was dressed in a very attractive manner. Carrying out the neatness of design and the good display ideas, there stands behind the outward show real quality in the various lines seen in their stand. Take, for example, Minerva olive oil. This was on view in one corner, and is certainly as pure as any olive oil obtainable. Each bottle, half-pints, pints and quarts, bears the certificate of purity after analysis of the French Government. Each bottle is put up in a neat carton, making a very pleasing package. Lipton's teas, in half-pound and one-pound tins, and Lipton's coffees, in one-pound, two-pound, and three-pound tins, occupied a prominent space in part of the stand, while high up on the tower in the centre were bottles of Vita fluid beef. This is a comparatively new line being pushed by this enterprising firm, and has been successfully sold up to the present. Vita is obtainable in one-oz., two-oz., four-oz. and twenty-oz. bottles. Millar's malt extract is another line for which Laport, Martin & Co. are sales agents. This is a beverage much in demand wherever it is known, having attained much popuarity through its excellent quality.

Hiawatha mineral water was supplied to many who were anxious to sample something good in the way of mineral water. Hiawatha is sold in the standard sizes of bottles, and can be secured in either still natural water or sparkling.

A Unique Booth.

Unique, indeed, was the booth occupied by Rose & Laflamme, manufacturers' agents. It was seen in the north end of the centre row and one could not easily pass it by with but a glance.

The variety of the lines shown would have done credit to a wholesale grocery firm. One side of the square castle-like booth was devoted to Batger's goods, including jams, marmalades, candied peels, lime juice cordial, lemon squash, Christmast cosaques, fancy goods, stockings, Easter novelties and various lines of confectionery. With so many lines on hand it was possible to make a very attractive showing of the firm's goods. Huntley & Palmer's biscuits, in infinite variety, were exhibited, as was also an assortment of Cunningham & DeFourier Co.'s potted meats, game, fish, pickles and other lines.

Ram Lal's pure Indian tea, the kind of tea that reaches the spot, was shown beside Cerebos salt. Samples of both were freely distributed, being eagerly sought for by visitors.

Among other lines exhibited were noticeable Paterson's camp coffee essence, much in demand wherever there are coffee drinkers; Artaud's olive oil in bottles and tins; Farrow & Co.'s specialties in English marrowfat peas, in packages, mustard, mushroom catsup; W. J. Bush & Co.'s English standard flavoring extracts, cluster and seeded raisins and shelled almonds, from Jose Segalerva, Malaga, Spain; Klaus chocolate, which is certainly the real thing; Goodwillie's Canadian fruits in glass jars; MacLaren's Imperial cheese and peanut butter, both tasty lines; Upton's jams, jelies and marmalades; Snider's tomato catsup, chili sauce and salad dressing; Campbell's soups; Ready-lunch shrimp and Cove oysters, put up by Barataria Canning Co.; Fruit Puddine and Tap-po; Fould's wheat germ meal; Aunt Jemima pancake flour; Cook's flaked rice and Malto rice; Laundry Rubber starch; Tanglefoot sticky fly paper; Parsons' household ammonia.

It will be seen that for variety and quality of goods exhibited it would be difficult to find a firm more worthy the attention of visitors. A large staff attended to inquirers, courteously answering all questions relative to the goods and handing out samples most liberally.

The Canada Maple Exchange.

To the right of the main entrance was an exhibit, which, for the purity of the goods shown was unexcelled. This was the booth of the Canada Maple Exchange. Mr. Small was fortunate indeed in obtaining a stand so well located, as it was one which the public visited as soon as they entered. A young lady was employed during the time the fair was in progress to demonstrate the manner in which Small's maple cream chocolates were dipped, and in this way people were shown the absolute care used to make cleanliness certain. Of the purity of the goods the trade is quite well informed. Blocks of pure maple sugar, maple syrup put up in small pails, and maple cream chocolates were also exhibited. Something which many noticed and remarked upon was the number of medals displayed by the manufacturers of Maple Leaf brand chocolates. Medals were there from Japan, Paris, Ottawa and many other centres, all gained over exhibits of the finest goods in the world, a fact which speaks highly for the Canadian manufacturing trade. The Canada Maple Exchange was established in 1881, and since that time its progress has been steadily upward until to-day it holds a front place.

The Exchange, to overcome the difficulty experienced last year of being unable to supply the sustained demand through the winter, are storing large quantities at a temperature of 32 degrees, As a result of this, they expect to be in a position to meet the requirements of the trade early in February, 1908, with an article equal to newly-run sap.

J. & G. Cox, Ltd., Edinburgh.

This firm, so well known for the last sixty years as manufacturers of the finest quality of gelatine, showed the latest improved and refined product in the form of powdered gelatine, or, as it is called, instant powdered gelatine. The special virtue of this article is that it dissolves more quickly than any other gelatine sold, that it is absolutely pure, that it can be prepared in a minute by the use of boiling water and without soaking required with all shredded and sheet gelatine, while every 6d. packet will make two quarts of rich jelly. The great advantage in using Cox's gelatine over the ordinary jelly powders, is both in economy and in the fact that it can be used for fifty different purposes, for making the most delicate jellies for invalids, for all sorts of gelatine confections, meat jelly, soup thickening, and every known purpose for which gelatine or isinglass can be used. There is no residue whatever when using Cox's gelatine, every grain of it is good, while it is prepared without the use of chemicals of any kind whatever, and nothing more wholesome of the kind is produced anywhere. The enormous increase in the business of this firm in the last ten years has led them to put up great factories in Edinburgh and elsewhere and to-day Messrs. Cox are the largest producers of this article in the British Empire.

Cox & Co. are distributing free a cook book to all who apply for it and anyone applying by mail will have one mailed to them without expense. The cook book which they are giving away, is prepared by the celebrated chef, Oscar, of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. Cox's powdered gelatine has always been sold most largely in Canada, and can be obtained from any dealer of standing from one end of Canada to the other. The demonstration of the powdered gelatine showed the ease and rapidity with which it could be made up and the delicious jellies required no recommendation.

A. Comte & Cie.

A comparatively new firm in Montreal grocery circles is A. Comte & Cie., which concern occupied a nicely arranged booth at the fair. Their specialty is coffees, and they offer to the trade some pretty fine lines for the prices they quote. At the Arena during the week and a half of the fair their goods were demonstrated and housewives were given the opportunity of testing the merits of St. Marc, La Creole and Java-Mocha coffees manufactured by this firm. Importers of French coffees, the firm also does a thriving business is teas and spices. A good trade is theirs, and they are increasing it every week by giving fair treatment and excellent goods to all their customers. Another line handled by A. Comte & Cie., is baking powder which they dispose of in bulk.

But recently this company purchased the property on which their offices and warehouse are located, and will in the near future, remodel the premises to suit their increased business.

The building is a large three-storey structure, situated at 442-444 St. Paul St., in the heart of the wholesale district, and is a fine place for transacting such a business as is done by A. Comte & Cie. Shortly a coffee roaster will be installed and arrangements are being made for the equipping of a factory for the manufacture of extracts. Among the good agencies controlled by this firm are several for olive oil and chocolate.

At their booth in the Arena the very pretty red, white and blue packages of coffee attracted much attention. Augustin Comte, and his brother, Henri Comte, were one or the other, generally around to look after the booth.

Tobler's Milk Chocolate.

With the enterprise characteristic of this firm, Maclure & Langley were well forward with their display of Tobler's milk chocolate. This booth was located in a busy corner to the left of the main entrance and was, perhaps, one of the daintiest booths at the exhibition. J. G. Gordon, the genial manager for eastern Canada, was in charge of the booth.

Despite the great increase in the number of milk chocolates which are being exploited upon the Canadian market, Mr. Gordon stated that never in the experience of the firm had business been so prosperous, and that Tobler's, with a greatly enlarged factory and increased staff, were still taxed to their uttermost to keep up with orders.

Tobler's milk chocolate, in addition to having an enviable reputation for quality, is put up in specially attractive packages in as many styles, to suit the taste of the most fastidious.

The booth was very artistically decorated with a display of their various show cards, hangers, etc., while the tasty packages were arranged in a manner most attractive.

The proprietors were liberal in their samples, believing that every person who once tried the delicious confection would become a customer. Grocers who have not this line in their show case should send for prices and samples.

The Nugget Polish Company.

Though not, strictly speaking, a pure food, yet quite in keeping with a groceries exhibition and providing a pleasing variety from the majority of booths with good things to eat, was the exhibit of the Nugget Polish Company, Limited, which occupied a cosy corner on the right of the main entrance. This firm had on exhibit a very neat display of their splendid English shoe polish, over a year, and which has already taken a prominent place by reason of its excellent quality. The booth was in charge of A. R. Kent, Canadian sales manager, who was kept busy demonstrating the qualities of the goods, especially in regard to its proof against water. Shoes shined with the Nugget polish form the proverbial "duck's back," upon which no water can stay. A basin of water on the front of the booth proved this to the satisfaction of all visitors. A lad in neat khaki uniform was also in attendance upon a chair where a free shine was provided for anybody who wished to avail themselves of the opportunity.

This Nugget Polish, in addition to being waterproof, does not rub off and will not even soil a clean towel, proving conclusively how valuable it is to which has been on this market a little anyone who wishes to avoid soiling clothes. The polish is being retailed at 10c. per tin and the grocers who visited the exhibition were convinced of the advisability of adding it to their stock, especially in view of the fact that it can be kept in stock without fear of its drying up and becoming worthless, neither will it freeze. The firm also manufacture a harness polish and a furniture polish in paste form, the latter retailing at 10c.

Christie, Brown & Company.

The name of Christie, Brown & Co. is synonymous with good biscuits all over Canada. This firm had a very neat exhibit of their many lines occupying the space of two booths in the centre of the arena. A feature of Christie's biscuits besides their inner good qualities, is the attractive manner in which they are put up. The many handsome boxes with their glass faces through which were seen the large number of varieties, were arranged in artistic fashion tier above tier, the whole contributing to a most attractive display. The firm manufacture no less than six hundred different lines and although only a small proportion of these were on exhibition, there was abundant room for variety. Their standard line is the well known zephyr cream soda biscuit, which is now retailed in neat little half-pound packages at 5 cents. A few other leading brands exhibited were their assorted sandwiches, water-ice wafers, Alexandria, social tea, cheese wafers, cafe noir, oatmeal, fruit ginger bread, arrowroot, fig bars, rusk, wafer rolls, reception wafers, home-made ginger wafers, etc.

Christie's infant food, which has had a remarkable sale, was also on exhibition.

Montreal Packing Company.

A booth which drew crowds afternoon and evening was that of the Montreal Packing Company. The pleasing manner in which the goods displayed struck the eye at first glance generally succeeded in attracting one to the booth to further inspect such goodly appearing lines. Quality has always been a study with the Montreal Packing Company, and they do not allow any of their lines to leave the packing house before being as perfect as their skill in manufacturing can make them. Several lines, hard to beat, were noticeable in the booth occupied by this firm. Corona breakfast bacon, pea mealed and plain, was one of the lines shown. For breakfast this is a splendid article and grocers find that there is good demand for it. Put up in one pound packages, sliced, ready for cooking, it is very convenient for housewives desiring to get a meal ready in a moment. Corona cooked ham, sweet, tender and juicy, no skin, no bone, and no waste, it always pleases, was on display. Packed in one-pound cartons, Corona sausage, Cambridge and Oxford, was a line which readily attracted and held attention. Bologna, Corona, has been pronounced by government analysists free from preservatives. A couple of lines which must not be forgotten are Corona kettle rendered leaf lard and Corona creamery butter. These are obtainable in neat one-pound wrapped packages. The lard is sold in pails as well.

A feature of the booth was a small pen in which were two young porkers only five weeks old. The idea conveyed was the care exercised in watching the process by which Corona goods are obtained. Nothing is too good for Corona and the gradual "process of manufacturing" from raw material to the finished article was amply demonstrated.

The Montreal Packing Company puts up everything that is good in smoked meats and any grocer on the lookout for high-grade products need not hesitate.

Snowdon, Forbes & Co.

The bee is invariably the emblem of industry, and in choosing "Bee" as the name of their several excellent products Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, acted wisely. There are now ten Bees in this hive of industry, better known as follows: Bee starch, Bee ammonia powder, Bee soda, Bee cornstarch, Bee borax, Bee baking powder, Bee tea, Bee coffee, Bee extracts and Bee jelly powder. For these brands Snowdon, Forbes & Co. have built up an enviable trade. Their reputation for first-class quality and moderate price has been envied by many but equalled by few. This firm was represented at the exhibition of groceries by a very neat display occupying the space of two booths. The various "Bees" were exhibited in most attractive style, while plants and flowers lent an air of variety and taste. This firm have recently made a wonderful hit with their Bee brand jelly powders, which they are putting up in neat cartons, six flavors to a box—raspberry, strawberry, pineapple, lemon, cherry and nutto—the whole retailing for 25c.

The new line most certainly made an impression on the buying public, as the numerous orders booked with both the wholesale and retail grocers and the numerous packages bought by the consumer indicated.

Good advertising was also done for their other various lines at the exhibition. Altogether the firm are looking for an increased demand for their goods from every quarter.

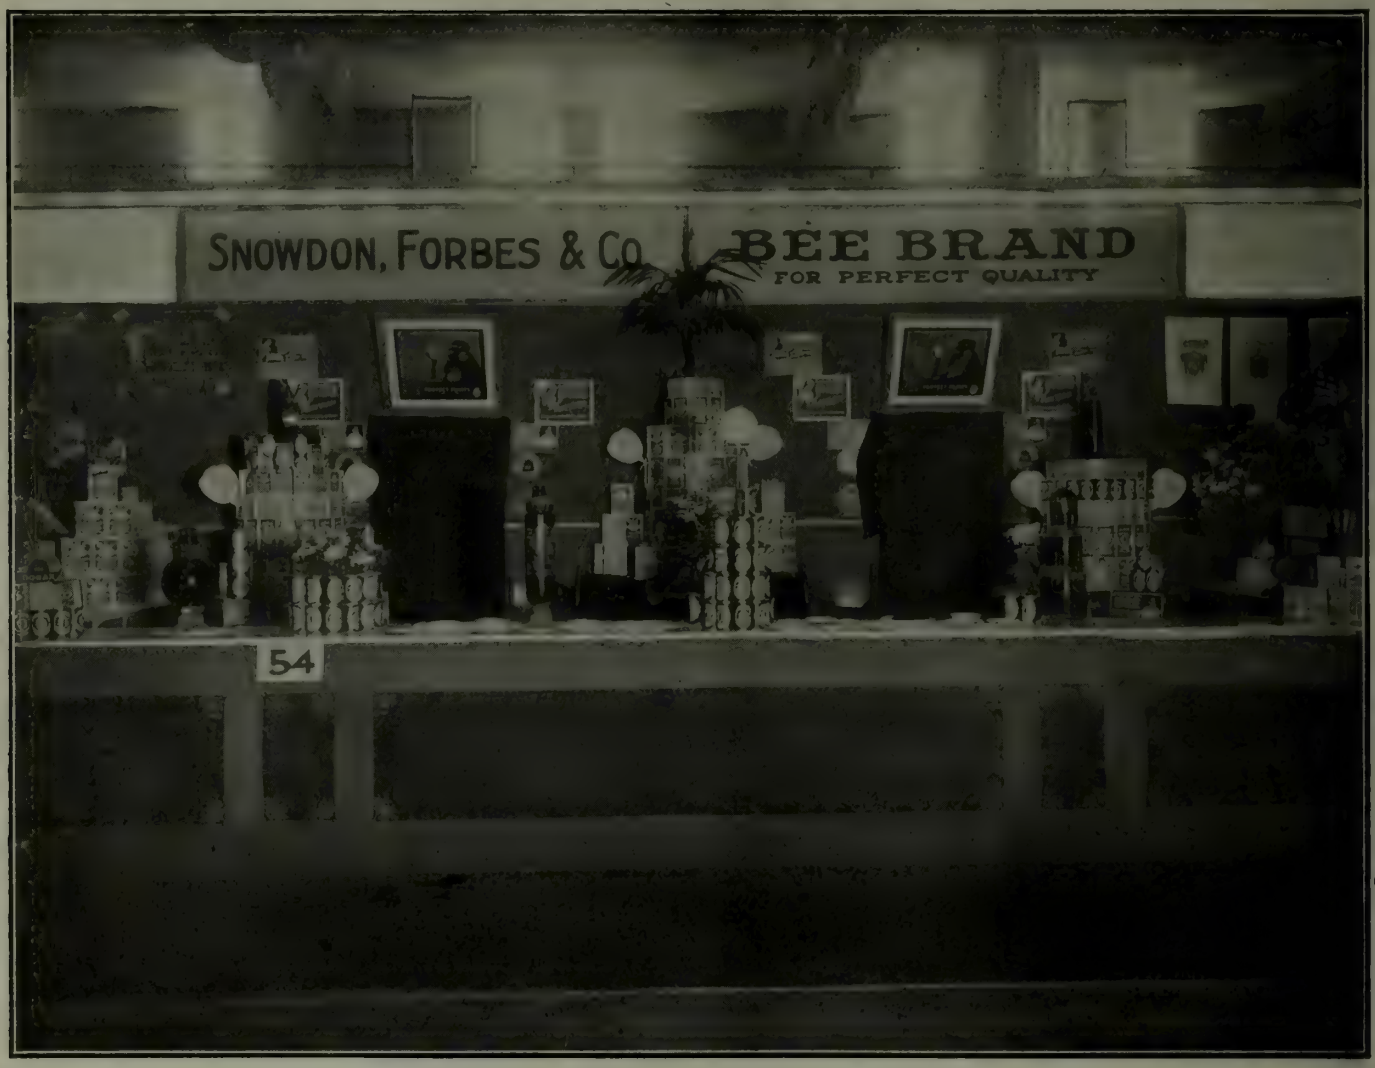
A Fine Exhibit.

Visitors to the exhibition could not help but be impressed by the magnificent display of Charles Gurd & Co., Limited. Not only was it a revelation to the visitor to observe the great variety of the beverages shown by this firm, but the display itself, as to beauty of design and color, was impressively delightful.

Gurd & Co. have always advertised "Purity" as one of the distinguished features of their goods. It was easy to give them credit for excellence in this regard when the clearness of the liquids exhibited was seen. Their exhibit was in the form of a large pyramid with an arched background, the decorative effect being supplied by the goods themselves, forming a glittering aggregation of crystal splendor. A few of the diplomas won by the firm were shown.

Charles Gurd & Co. have obtained gold medals at Paris, France; Ottawa, and Montreal; besides three silver and five bronze medals and eighteen diplomas at London, Eng., Chicago and elsewhere.

Among the goods shown were Gurd's celebrated ginger ale and its companion in popularity, Gurd's apple nectar, besides cherry phosphate, plain soda, sweet soda, lemon soda, cream soda, orange soda, lemonade, sarsaparilla, ginger beer, seltzer, potash, Scotch kola, vichy, lithia, and the famous Magi Caledonia waters, for which the firm are agents. These goods are in syphons, cylinders, and all sorts of bottles.



Snowdon, Forbes & Co's Bee Brands.

The Banquets.

Three banquets were held in all. There was one during the first week of the fair; a second on Tuesday, April 23, to the medical men of Montreal, and a third on Thursday evening, April 25. The last was the most important.

Chairman A. P. Murray, after the toast of "The King," introduced Mr. Winter, mentioned above, and called upon him for a few words. Mr. Winter was surprised at the excellence of the show and congratulated the management. In his opinion the time was rapidly coming when the real test of pure foods would be the manner in which they could be demonstrated at food fairs, before the public.

E. M. Trowern, secretary Retail Merchants' Association, from Toronto, said that he never believed it was possible to get up such a show and draw such crowds solely through the booths, without any outside, extra attraction. The fair was the finest he had ever seen and in his opinion, outclassed the exhibition held in Toronto earlier in the year.

M. Moyer, treasurer Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, did not quite agree with Mr. Trowern, that his home city was "skinned a mile," but he admitted the excellence of Montreal's fair. He said Torontonians concentrated their efforts upon their annual exhibition. Mr. Moyer thought that the grocers were the best class of men in any town. If they were not the right material they very quickly found it necessary to get out of the grocery business. They could not stand the strain. Short addresses were made by Acting-Mayor Giroux, Montreal; Councillor Murphy, Westmount; Ald. Levesque, and by the press.

Saturday evening Secretary-Manager J. A. Beaudry was presented with a beautiful bronze clock by the exhibitors as a mark of their appreciation of his hard work. Mr. Beaudry deserves great credit for the part he played in the exhibition of groceries. He worked very hard and his courteous manner and willingness to oblige made things easy for everybody and won him many friends.

A great deal of praise is due the advisory committee, whose names are given. They all of them gave up much of their time to the work of the exhibition and it is due to their efforts that the fair was such a success.

The Advisory Committee :

A. P. Murray, Edwardsburg Starch Co., chairman ; Col. A. E. Labelle, Ogilvie Flour Mills Co.; Harry Clark, of Wm. Clark ; Albert Hebert, Hudon, Hebert & Co.; Jas. Ethier, Laporte, Martin & Co.; S. J. Mathewson, Mathewson's Sons ; Wm. H. Dunn, W. S. Laflamme, Rose & Laflamme ; P. Daoust, ex-president Retail Grocers' Association, Montreal ; J. A. Labonte and J. A. Maynard, Montreal ; J. A. Samples Collected.

The official programme of the exhibition was neat, effective, and a credit to the management.

Ogilvie's sign cause a lot of talk. It was a good one.

Snowdon, Forbes & Co. gave away a lot of very pretty fans.

Attendance on the part of the clergy was large for such an affair.

A Chinese youngster about three years old, the much thought of son of one of the Chinamen connected with the restaurant, attracted quite a lot of attention.

The Montreal Packing Company displayed a couple of young porkers, which were fed on milk. One evening a couple of ladies asked what they were given to drink. Councillor Murphy overheard the question, and promptly said : "They don't drink, ladies. This is Westmount."

A good many people did forget the Arena as located in Westmount.

J. A. Dumas, corner Sherbrooke and St. Denis Streets, took the pictures which appear in The Grocer.

Acting-Mayor Giroux, of Montreal, opened the exhibition. Quite a number of aldermen were noticed at the fair.

A. B. Paul, Jr., California Fruit Canners' Association, droppeh off between trains to see the show. He thought it great.

M. E. Conway, the Geo. Matthews Co., Peterborough, Hull and Brantford, was around one evening.

Thos. Owens, Quaker Packing Co., was around as usual.

The goods in all the booths were insured.

Every evening at 10.30 the Arena was taken over by the Dominion Burglary Guarantee Company until 10 a.m.

Aunt Jemima dolls were given away by Rose & Laflamme. Edwardsburg Starch Co. distributed Teddy bears by the hundred.

It would be a good idea next year to provide ventilation of some sort. The air was very hot and stuffy at times.

Brodie's silver polish was demonstrated.

There was a telephone exchange in full working order, as well as branch offices of C.P.R. and G.N.W. Telegraph Companies.

GROCERY TRADE NEWS OF NEW BRUNSWICK

St. John, N.B., April 29, 1907.

Now that the river is open and the steamers have started making regular trips, it is expected that there will be a lot of produce brought down and that prices will be considerably easier. Eggs are fairly plentiful and are now quoted at fifteen to twenty cents a dozen, but butter continues scarce and high. One reason for this is that practically all the old stocks have been sold and new butter is not yet offering in any great quantity.

The present season has been very backward for gaspereaux fishing in the harbor. At this time last year a large number of the fish were being caught, but up to the present time this year the catch has been very small. The shad fishing season commences about the middle of May. At the present time there is just about enough fresh fish offering to supply local wants.

The annual sale of the market tolls, stalls and city scales was held on Friday in the country and $4,690 was realized. This is $713.20 less than was obtained from last year's sale. The stalls were secured by the same merchants who had them last year. F. L. Potts paid $4,135 for the privilege of collecting the market tolls. Last year O. B. Akerly paid $4,400 for the privilege.

Although the provincial government has refused the request of the exhibition association for a grant of $3,000 for an exhibition this fall, there will nevertheless be a fair, and it promises to be the best ever held in St. John. Through the efforts of B. R. Macaulay, of Macaulay Bros. & Co., prominent merchants and hotel men have subscribed liberally and it is expected that more than the requested grant will be raised. Premier Pugsley headed the list with a subscription of $200. It is proposed to hold the fair about September 20th.

Local merchants are greatly pleased at the announcement that the I. C. R. authorities are to make some improvements in the local conditions that will enable them to get delivery of freight quicker than heretofore. The congestion in the local yard has been a great drawback to business during the past winter. It is proposed to build another large warehouse and put in a high siding at York Point slip. This will be of great benefit, but there is a feeling among the jobbers that eventually the yard from Dorchester street to Gilbert's lane will have to be widened to allow of better shunting facilities. It is understood that this matter is now being considered by the railway authorities.

Frank White, of the White Catering Co., returned home Saturday after a three weeks' trip to Atlantic City and other amusement centres. While away Mr. White purchased a Ferris wheel, a merry-go-round, some automatic swings, and a shoot-the-chutes, all of which will be installed in Rockwood Park this summer. Fred L. Tufts, who recently disposed of his business in nuts and confectionery, will act as manager of the Rockwood Park interests for the White Co. The work of building pavilions, etc., will commence at once.

The winter port business is drawing to a close. There is only one more steamer to arrive, the C.P.R. liner Montreal, from London and Antwerp, due on April 30. The season has been very successful, considering the drawbacks. The blockade of freight in the west has cut down the exports somewhat in common with other ports, but the imports show a large increase over previous years.

During the past week the schooner Montrose arrived with 600 packages of molasses and the schooner Water Witch brought 533 packages of molasses and 125 barrels of raw sugar, for the Crosby Molasses Company.

The case of L. G. Crosby vs. the King, in which judgment was given in favor of the Crown on the third of April, in the exchequer court, has been appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada. The details of the suit have been given in previous numbers of The Grocer.

INSPECTION OF MILK.

The Private Bills Committee of the British Columbia Legislature has refused the city of Vancouver authority to inspect, through its medical health officer, farms whence comes the city's milk supply, and to refuse admission to the city of milk from farms that do not pass such inspection. The committee held a private discussion and confirmed their conclusion that they could not give the city power to prohibit the importation into the city of milk from farms or other places not previously inspected and certified by the city medical health officer.

"We rejected a similar clause last year," said Chairman Bowser, "because we did not think it right to give the medical health officer power to go outside the city limits in his inspection."

"The trouble is," said Mr. McEvoy, representing the city, "the provincial health inspector only goes around about twice a year, and that is not sufficient where the health of the whole city of Vancouver is at stake. Owing to the flat lands and poor drainage on Lulu Islands the sanitary conditions of farms there are apt to be very inefficient.. If the city were given power to inspect and certify the source of supply it would save much trouble. There is no power so potent to affect the health of the city as the milk supply."

Chairman Bowser considered that this would be giving excessive power to the city medical health officer, as under this provision he would have the right to inspect farms on Lulu Island, Dewdney, and as far as Chilliwack.

"It would be intolerable to give Vancouver this power," said Mr. Jardine; to which Mr. Robertson replied: "It would assist those farmers who were trying to carry on their business in a clean and wholesome fashion. The only ones who would suffer would be those who kept their premises in a dirty condition, and it would be only right that they should suffer."

It is probable that Dr. Underhill, medical health officer for Vancouver, will be made a provincial officer in order to give him power to inspect milk coming from neighboring districts for city use.

A CALENDAR WITH A MORAL.

From the Surprise Soap Company comes a copy of their latest calendar, which is really more than a calendar, being, in point of fact, a moral and pathetic allegory. It represents three highly-colored individuals, two of whom, washing operations having been temporarily suspended, are about to exchange an osculatory embrace with every sign of mutual satisfaction.

The transitory and evanescent character of all human bliss is typified in the approach of a third figure, evidently the incensed parent of the young lady, who, with righteous indignation, has been a silent and wrathful witness of her daughter's amours from the middle distance. Fate, swift, powerful and unrelenting to the evil-doer, is exemplified in her uplifted hand, and the rest is mere prophecy. It is safe to assume, however, that the washing in that particular household was improved considerably in speed, thoroughness and general efficiency by reason of this little contretemps, and that in the future Sambo met his Dinah at the back door after much careful reconnoitering as to the whereabouts of the enemy.

CURRANT SHIPMENTS.

Of last year's currant crop in Greece 181,644,096 Venetian pounds were exported by January 1, 1907, against exports of 155,634,078 pounds the year before. As usual, about two-thirds of the crop, more than 121,000,000 pounds, went to England. The United States still held second place, taking 21,000,000 pounds, while the trade with Germany and Holland shows still further decrease, and that with France amounted to only about a third of the amount shown at the end of 1905. Japan appears in the list for the first time.

Mr. Beatty, of Beatty & Ramsbottom, Alliston, was in Toronto last week.

T. Coulter, Port Robinson, is still busy with his gas wells. He has a bonanza.

Fred. S. Crosby, of the Crosby Molasses Company, Halifax, spent some time in Montreal recently.

M. E. McFarlane, one of the progressive grocers of Campbell's Bay, Que., was in Montreal during the week.

Ed. Hacker, Beachville, was married last week. He and his bride went on a short honeymoon trip. While he is not the kind to stay away long from business—one reason why he is doing so well—he will go a merry clip while he is away.

J. H. Gardiner, of Sugars, Ltd., Montreal, took time to pay a rush visit to the Toronto office of The Grocer last Saturday. It's hard to get him to talk of anything but Sugars, Ltd., and the growth of this industry. Business was up to the highest capacity notch.

Bryan Spike, for nine years manager of S. A. Gray & Co., Meaford, left on Tuesday for Carman, Man., where he will take charge of a grocery business. He leaves many friends in Meaford who wish him every success. His successor with Gray & Co. is E. Ellis, formerly with W. F. Ellis, Meaford.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Cheese is not yet the interesting article it generally becomes in the spring of the year. There is some business being done with the old country, but prices asked by local men are too high as a rule to tempt buyers on the other side to make very large purchases. The English importers seem to be taking up only such cheese as they must have to fill immediate requirements.

The make up to the present has not been particularly large. The backward spring is the cause of this state of affairs. Usually at this period the factories have turned out a good quantity of cheese. This year they have not produced nearly so many boxes as in former years.

However, the make is increasing a little each week, and once all the factories get down to real hard work there will be plenty of cheese obtainable.

The question of when prices will be down to such a basis as will permit of a good export business is another matter. Time will show.

Local trading in cheese is but fair There is still some old cheese offering at prices which are well maintained. The new article is quoted at figures which have not changed materially for some time. There is no possibility of lower figures until the make increases quite a bit, and this will not be possible for a week or ten days at any rate.

Butter continues very firm, but lower prices are still anticipated. It will be remembered that last week it was predicted that prices should be lower in the course of a few days. It was then confidently expected that dealers would be asking lower prices. Subsequent developments made a decline out of the question.

In the first place the expected increase in receipts did not materialize to the extent anticipated by most people. Again, demand kept up and all the butter arriving has been disposed of very quickly. Another fact tending to keep prices from falling is that quite a lot of new butter was shipped to New York, where the market ruled very high at the time. It will be seen that one way and another events worked out to keep prices at their present level.

Old butter is nearly all cleaned up. There may be some few lots of bakers' butter obtainable, but outside of this there is not much.

New butter arriving continues almost all creamery. There is very little in the way of dairy except a few large rolls, which are quickly taken up for shipment to the west.

Canadian butter has no attraction for English dealers yet. From reports received it is seen that receipts of butter, principally Australian and New Zealand, are quite above the consumption, and, as a result, the market is sagging.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

There isn't any striking change in the provision situation this week. The price for live hogs is the same as last week, 6.15 f.o.b. country points, but some of the smaller buyers, who the large packers describe pleasantly as "having no export trade, and therefore no responsibility in regard to the market are paying as high as 6.40." In the view of the exporting packer, who has been losing 4s. to 6s. a cwt. on his shipments overseas for months, this responsibility is a rather serious matter. His outlook is not improving, for the Old Country market declined 2s. last week, and latest cables promise a further decline this week. Danish deliveries continue as heavy as ever, with a promise of continuing at the present rate. This, combined with decreased supplies of Canadian, has brought the prices of Danish and Canadian to about a parity. If the price of live hogs in Canada were to decline to 5.75 the packer would just about break even on the market as it is at present. American shipments of bacon to England are about 45,000 hogs a week, about as much as Canadian and Danish together. However, it is Danish that is the determining factor in the market and the Americans as well as Canadians are losing money in the English market today.

Big and little dealers, however, look forward to a very active summer trade in Canada, though there has not been as yet any marked increase in demand. The great amount of railway construction will itself entail a large consumption. For some months now most of the large eastern packers have been doing a nice trade in the Northwest, a market heretofore largely supplied from Chicago.

Deliveries of live hogs in Canada last week ran about 21,000, a little larger than before.

PROVISIONS — With the opening of navigation there is a noticeable increase in the sales of bacon and lard. Hams are going fairly well, but they will not be in great demand before warmer weather sets in. Prices have not changed.

BUTTER — Receipts of butter are limited. Dealers expect lower prices and are buying only for immediate use. Most butter received arrives by express to-day and is sold to-morrow. As may be imagined, the market is pretty bare in consequence. Prices are around the same level as those quoted last week, but it is only a matter of time when they will be lower. Some lots were shipped to New York recently and this fact tends to keep the local market firm. Old butter is well cleaned up. There may be a few odd lots of bakers' for sale around 18c. and 19c., but outside of this there is little.

CHEESE—Cheese is rather firm this week. The market is not over supplied with stock. New cheese is not yet arriving very freely and there is not a great deal of old obtainable. For the new article dealers are asking anywhere from 12c. to 13½c. Prices asked for old are around 14c. and 14½c.

EGGS—Eggs are steady. More business is being transacted this week than last. Prices in the country are a little firmer than they were last time of writing. Receipts are quite large, greater than the consumption, and as a result considerable quantities are being put into storage. For selects some are asking 20c. No. 1 bring 18c. and 19c.

HONEY — Practically no business is being done in honey. Most houses have not had a sale to report for the last week or ten days. Their customers are buying maple syrup instead. Prices, as a consequence, are quite unchanged.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The demand for pork products seems to be increasing slowly. Prices are inclined to be a little easy. This is because the large exporting packers, having reduced their output to England, have been increasing their domestic stocks. The opinion is expressed, however, that the demand this coming summer will provide an outlet for all pork products held here. The high price of beef will have something to do in bringing the prophecy true.

WINNIPEG.

The local market is almost bare of creamery butter and there has consequently been a better demand for dairy. Conditions were so bad that one of the local papers reported a butter famine.

Butter—Owing to scarcity, creamery butter is commanding a very high price —35 cents per pound and higher. Dairy is in better demand but produce houses still complain of the general quality. They are paying country dealers 20c. to 24c. per pound for dairy butter.

CEREALS AND CONFECTIONERY

Crop Reports Have the Grain Markets in Hand—Flour Prices Firm in Sympathy with Wheat—Good Export and Domestic Business Doing.

Grain and cereal markets are now governed solely by crop reports. The drawback in the Canadian west will be decreased acreage. On the first of April the Western Grain Dealers' Association gave out an estimate of 10 per cent. increase in the wheat acreage. It is now believed that owing to the lateness of the season the acreage will be not so large as last year. The late planting also exposes the crop to hot winds and ripening heat before maturity, so that the final outcome cannot be guessed at. In the States conditions are much worse. The freezing weather almost throughout the winter wheat belt has continued all last week, adding serious damage to that caused by winter killing, spring drouth and prevalence of bugs. While winter wheat and oats were the crops immediately suffering, spring wheat has been seriously affected by very late seeding, reduced acreage and increased risk for the balance of the crop from a short cold season. Winter wheat and oat acreage has been seriously reduced by plowing up, and the prospects now are for a short wheat crop, both winter and spring.

In eastern Canada reports do not indicate serious damage. In Europe a decreased crop is promised.

The flour trade is brisk, both domestic and export; and prices, in sympathy with wheat, are very firm. One miller reported a large shipment to South Africa this week and enquiry for an even larger shipment. This same firm had an enquiry from Egypt for 10,000 barrels. Some of this product went there last year and evidently the Canadian product was satisfactory.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—With the opening of navigation there is noticeable a considerable increase in the flour business. Quotations have not changed since last report, but if wheat advances any further there may be an advance in flour also. Export trade is very fair. There is not much being done with Japan, as most of the grade demanded by the Japanese is sold. Business with England and South Africa is looking up.

PREPARED FOODS IN CHINA.

U. S. Consul-General J. L. Rodgers, of Shanghai, in response to the request of a Minneapolis concern for information as to the present use and future prospects for prepared cereal foods in China, states that the present limited consumption is almost entirely confined to foreigners, and that there is but little reason to believe that the Chinese would become users of such preparations. The cheapness and simplicity of the Chinese diet form the great impediment to the introduction of foreign foodstuffs other than flour and pork, and it is to be doubted if any effort to overcome the obstacles at present existing would be even measurably successful for many years to come.

TRAFFIC DELAY SERIOUS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Vancouver, B.C., April 17, 1907.

It did not require a threatened coal strike, and consequent tie-up of freight traffic, to make life a burden to the wholesale trade here. For the entire past winter, freight conditions have been simply "fierce." No regularity has been maintained in shipments from eastern sources of supply, and many shipments have been practically "lost." Freight traffic agents often do not know where cars have been side-tracked and it has more than once occurred that missing cars have suddenly turned up in the terminal yards here. But no such good luck attends the wayfaring of the bulk of the delayed shipments.

At the present moment freight conditions are entirely at the mercy of the striking coal miners of the various mines of the Crow's Nest Pass and in the Province of Alberta. Calgary Board of Trade has urged upon the Boards of Trade in this province to join in making representations to the Dominion Government asking for immediate action in the interest of business throughout the west. Vancouver Board of Trade at a meeting held yesterday afternoon took prompt action and telegraphed the authorities at Ottawa pressing upon them the urgent demand for action.

Already the C.P.R. has tied up the ore trains in the Kootenay district, recognizing the uselessness of moving ore forward to the smelters when the latter have but three days' coke supply, and the mines are unable to send forward any more owing to the strike. General freight is still moving on the main line, but the expectation is that if the strike continues all traffic other than passenger service will be suspended. In Vancouver, Victoria, and the rest of the coast cities that means the tie-up of the saw mills as well, which is a serious matter.

Not only are many lines of staple groceries short in the coast cities, but dairy produce is also among the luxuries. Butter of any sort is scarce and dear. The local supply of creamery butter has increased very materially during the past few weeks, and there is some local dairy being marketed in small way, but outside sources of supply have almost entirely failed. The last Australian steamer brought in 250 boxes last week. This sold at 36 cents, and 36½ cents for one-pound prints. It lasted but the length of time the proverbial snowball lasts.

Some supplies of indifferent quality have been coming in from California and these have sold up to 40 cents per pound. Even these shipments have been limited, though the price has been paid, so keen is demand. From the east practically no supplies have been forthcoming, though one or two shipments, bought on the Montreal market, have been expected for some time. This eastern stock could not sell less than 33 cents if it were here. Local creamery still brings 35 cents to the trade, while local dairy is selling up to 30 cents.

There are no eastern eggs yet on the market, weather and freight conditions having been against importations. Some limited supplies from Oregon have been coming forward. With that exception the market has been entirely dependent upon local production. Recently demand has been such that prices have been forced back up to 33 cents wholesale. At that figure the market is bare of stocks.

Lard, pure leaf, is quoted at 14 cents in 3's and 5's and 10's; hams, 19 cents; bacon, 20 cents.

Grocery staples show scarcity, in fact entire absence of condensed milk and cream, shortage of caddies of tobacco, and many other lines. In dried fruits there is a quieter feeling. Prices are still high, but some good stocks are carried here. In apricots there is no surplus, and the quotation is 23 cents. Dried peaches are 15 cents and 15½ cents; plums, 14 cents and 15 cents; pears, 11½ cents; prunes, 4¼ cents to 8½ cents, the lowest figure for 90 to 100's and the higher for 30 to 40's, though the big sizes are scarce. California figs are 6½ cents.

In canned goods no changes are reported in prices, which are all based on Canadian Canners' quotations, with exception of tomatoes, which are $1.50. No canned strawberries are in stock at all. Rice is stiffening up in Japanese markets, though the price still holds at $78 per ton here. Stocks of tapioca and sago are plentiful and goods on order in these lines coming forward regularly. Prices are, tapioca, 7 cents; sago, 6¾ cents.

Potatoes have gone up steadily and remain firm at high prices. The stocks have run very low and supplies are mainly from the upper country. Some have even been brought from the Kootenay, a very radical change from conditions a few years ago when practically none were produced in that district. Many have been shipped from the Okanagan district, and while some have reached this market, the bulk of the stock has gone to the prairie. Calgary being very short. Prices now quoted here are from $32 per ton up.

Local hot-house lettuce is short at the present time, not half enough coming in to meet demand. Victoria growers, who supply the larger proportion, will not have any to market for over a week yet: Local green onions, radishes and hot-house cauliflower are on the market. The onions are 25 cents per dozen bunches; radishes, 40 cents per dozen bunches; cauliflower, $2.50 per dozen heads. Rhubarb is all local now and present price is 8 cents per pound, but the tendency is downward, and before many weeks less than half that price will be asked.

California cabbage is in good supply, a carload having just arrived this morning. The price is rather high at present, being 4 cents to the trade. Fresh asparagus, California-grown, is plentiful, at 18 cents per pound. Celery is scarce, and supplies are all from California. The price is up to $1.00 per dozen.

Last week's Australian steamer brought in a considerable consignment of Tasmanian apples, which are in splendid condition. The price is at luxury basis, being $3.50 to the trade for the 40-pound box. Local apples are practically off the market, and what few are still in hands are of very indifferent quality. A very few Oregon apples are still on the market at $2.75 and $3.00. California navel oranges and Mediterranean sweets are in good supply, though the former variety is nearing the end of its season. Prices are from $3.50 to $4.00 per box. A considerable quantity of tangerines, California-grown, have been on the market this season. They sell fairly well, at somewhat lower prices than standard oranges. Lemons have gone up to $5.50 with indications that they will rival last year's fancy figures before the season is out. Some Florida tomatoes are due in to-morrow. They will sell at $6.50 to $7.00 per 40-pound box to the trade. The California tomatoes which have been supplying the market recently, have been selling at $4.00 for the 20-pound box. Bananas are in plentiful supply, about two cars a week coming forward on the average. They bring 5½ cents per pound.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

The Deciduous Fruit Situation in California — Eastern Business Quiet — Cuban Pines Late and High—The Potato Situation.

The most recent information obtainable from California gives the prospects of the deciduous fruit crop of that district, from the fresh fruit shipping standpoint, and with particular reference to the heavy fresh fruit shipping districts, as decidedly encouraging.

Early cherries will be light, with the later-blossoming varieties, especially Royal Arms, fair to heavy. The first box went forward about the 25th, several days later than last year. Apricots are practically a failure, and the crop will not exceed one-eighth of what might be expected under normal conditions. The peach prospects, though not exceptional, are brighter than last year, and a generally very fair crop may be looked for. Bartlett pears promise well, and though a number of trees in some districts have suffered severely from the fire blight, the season's yield should be well up to the average. All stock shipped is to be strictly first-class, since the bruised and scabby pears which formed the bulk of occasional shipments last year were found to reflect upon the standing and reputation of the growers as well as the importers. The grape prospect is magnificent, no damage or injury having been reported from any place. There seems to be a sufficiency of rainfall to mature all crops in every district.

The date of ripening will be a little later than last year, and at least two weeks behind the average season. If the weather continues warm and favorable, as at present, however, much of the lost time may be regained.

Trade in Montreal and Toronto continues quiet, though the recent balmy days have done much to put business on a more active footing. Collections are a little slow, the stringency of money being noticeable for the past month. It seems, however, to be merely a question of patience and there are few complaints.

The general impression is that the Cuban crop of pineapples is at least 20 per cent. less than that of last year, and that the prices will continue proportionately higher.

Potatoes are a somewhat ticklish proposition at this time of year. As the weather becomes hotter the stock grows at an amazing rate, and a bag of potatoes will lose from three to five pounds in a week if allowed to lie undisturbed. Under these circumstances dealers are cautious about letting a big stock accumulate on their hands, and unless they see their way clear to an immediate sale can hardly be induced to buy.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—Oranges are high but demand is very good. Lemons are scarce, receipts being light. Demand for various lines is rather limited. Apples are slow, although a few good lots have been sold recently. Florida grape fruit is cheaper. Bananas are high on the seaboard, and locally prices are somewhat above those quoted last week. The bananas offering, however, are really worth the extra money, being of the finest stock obtainable.

VEGETABLES — With warmer weather more business is being done in vegetables. River navigation is opening and this means increased trade. Potatoes are going well locally. The price is unchanged. There is a good demand for onions at figures quoted. Egyptians are now on the market, prices asked running between 2½c. and 3½c. a pound. Old cabbage is about done and new stock is being sold freely. Quite a number of price changes are noticeable this week.

FRUIT — Strawberries are arriving more freely, and the demand increases with the warm weather. Prices are a little easier, the market ruling about 13 cents a pint for Louisiana berries. Pineapples are considerably lower and exhibit a tendency to drop still further during the week. A considerable percentage of the Cuban crop seems to have been badly damaged.

LARGEST IN THE WORLD.

Claim of the Calfornia Fruit Packers' Association.—A. B. Paul in Canada.

A. B. Paul, Jr., manager of the dried fruit department of the California Fruit Canners' Association, San Francisco, was in Toronto this week on his annual business trip to Canada. He came from Montreal, where he visited the grocery exhibition, and there the sign of the Canadian Canners, Ltd., arrested his attention, "Largest Canners of Fruits in the World."

"Either you or we will have to take that sign down," he told them, and to The Canadian Grocer he said: "We claim to be the largest canners of fruits and vegetables in the world."

He went on to relate that the association, with a capital of $5,000,000, was organized eight years ago and had 29 factories and 12 dried fruit packing plants. They lost three canneries in the San Francisco fire and are now rebuilding them. Their combined capacity will be 250,000 cans packed and stocked in a day. The association's loss in the fire was $660,000, less the insurance, yet the gross profits last year were over $700,000.

The association began packing fruit only a year or two ago and last year was their first in the Canadian market. Mr. Paul asserts they are the largest packers on the coast, however, with a capacity for raisins alone of 360,000 lb. cartons (10 carloads) a day.

Speaking of the prune crop last year, Mr. Paul said it was 180,000,000 lbs., and that there were left on the coast only 15,000,000 lbs. The crop of Lima beans was 900,000 bags and of citrus fruits 27,000 carloads. Apricots had again been ruined by the frost, he said, and the crop this year would be about the same as last, 10 or 15 per cent. of an average. Last year's raisin crop was exceptionally heavy and as it is unlikely that two abnormal crops will follow in succession, only about 100,000,000 lbs. are looked for this year.

Mr. Paul was seen by The Canadian Grocer at the office of Geo. Musson & Son, who are the Toronto representatives of the association.

NOTES.

J. H. Lennox, Ivy, is building a new up-to-date general store.

J. W. Graydon, Grand Valley, is moving to the Northwest and is taking his stock with him.

W. J. Clute, grocer and confectioner, Creemore, has sold out to W. J. Orr and gone west.

T. H. Dodds has started a grocery in Port Hope. He opened on Monday. Here's success to him.

Bishop Bros., Niagara, are going into the canning business this season. They are at work now on a factory.

J. Lithgow, town councillor, Bobcaygeon, has sold his grocery business to W. A. Graham, of Lakefield.

Herbert Sharp, who opened a grocery at Goodwood about a month ago, reports business very satisfactory.

Shields & Son are opening up in Grand Valley on the 1st of May, with an entirely new stock of general merchandise.

Willison & Merrill, of Hastings, a new partnership, have bought out A. P. Parsons. Mr. Parsons in going to try his fortune in the west.

W. A. Dulmage, Harriston, has succeeded S. A. Todd of that village in the grocery business. Mr. Todd is going west. Mr. Dulmage was formerly a clerk with Hanna & Company, Wingham.

W. Graham, Kirkfield, has bought out W. Lithgow, Bobcaygeon. Mr. Graham sold out his new business three months ago. He will open his new store on May 1.

The Walter Baker Company, manufacturers of chocolate, etc., have put a new size of their Premium No. 1 chocolate on the market which promises to meet with popular favor. It is a quarter-pound size in neat package.

Geo. Edmonds, Fingal, has sold his business to Mr. Scott, formerly clerk with A. McCormick, grocer, London. Mr. Edmonds is retiring from business and will go shortly on a trip to the Old Country. It is said, too, he has designs on an automobile.

Owing to the great increase of business for "White Moss" cocoanut and their other lines, the Canadian Cocoanut Co. have been compelled to make extensive alterations and enlarge their plant, putting in new and larger machinery so as to be thoroughly prepared to supply all comers.

The Canadian Cocoanut Co., Montreal, are increasing the capacity of their plant, a step necessitated by the growing demand for their White Moss Cocoanut. With their increased capacity they will be able to look after all old and new customers promptly and efficiently.

"A BETTER WAY OF DOING BUSINESS"

If one or two or a score of Grocers made that remark when speaking of any man's business method it would be worth considering; but when 85 per cent. of the Grocers in this Dominion say so the phrase becomes important. Apart from the known goodness of it is remarkable that so large a percentage of Canadian Grocers should speak that way of my business methods. How much does the phrase mean to you? Shouldn't you, in fairness to yourself, find out? Better Cigars you cannot stock than PHARAOH and PEBBLE. Connoisseurs say so. I want your personal opinion of my way of doing business. Send me your address to-day.

GROCERY TRADE NEWS ON THE ATLANTIC COAST

Halifax, N.S., April 15.

The grocery markets are very firm and have an upward tendency. Tea in bulk has been advanced, but there is no change thus far in packages. Sugar has been advanced ten cents per hundred pounds and rice is also higher. Business has been good, large supplies being required for the fishermen who are now out on their spring trips, and by the lumbermen who are preparing for the spring drives. Flour is firm; lard is inclined to be a little higher, and pork and beef are a shade easier. Eggs are coming in very plentiful and the price is declining very rapidly. They are now quoted at 17c. The cold storage men have not yet commenced to lay in their stocks as it is too early in the season. The price holds well, however, considering the quantity of stock on the market. Butter is a very scarce article at present and very little good stock can be bought under 26 cents. Dairy tubs are practically off the market. Dealers are at a loss to understand what the farmers are doing with their stock, as it does not appear to be reaching the market. Good stock finds ready sale, even at the high prices.

FISH.—The fish markets are very dull at present and the stocks on hand are pretty well exhausted. The shipments now are very light, and dealers are clearing out their old stocks in preparation for receiving new fish, which will be coming in in the course of a few months. Many of the fishermen are now out on their spring trip. The price of lobsters is still very high and the catches to date are unusually high. The market is well supplied with fresh fish at present, and some trout and salmon are offered for sale. The first fresh salmon of the season was marketed this week.

Fishing Outlook.

According to advices received here great difficulty is experienced in procuring crews to prosecute the Bank fishings. The western outfitters of the colony are offering higher wages than usual and still they cannot get men. The explanation lies in the fact that the Labrador fishery has proved more attractive than usual in the matter of wages the last few years, and all the northern men are absorbed in that direction, while the southern contingent are finding more and more employment across the gulf every year. Fish is exported in abundance on some parts of the Newfoundland coast, and the fishermen are making big hauls, though they are greatly handicapped owing to the short supply of bait.

Large quantities of sugar and molasses are now being landed at this port. The steamer Parima, which arrived here last week from Barbados, Antigua and St. Kitts, brought 1,179 hogsheads, 15,400 bags and 301 barrels of sugar, and 693 puncheons, 40 hogsheads and 55 barrels of molasses.

Fish Plant Changes Hands.

The Gorton-Pew Fish Company, of Gloucester, Mass., has purchased the extensive fish plant of the C. Robin Collas Company, of Halifax, and within a short time, under new ownership, the big fish curing plant will be in operation on a larger scale than ever before.

The firm of Bezanson & Thompson, who have been carrying on a general grocery, flour, meal and fish business at Mahone, N.S., for the past five years, have decided to go out of business, and the entire stock will be closed out at once. Mr. Bezanson is going west to reside.

Hickey & Nicholson, of Charlottetown, P.E.I., is proposed. The firm has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000 to conduct a general tobacco business on a large scale. E. B. Hartnett, who has severed his connection with the Empire Tobacco, has joined the new firm. The present premises will be enlarged and more machinery will be added to increase the output of goods. At a provisional meeting it has been decided to offer for sale $30,000 of stock.

To Boom Agriculture.

An aggressive campaign is planned for this summer by the Department of Agriculture for Nova Scotia. Every effort will be made to induce the farmers to raise more live stock and produce, and to work the vacant farms. A series of live stock meetings just concluded in King's County were most successful, some of them being attended by over two hundred farmers. These meetings, which were held at Starr's Point, Church Street, North Kingston, Kingston, Berwick and Waterville, were under the auspices of the King's County Farmers' Association. The attractive feature at these meetings, which were addressed by Principal Cumming, of the Agricultural College, was that at each afternoon session the farmers brought various classes of live stock, including dairy cows and beef cows, horses, sheep, etc., which were made the basis of practical demonstrations on the judging of live stock and for stimulating farmers to improve the quality of their stock.

Principal Cumming reports that the general feeling among the farmers whom he met is one of optimism. Prices for various farm products have been so good that farmers are trying to produce more. Moreover, the value of quality in all classes of farm products has become so impressed that everyone is talking about methods of growing cleaner fruit, better breeds of cows and more marketable horses. The County Farmers' Associations are doing a magnificent work to encourage this sentiment. Agriculture will receive more attention from the Government this year than ever before and $66,100 will be expended for this purpose, which is an increase of nearly $12,000 over last year.

NOT TO BE TRUSTED WITH CASH.

The Michigan Tradesman, in commenting upon a letter published in its columns on the subject of C. H. Raymond, the fraudulent and self-appointed representative of The Canadian Grocer to whom the attention of our readers has already been drawn, says: "We deem it our duty to warn the trade against this man as a protection to itself in case he should ever undertake to victimize any of its readers. He was never employed by The Tradesman and has never represented this paper a single moment. Members of the staff have made him temporary loans from time to time during the past twenty years, but the advances have proved to be permanent investments instead of loans. Raymond has been employed in the past by The Michigan Merchant (Saginaw), Detroit Commercial, Detroit Grocer and Butcher, and other short-lived publications of a questionable character. He has never, so far as The Tradesman's information goes, been connected with a first-class publication—with the knowledge and consent of the publisher. He was many years ago connected with Proctor & Gamble, but failed to hold that position long."

CHECKING OF FREIGHT BILLS.

This subject of very great interest to the retailer and wholesaler is taken up in the April number of the Hardware Dealers' Magazine by A. D. Allen. There is a good deal of friction caused between consignor, consignee, and transporter, by dilatory checking of freight bills and by neglect to check them. Mr. Allen clearly illustrated his ideas by the citing of an instance directly connected with the hardware company in which he was interested.

Early last fall his company made a shipment of high-class guns to one of their customers six hundred miles distant. The consignee had several times objected to paying the freight bill and finally stated after enquiries being made by the consignors that the guns were rusty. He had opened the boxes in the freight shed and found them in bad condition. The goods were returned to the consignors, with unpaid freight charges, together with accumulated storage charges, which had been unpaid. The consignors were unable to collect any damage charges from the railroad because no expense bill had been filled out with the damage noted. If the consignee had requested the station agent to write on the face of the expense bill, "badly damaged by rust," the consignors, or having the goods shipped back to them, would have been able to make a full collection of damage charges from the railroad company.

As Mr. Allen truly says, railroad companies are essentially carriers. That is what they exist for. They are not for a moment to be held responsible for differences between consignor or consignee, caused by neglect on the part of either of the latter. He said, "We know of no road that is not reasonable in the matter of settling claims based on an expense bill marked in accordance with facts as stated in the claim."

A great advantage could be gained if consignees would be insistent in their demand that railroad agents write on the face of their expense bills that damage has been done and, if necessary, a description of the damage sufficiently detailed to convince the claims office just what the damage is and that theirs is the responsibility. If the consignee would do that and then accept his shipment it would only be necessary to return the goods to the shipper, attaching the expense bill so marked. Such a simple precaution would prevent friction between consignor and transporter and put the consignor and consignee on more amicable terms.

PINEAPPLE TRUST BLOCKED.

From Singapore the following dispatch reaches the London Times:

"The negotiations for cornering the pineapple market are proceeding. The Chinese exporters, who are chary of committing themselves, contemplate, if the trust terms are unfavorable, a counter move by fixing the market rate so as to improve prices. The possibility of success for the combination is doubtful. The amount involved in the Singapore trade is $3,250,000 (about $1,850,000 gold.)"

A later dispatch was as follows:

"After a prolonged meeting the Chinese packers have decided against the proposal of a European export firm to form a pineapple trust. It was agreed to meet weekly in order to fix prices."

Too Expensive For My Business !

SYSTEM THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Any retailer who says that about Business Systems, is laboring under a delusion.

The size of a business is the factor that determines the cost of installing Business Systems.

Business Systems are, proportionately, just as much an economy for the smallest retail store as for the largest factory.

* * * * * *

In different businesses, Business Systems are designed to fit different ends.

In your business, Mr. Retailer, Business Systems, instead of being "too expensive," are time savers and an actual economy.

You can understand why a system that posts your books and writes out your bills at the same time, is economical, can't you ?

That's only one of the things Business Systems will do for you.

A Guarantee that is Worth Something

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

is printed and packed in every box of SUN PASTE Stove Polish. Our guarantee stands at par because all you have to do is to notify us if any of our SUN PASTE is found defective in any way and we do the rest. It is no surprise to us, however, that so many thousands of storekeepers are selling our SUN PASTE year in and year out with never a defective tin. We make the goods right. That is the kind of Paste Polish you find it worth while to push.

jars and packages are dainty in appearance and look well on your shelves. Buyers are often influenced by the outside appearance of the packages and it is to your benefit to stock only those goods which are contained in dainty and attractive packages, providing of course you can rely upon the quality of the goods inside. With C. & B. goods the superior appearance of the jars, glasses, etc., is merely an indication of the superior quality of what is inside, and you can rely on every consumer finding that the goods in every way come up to their appearance. C. & B. on our wrappers is a guarantee of the quality of the contents.

A special window display of C. & B. goods is sure to attract attention and custom. Why not put one in your window to-day?

Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World

Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claims as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence invited.

OUR NAME YOUR GUARANTEE

"CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited"

Reputation

That word means more to the grocer than to any other merchant on earth. People may buy inferior boots and shoes, they will buy shoddy clothes; but when it comes to groceries they demand

Purity Wholesomeness Quality

These words have controlled our business, because we were just as anxious about our reputation as any grocer could be. While this goes far towards explaining the popular demand for there are other reasons for the superiority of the popular brand which some merchants may overlook. Details, which other canners consider of no consequence, receive careful attention, and fruit and vegetables canned in our factory are never clear of the scrutiny of an expert until they are sealed up in the air-tight cans. Perhaps we do take extraordinary precautions, but the fame of and its popularity demand that much—no more, no less. Mr. Grocer! You know the women of Canada would not be so united in their insistence for Old Homestead Brand of canned goods if it were only a good brand. The demand for Old Homestead goods goes on increasing because the brand is incomparable.

OLD HOMESTEAD BRAND

Have you mailed your test order?

The Old Homestead Canning Co.

PICTON, ONTARIO

From a Purely Business Standpoint

Substitution is Dangerous

BLACK—GREEN—MIXED

When a customer tells you that she wants "SALADA" don't imagine it's the result of mere fancy.

She knows she wants it, and she knows why.

You may succeed in substituting once or even twice but the idea remains in her head. You may smother the idea for a time, but you can't drive it out, and if you hesitate to supply the demand, the natural inference is that you have a mercenary motive, and that in order to get "the best tea on the market" she must change her grocer, and this is what she invariably does.

Can you grasp what this loss of trade and prestige means to you in the course of a year? And, can you afford it? THINK THIS OVER.

A Cleaner That Cleans.

St. George's Baking Powder

Mrs. Rorer, the famous Food Expert, said recently: "The stingiest people I know have stopped buying 'cheap' foods . . . they are buying the best to be had."

Your customers don't take long to decide that a pound of sugar, half sand, at 5c., is more expensive than a pound of pure sugar at 8c.

And they won't hesitate in deciding that St. George's Baking Powder, with its 99.90% pure Cream of Tartar, is less expensive than Baking Powders containing "Commercial" Cream of Tartar which has 10% to 15% lime and other adulterants in it. Yet "Commercial" is the next best—many worse.

Most of your customers have likely figured it out by this time—for they've probably read our advertising—could hardly miss it—and they'll be glad to get St. George's, which is guaranteed to you and to them.

St. George's is the best Baking Powder that chemistry can evolve.

We've tested it every way.

MONTREAL TO PROSECUTE SHIPPERS OF SALMON

Hygiene Committee and Law Department Against it but the City Council Decided to Get After the People Responsible Under the Federal Law.

The Hygiene Committee of the Montreal City Council, acting on the advice of the law department, decided at its meeting last week to go no further with the investigation in connection with the bad salmon shipped from Toronto.

This decision, however, did not meet with the concurrence of the Montreal City Council.

At a later meeting of council the aldermen decided that the parties guilty of shipping to Monteal the decomposed salmon should be prosecuted, and the city attorney has been notified to go ahead with the prosecutions.

After the report of the health committee on the matter was read, there was considerable discussion. Some were in favor of dropping the whole thing while others wished to go ahead and punish those who were guilty of sending the putrid fish to Montreal. Finally it was decided by a resolution that action should be taken. Ald. Ward asked if the city were sure that the salmon was really bad so that there would not be trouble if it were found impossible to prove that the fish was decomposed Ald. Sadler said that there surely were not grounds for any fear on this score The city would be in a nice position if, after instituting action, they were unable to proceed with the case because of inability to prove the bad state of the salmon.

Seen by The Canadian Grocer, City Attorney Ethier said that he did not know just what would be his plan of action in prosecuting the guilty parties. He said that it was possible the salmon was tinned in British Columbia when decomposed and shipped to Toronto and then to Montreal without parties in the latter cities knowing anything about its state. He would have to make considerable inquiry before he could say what he would do. It would be necessary to act under the federal law.

There was some talk in Montreal grocery circles about the real danger in the salmon being in the preservatives said to have been used in putting up the fish. The Grocer, upon investigation, found that, according to the city analyst's report, the salmon was simply decomposed and the danger lay in the almost certain chance of ptomaine poisoning.

Committee's Report.

At a meeting of the Hygiene Committee Alderman Dagenais and Levy, the special committee appointed to look into the matter, pointed out that even if the shippers were found, and it was proved they knew of the salmon's condition, they could not be prosecuted or punished further than to the extent of a $50 fine. The report submitted by the sub-committee gave particulars as to the seizing of the salmon and its confiscation. It reads:

"That in an interview with Mr. Butler, representative of Messrs. Suckling & Co., auctioneers, they found that the salmon in question was shipped to Montreal from Toronto, Ont., on the 5th April last; that the goods were shipped by Mr. J. K. S. Donaldson, of Toronto, delivered in this city on the 10th of April to Suckling & Co. by the Canadion Pacific Railway Company, and offered for sale on the 12th April last.

"That the Food Inspection Department was notified by Alderman Gallery that the said foodstuffs were to be sold on the aforementioned date. That, at once, Mr. Grenier, one of the food inspectors, was directed to make an inspection of the goods. He found on examining some of the samples that the food was in a state of decomposition.

"That 24 tins of the salmon were brought to the city analyst, Mr. M. L. Hersey, who certified that the contents were in a state of decomposition, and in his opinion were 'unsafe for human food.'

"Upon his first inspection of the goods, Inspector Grenier seized them, and, after their condemnation by the city analyst, he confiscated them and sent them to the city garbage incinerator to be destroyed.

Second Samples Worst Quality.

"In the meantime a Mr. Henry was introduced to the Food Inspection Department as an expert in the matter of canned salmon by Messrs. Suckling & Co., whereupon a new set of samples were submitted to the city analyst in the presence of the said expert and were found to be of worse quality than the other samples.

"That this sub-committee is not in a position to state that the said Donaldson, with criminal intent, sent the consignment to Montreal. The Sucklings were only agents.

53,654 Tins Destroyed.

"That the total number of tins was 53,654. That it is estimated by the officers of the Food Inspection Department that 90 per cent. of the canned salmon was unfit for human food, according to the samples examined.

"That a certain number of the tins bore no labels; but labels for canned salmon were found on the premises of the auctioneers, which did not indicate who the manufacturers were.

"That they annex to this report a letter from the general freight agent of the C.P.R. Co., a copy of the 'Bill of Lading,' a letter from the medical health officer of Toronto, Dr. Sheard, in reply to an enquiry to him by this sub-committee;

Auctioneers Paid Incineration.

"And that on the 10th April last, the Mr. Butler, hereinbefore mentioned, paid the cost of transportation and incineration of the said goods. That your sub-committee had an interview with Mr. Ethier, city attorney, on the 1st of May, on this matter, and they submitted to him his report, and requested him to give an opinion in writing on the question. Such opinion is attached to this report."

In his letter, the city attorney said: "Our department came to the conclusion that a warrant could be issued only under the federal law respecting the sale of decayed and adulterated food. Under this law, if the accused is charged with selling decayed food and food that is unfit for eating, and is found guilty, he is liable to a fine of $50. This law also provides that if he did not know or could not have reasonably known that the food he was selling was unfit, he should be acquitted.

"We came to the conclusion that the prosecuted party would certainly strive to prove, and would probably succeed in proving, that he did not know the food was decayed and unfit, and that he could not have reasonably known. Further, seeing that it would be necessary to take proceedings against a man in another province, we came to the conclusion that on the whole it would be better to simply advise the adoption of measures to collect the amount of expense incurred in destroying the food."

From the report of the committee it will be seen that 90 per cent. of the salmon was estimated unfit for human consumption. The auctioneers, it will be noticed paid the cost of transportation and incineration of the food.

GROCERY CLERKS FOOD FAIR.

The members of the Montreal Grocery Clerks' Association are working hard on the Pure Food Fair which they are to hold this summer, the dates being July 1 to 7.

It is the intention of the clerks to make the affair a great success. Mr. Poirier, the treasurer, reports excellent progress, the manufacturers already approached being very glad to take spaces at the fair.

The Montreal Stadium, corner Duluth avenue and St. Hubert street, will be the seat of activity during the show.

The committee in charge consists of: A. Lacroix, president; O. Dionne, secretary; J. B. E. Poirier, treasurer; J. O. Levesque, assistant secretary, and A. Quesnel, assistant treasurer.

Full information may be obtained from the treasurer, 74 Notre Dame St. east, Montreal.

HONDURAS BANANAS.

The exports of bananas to the United States from the San Pedro district of Honduras during 1906 amounted to 2,347,902 bunches, including the estimated number of "seven-hand" bunches; also 1,980,183 bunches of "eight hands" and upward, called "payables." The number of ships engaged was 210, and the value in silver of the fruit at the side of the railroad was $1,173,951.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

BELLEVILLE.

For some time past numerous complaints have reached the local police office that a number of grocers in the outlying portions of the city were in the habit of breaking the by-law by selling tobacco and cigarettes without taking out the $10 license which the law states must be done before cigars, cigarettes, cut tobacco or cigarette tobacco can be legally sold. In consequence of these complaints Chief Newton some time ago detailed a plain clothes man to look into the matter, and, as a result, a couple of grocers were apprehended in breaking the law. They pleaded guilty and after a closeted consultation with the chief they were allowed to go with a warning after promising to take out the necessary license. One of the offenders stated that he did not sell $10 worth of cigarettes in a year but found it necessary to do so in order to keep certain customers. The police say that if any more complaints are received and the guilty ones caught they will suffer the full penalty of the law as they have all been notified of the provisions of the said by-law.

As a result of the recent snowstorm the market was very slimly attended and all classes of merchants reported the dullest Saturday in many months. What produce was brought in by those venturesome enough to brave the elements received high prices and their offerings were soon gobbled up by the buyers. Fresh eggs were 17c. to 20c., an advance of two to four cents, whereas the reduction should have been that much according to the same date last year. Butter was also scarce and sold from 26c. to 30c., and the backward spring will tend to keep it at this price for some time.

The Belleville Cheese Board, one of the largest in eastern Ontario, held their annual meeting and election of officers on May 4th, and despite the bad weather there were about fifty members present, representing factories from the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland. Judging from the prices at which cheese has started off it is no wonder the farmers are elated, and as this is one of the richest dairying districts in Canada it means that a lot of money will be divided among them this fall. This fact, also, is good news to the merchants, as this city depends a great deal upon the farming community. Although the factories have just nicely started several hundred boxes of white cheese were boarded on Saturday and all sold at the tidy price of 12 5-16c. per pound—considered very high for so soon after the opening. The officers who will govern the board this year are: D. H. Young, president; Alex. White, 1st vice-president; John Miller, 2nd vice-president, and D. J. Fairchild, secretary-treasurer. The board meets in the city council chamber each Saturday at 1.30.

The readers of The Canadian Grocer in this city, and they are numerous, all speak very highly of the excellent edition gotten out last week and especially the Montreal Exhibition of Groceries. The illustrations were remarkably clear and distinct, the reading matter interesting and taken altogether it was an issue of which those instrumental in producing it deserve very great credit.

LONDON.

W. Hays, having found it impossible to perform the duties of secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association for another year, has resigned and W. E. Vanderveer has been elected in his stead. The duties of the office are becoming more onerous each year and it is felt that Mr. Vanderveer will prove a most efficient official. He will be required to see that all the members live up to their undertakings, particularly the agreement calling for the closing of grocery stores at 6.30 every evening except Saturdays, which, it is said, has frequently been violated. A salary goes with the office, of course.

John Garvey, one of London's leading wholesale grocers, has been elected president of the Irish Benevolent Society—a position which to reach is the height of the London Irishman's ambition.

Ridgetown is to have a big canning factory, and without delay. This decision was arrived at yesterday, when the ratepayers, by a vote of 425 to 8, passed a by-law granting encouragement to a company to establish such an industry in the town. Work on the necessary buildings is to be commenced on Monday next and pushed with all possible haste. The capacity of the factory will be between 80,000 and 100,000 cans per day, and if, as is expected, the buildings are completed by August 1st, the company will be able to begin operations in time for the corn,tomato, peach, pear and plum crops. The sum of $1,000 per week will be paid in wages when the factory is running at full capacity. According to the by-law, the company will receive a loan of $10,000 for 12 years without interest, to be repaid at the rate of $1,000 per year commencing at the end of two years. They are also given a free site of three acres of land, with fixed assessment at $5,000 per year for a term of twelve years. In return, the company are to erect buildings of the value of not less than $25,000 and to employ an average of 75 hands per day for at least eight months during each year. The town is secured by a first mortgage on the plant for the amount of the loan, $10,000. To carry the by-law required three-fifths of the votes on the list, but they did better than that, the result showing 101 majority over that number. Ridgetown is situated in the best fruit-growing section of western Ontario, and is admirably located for an industry of this kind. It is also the great bean-growing region of Ontario, and it may be taken for granted that that vegetable will form one of the chief articles to be "put up" by the new cannery. Whether or not this company will enter the combine remains to be seen.

Speaking of the canning business recalls to mind that a prominent canner from west of London, who is not in the combine, was in the city the latter part of last week endeavoring to secure an agent to sell direct to retailers. According to his story, although his goods are admittedly equal to any in the market, he could not induce wholesalers to handle them, as, being out of the trust, they are regarded as outlawed.

OTTAWA.

The week before last was a busy one with the executive of the local grocers' association. On Wednesday, April 24, their social evening, which took the form of an "at home," tendered by the newly elected officers, was held. The committee made excellent arrangements, which were carried out in good order and much to the satisfaction and enjoyment of those present. Each member of the association had the privilege of bringing a business friend, the idea being to create a good feeling with the wholesalers and other merchants. The programme was a lengthy one, consisting of an opening selection by Tippin's orchestra, a reading by Hy. Walters, president Retail Merchants; song, Master Geo. Crawford; recitation, P. Brunner; song, Ed. Bambrick; piano selection, Master Johnny Lynn; song, J. Post; Irish jig Ed. and Basil Bambrick; selection, orchestra; God Save the King. President Ford was in charge. An intermission for refreshments was held during the presentation of the programme, which helped to display the hospitality of the grocers to perfection.

The early closing of stores in Ottawa is being observed remarkably well. Most merchants say they are well pleased and are doing as much business as ever with far more satisfaction. One particular point about the change in hours is the fact of a number of grocers adopting regular hours for the delivery of goods, thus educating the public to order in time to suit the merchants as well as themselves. This is evidently a good system for all grocers to adopt.

Messrs. Ford, Prevost, Johnson and Ellis attended the Exhibition of Groceries in Montreal week before last, spending Monday and Tuesday amongst the manufacturers and wholesalers, as well as at the Arena where the exhibit was given; it being the intention of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association to hold an exhibition in the near future provided satisfactory arrangements can be made. Everywhere the Ottawa delegation went they were received with pleasure and after explaining their proposition, which, by the way, is to be a reasonable one for the exhibitors, they were promised by all that if the Ottawa show is to be held that they would be glad to come. The committee will report favorably to the general meeting of the association on Wednesday the 8th, when, no doubt, a final decision concerning the matter will be arrived at.

The Ottawa branch of the Retail Merchants' Association met in the Board of Trade rooms, Elgin street, on Friday, April 26, and elected officers for the ensuing year, appointed delegates to the coming convention of the association in Hamilton, July 2nd, 3rd and 4th; received reports from the treasurer and secretary, and passed an important resolution regarding the industrial question of the City of Ottawa.

President Hy. Walters was re-elected and other officers elected were: Vice-president, G. W. Shouldis, L. N. Poulin; treasurer, Jas. Mundy; secretary, H. C. Ellis (re-elected); delegates to Hamilton: Hy. Walters, H. C. Ellis.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $68 on hand. The secretary's report gave a resume of all important work during the year. The resolution regarding industries was to the effect that the Retail Merchants' Association be represented on the Industrial Committee appointed by the city council, with a view to giving prompt attention to all propositions by manufacturers desiring to locate in Ottawa. The retailers feel they are more vitally interested than all others, and when they see very little energy displayed by a committee not particularly interested—who let propositions slip through their fingers—they mean to be in a position where they can take a hand in the negotiations.

An action has been started to quash the grocers' early closing by-law recently passed by the city council. D. Halliday, grocer, of Laurier Ave. east, contends that the by-law was put through under a mistaken impression on the part of many people who signed the petition. In his application he says:

(1) The by-law was not passed within a month from the time of receiving the petition asking it.

(2) The council improperly refused to consider the petition of those who wished to withdraw their names from the original petition.

(3) The petition was not signed by three-fourths of the bona fide occupants of such stores, and, further, many signatures were improperly obtained.

(4) The council acted under the erroneous impression that it was imperative to pass the by-law upon the receipt of the petition.

The question came up for consideration at the last sitting of the court on Saturday, but was adjourned for one week by mutual consent. It is doubtful, no matter which way the above case goes, whether it will have any effect on the hours of closing, as so many who were opposed to the change find it a blessing.

E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants, spent a couple of days in the city last week interviewing the Government in connection with the Co-operative Stores Bill. It has been decided to leave this bill over for another session and in the meantime it behooves the merchant to get busy and do all in his power to stop the passage of it. Your corespondent would recommend the merchants to secure a copy of the evidence given before the Committee of the House, and then they will find matter which will surprise them, one clause of the evidence, as given by the Deputy Minister of Labor, Mr. Mackenzie King, being to the effect that his idea was to do away with the "middle man," a very laudable object for an employe of the Government to be advancing!

CHATHAM.

F. Charland, representing the Dominion Department of Agriculture, has been in this vicinity lately for the purpose of establishing a number of experimental tobacco plots among Kent and Essex growers. The object is understood to be the encouragement of the growth of finer grades of tobacco in preference to the well known Burley.

The railway committee of the local board of trade recently decided to present a memorial to the Dominion Railway Commission protesting against the new form of bill of lading, permission to adopt which the various railways are now endeavoring to secure. It is felt that the new form practically relieves the railways of all liability.

There is a movement on foot among local merchants to close their places of business at six o'clock every evening except Saturday during the months of July and August. The matter will be dealt with at the next meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association.

R. J. Broad has resigned his position in Joseph Capman's butcher shop in order to accept a post as traveling salesman for the Canadian Packing Co., of London. Mr. Broad leaves to assume his new duties some time this week. During the two and a half years he has been here, Mr. Broad has made a host of friends, all of whom cordially join in wishing him every success in his new field.

Death of Mrs. Snook.

There passed away at the public general hospital here, on Thursday, May 2, Caroline, widow of the late Thos. Snook. Mrs. Snook had reached the advanced age of 77 years, and was one of Chatham's earliest pioneers. A native of Wiltshire, England, she married in the Old Country, coming to New York when 22 years of age. From New York Mr. and Mrs. Snook came to Chatham 52 years ago.

The late Thos. Snook, who passed away in 1898, was for upwards of 40 years actively identified with the business interests of Chatham. He founded and for more than 30 years successfully conducted the business which is still conducted by his son, E. R. Snook. Another son, Frank, is also engaged in the grocery business in Chatham, while two sons reside in Detroit.

During her long life the late Mrs. Snook took an active interest in charitable and religious undertakings, and was one of those mainly instrumental in establishing the Home of the Friendless.

The funeral, which took place on Sunday, May 5, to Maple Leaf cemetery, was largely attended, Rev. W. L. Rutledge, pastor of Park street Methodist church, officiating.

New Canning Factory.

Ridgetown is to have a canning factory. So the electors decided with surprising unanimity when, on Monday, April 29th, a by-law giving certain concessions to a proposed company was submitted for their approval. Out of 433 votes cast, 425 were in favor of the by-law.

The town is to loan the company $10,000 for twelve years, repayable after two years in annual $1000 instalments. In addition the company receive a free three-acre site, and their assessment is fixed at $5,000 for the term of the loan. They are to spend $25,000 on their building and plant, and to employ not less than 75 hands daily during eight months of the year. The town is secured by a first mortgage of $10,000 on the property.

Work has already commenced on the new factory, which the company hope to have in operation by the first of August in time for this season. Its capacity is estimated at from 80,000 to 100,000 cans daily.

Egg Question.

The egg question is proving a rather difficult one for the local grocers just now.

Formerly, the outside egg dealers sent their representatives through the country to the various stores, where they were accustomed to stock up with eggs, shipping their collections from the nearest station. Now, however, the dealers have discontinued the practice, and instead purchase direct from the farmers.

As a result of the new scheme the grocer is nipped both ways. The dealers pay the farmers the same prices as the grocers pay. Hence, there is no incentive for the farmers to deal with the tradesmen in town, and as a consequence there is a certain falling off in the amount of business, farmers coming to town more rarely than they used to.

In the second place the grocers have no outlet for their surplus stock of eggs. The outside dealers won't purchase and the local demand is often not sufficient to consume the entire stock. For obvious reasons it is impolitic to refuse to buy from the farmers.

The subject was discussed at considerable length at the meeting of the grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association last week. No solution of the difficulty has as yet presented itself, however.

Peddlers.

Another problem discussed at the last grocers' meeting was that of peddlers. This is an old difficulty with which merchants in all lines have had to contend, but it is probable that the R. M. A. will take some concerted action in the matter in the near future. The grocers are chiefly affected through the medium of the tea and coffee peddlers, some of whom do a thriving business in this vicinity. The county council has passed, and from time to time tried to enforce, a by-law which levies a small tax on these itinerants. There is also a by-law on the city's books which is an exact copy of the Ottawa by-law dealing with transient traders, and which, it is understood, would, if enforced, reach the offenders.

The local magistrate, however, in connection with one prosecution held that the by-law, in so far as it attempted to apply to parties selling goods of any kind from sample, went beyond the powers conferred on the city by statute. As a result, he refused to convict.

There is talk in the R. M. A. of having the city prosecute in a case, with a view to making a test of the matter.

The grocers' section of the R. M. A. has fixed the second Tuesday in each month as its regular meeting night.

KINGSTON.

The road to honor lies through the valley of toil and the valley is full of grocers struggling, yelling, crying, fighting—for what? Dollars and cents? Well, if they don't make their fortunes they will gain honor and humility. Anyone can start a grocery. You can open up one for $50—for the wholesalers are so anxious for trade they will back up anyone.

They open up, and business is fine for a time until the sly old dead-beats who know the green ones and how to approach them, run up bills, and it's only a short time when Mr. Newman wears a troubled look—the look that don't wear off. But he can sell out, and get something for his good will. There are always ten fools waiting to buy. Congested freight is bad enough, but congested trade is worse. I know travelers looking around for stores for country merchants who become dissatisfied with village trade and want to get to the cities. All these travelers' care is to get the order. They know in their hearts there are half too many fishing for trade now in every city. Somebody has got to go to the wall. Some of the grocers here are sending their clerks out looking for trade who, a few years ago, had all the trade they could attend to come to them. Storekeeping is no good when you have to send out begging for orders.

Price cutting is ruinous to trade in general, and no good trade is gained by it. There is a certain class follow after bargains, but they don't remain as regulars. They nibble off the bait and go back to their accustomed quarters where they get good honest value. No, Mr. Grocer, you can't get good people that way. Just quietly do what is honest and right and you will get the confidence of the people. That's the secret.

You may get a rush of trade by giving coupons and plates, cups and saucers, tables, chairs, etc., but you are working for nothing and when you take stock you will find it out to your sorrow. You can't sell a horse and throw in a waggon unless you are dealing with a drunken man or a fool.

I heard a number say they were going to try the Guelph correspondent's cure for sleeplessness by using rice for supper in future. What kind is best—B.C., Japan, Patna or Carolina? I'll tell you what George, the druggist, told me. I have bilious attacks. He said: "You are run down; don't expect to build your system up by physic, kassagra tablets and pills. Take a pint of milk so hot you have to sip it, at bed time, and you will feel different in a short time. Horseback riding is a sure cure for all complaints, but keep it up; don't go out once and get sore and discouraged. Get over the soreness and you will feel as strong as a cowboy."

James Craig, agent for McCormick & Co., biscuit manufacturers, London, reports increasing trade. His quarters are getting too small. He has a first-class man on the road, Mr. Granger; the kind that is straightforward and no sharp or mean trade tricks in him.

The cuts in last issue of The Grocer brought the Montreal food show before every subscriber, and many, I trow, regretted not having attended the same. Too bad the illustrations hadn't come before the exposition. It has been a great education to those who were fortunate enough in attending.

Frank Brown, at one time head clerk in Henderson's grocery, but now of Farnham, Que., met with a serious accident on the C.P.R., of which service he has been a conductor for some time. He had his foot crushed so badly that amputation was necessary. He has the deepest sympathy of his many friends here. Chas. Porter, of Fenwick,, Hendry & Co., is Mr. Brown's father-in-law.

Geo. Bridon, at one time a grocer at corner Barrie and Queen streets, is dead. Four years ago, while on the steamer Toronto, he was attacked with paralysis from which he never recovered, but was compelled to go around with a stick.

He leaves a wife and two sons and one daughter. His eldest son is entry clerk in Geo. Robertson's wholesale grocery.

Kingston's market is dwindling away and soon the grocers will have full sway. Obnoxious by-laws and market tolls killed it, and also the fact of banks starting branches in country places all tends to keep the farmers away.

What will we do? Is there no superannuation fund or home for broken-down grocers? Will Andy Carnegie overlook the matter? If he does, I suppose, it will be over the hills to the poor house and eat the cheap food the tenders call for—lowest tender accepted, pea coffee, etc.

WOODSTOCK.

The first meeting for this season of the Woodstock Cheese Board was held last Wednesday afternoon, when organization was effected. Woodstock is situated in the centre of an important cheese district and many thousands of boxes change hands here in the course of the season. The April make of cheese was decidedly small. This, it is believed, is due to the fact that the cold weather of the winter extended through the entire month. Eleven and a half was bid for the small quantity offered for sale, but there were no sellers. Prospects point to a good season, however, in the cheese industry in this district.

There is some hitch in the negotiations between the city and the promoters of the canning factory which it was proposed to bring to Woodstock, the condition being a loan from the corporation. This is unfortunate, as such an institution would be of great benefit to the farmers of the diserict, in furnishing a home market for any quantity of fruit they might desire to raise. When the proposition was first broached even those who are opposed to loans to industries on principle, entered enthusiastically into the idea of the canning factory, and the regret if anything happens to put an untimely end to the negotiations will be general.

The local Italian fruit vendors are beginning to make their trips through the county, in which they dispose of large quantities of fruit to rural merchants and grocers in the villages.

The council is considering the advisability of building a cement walk around the market building to replace the present wooden walk. Woodstock has one of the finest markets in western Ontario, and each Saturday it is attended by many hundreds of residents of the county and city.

Jones Bros., who have for some time carried on the business of cigar manufacturing, find their present quarters too small, and have commenced the erection of a new building. It will be located on Dundas street, in the central part of the city, and will cost $5,000. The street floor will be utilized as a tobacco store and bowling alley and pool room; the two upper ones for manufacturing purposes. The building will be completed in August.

A. E. Sage, east end grocer, left last week on a trip to Los Angeles, California. He will combine pleasure and business, and will be absent for a considerable time.

R. F. Parkinson, who for the past three years has been business manager of The Sentinel Review, leaves this month for Montreal to become advertising manager for the McDougall publications. Mr. Parkinson developed for the S.-R. among the grocers of the city a very considerable advertising patronage, and good results were secured. He is a hustling young journalist, and many friends will watch with interest his future.

E. H. Snyder, who had been a township councillor, reeve of his township, county councillor and county auditor died at Burgessville last week. He was an extensive grower of strawberries and his goods were shipped to many parts of the country.

"A very large business has never been done in Woodstock in canned meats," said Fred Millman, a prominent grocer, to your correspondent the other day. He added that the business, such as it was, had been injured to a certain extent by the recent "exposures" of the conditions in the manufacture of that class of goods. Now, however, trade was picking up a little, and was gradually becoming normal. People are forgetting that once they vowed never again to let any meat put up in a tin enter the sacred precincts of their pantries.

Trade in the multitudinous breakfast food preparations is not what it once was. Since the manufacturers have left off their very extensive advertising the retail sale of the goods has declined. A certain proportion of the customers whom the advertising campaigns secured of course, became permanent patrons of some particular food, but many gradually reverted to the old reliable oatmeal. All of which goes to show the results of a consistent advertising campaign.

LONDON.

The Canada Spice and Grocery Company, one of London's growing concerns, finding the premises they have occupied since starting in business to have become altogether too small to meet their requirements, have moved into those recently vacated by Messrs. Green, Swift & Co., clothing manufacturers, on King street. With more room and improved facilities the Canada Spice & Grocery Company are now better than ever able to meet the growing demands of the trade. The men composing the company are hustlers in every sense of the term, and seem to make a success of whatever they take hold of.

One of the most enterprising retail grocery firms in the city is that of Messrs. T. A. Rowat & Co., whose store, on Dundas street, is one of the most attractive and up-to-date, as well as best stocked establishments of its kind to be found anywhere. The firm's trade has been growing rapidly of late, which has induced them to branch out and open a store in South London, in the premises until recently occupied by Mr. Frank Robinson.

The Trebilcock building, in South London, which some time ago was badly damaged by fire, has been purchased by Mr. John Goodge, who intends fixing it up as a grocery store, the purpose for which it was used before the fire.

Hr. Harry Ranahan, the popular president of the Retail Grocers' Association, is wearing a glad smile these days. The secret is that he is to be married, and that very shortly, too, and he is receiving the best of wishes in advance from his numerous friends.

The collector for the Retail Merchants' Association has written the Retail Geocers' Association, with the view of having the members of the latter place their accounts in his hands. The local grocers have little use for the Merchants' Association, and though the former have entertained the present proposition, to the extent of promising consideration at the meeting to be held this week, it is hardly likely that it will be accepted, the members appearing desirous of keeping their business within their own association. At the meeting in question some matters of no little importance are to be discussed.

The London Dairymen's Exchange held its first meeting of the season in the city hall on Saturday afternoon, and incidentally the first cheese market for 1907 was held—that is, if it can be called a market, when there were no offerings. The officers elected for the ensuing year were :

President—S. P. Brown.
Vice-President—J. H. Thomas.
Secretary-treasurer—J. A. Nelles.
Auditor—J. R. Isaac.
Directors—T. F. Boyes, D. Smith, J. W. Symington, T. Ballantyne, Jr., and M. R. Brown.
Western fair representatives—J. R. Isaac and J. A. Nelles.
Next market, Saturday, May 11, at 2.30 p.m.

O.A.C. Work Impractical.

The spring meeting of the Middlesex Beekeepers' Association was held in the city hall on Saturday, with a large attendance of members. W. A. Chrysler, of Chatham, at the morning session, gave an instructive address on the "Distribution of Honey." This was followed by a talk on "Wintering," by R. F. Holterman, of Brantford. Other speakers were A. Laing, of St. Thomas, and Mr. Craig, of Brantford, editor of the Canadian Bee Journal. At the afternoon session the following resolution was adopted :

"That it is the sense of this meeting that while we are desirous and anxious that the experiments in beekeeping should be conducted at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, the work, as now conducted, is valuless, and should be conducted by a competent beekeeper, who would be in touch with the Ontario Beekeepers' Asssociation."

A paper on "Beekeeping," written by an authority on the subject, at the Ontario Agricultural College, was read and condemned all round as incorrect and valueless, the consequence being the adoption of the foregoing resolution. Reports from various parts of the country went to show that there had been a great loss in bees during the past winter. The weather conditions were chiefly responsible for this loss, the late spring being also a factor in the destruction of the insect life.

The officers of the association are :—President, F. J. Miller, London ; vice-president, Mr. Kimball, Byanston ; secretary-treasurer, E. T. Bainard, Lambeth.

MONTREAL.

N. Chartrand, who for years kept a live grocery store on Seigneurs street, has just returned from a trip to the States. Mr. Chartrand recently sold his business to R. Langlois, former traveler for the produce firm of Gunn, Langlois & Co.

Munro & Lloyd is the name of the firm now carrying on business corner St. Catherine and Mackay streets. Formerly this concern was known as D. D. Munro & Co. On May 1 George Lloyd, for the past five years connected with Scroggie's, as manager of their grocery department, went into partnership with Mr. Munro. Mr. Lloyd is not only an experienced practical grocer but also an excellent tea and coffee blender. His Strathcona brand coffees sold very largely at Scroggie's. All his blends will hereafter be sold by the new firm. Both gentlemen are very popular in the trade, and everybody wishes them every success, The Canadian Grocer especially.

NOVA SCOTIA NOTES.

The many friends among the travelers will be sorry to hear that Mrs. D. Muir, of the Spa Hotel, Middleton, N.S., has been confined to her bed for some days. She has the sympathy of all the fraternity, for both she and her husband are very popular with the knights of the grip.

Mr. L. Smith, who represents Morse's teas, has just returned from a very successful trip to Newfoundland.

C. W. Strong, of Wolfville, has sold his grocery business to G. E. Elliott, who will add quite a number of improvements.

Mr. Jas. Morrow has bought out the grocery business of W. Clarke, at Annapolis, N.S.

E. Rowland, the candy man, does a big business for a well known candy house in the Annapolis valley.

H. D. Woodbury, of Kingston Village, carries a very complete line of goods and does a fine business. Mr. Woodbury knows the general store business and knows how to attract trade. He is very popular with the boys on the road.

PETERBOROUGH.

It was great news for Peterboro people generally to learn that the Quaker Oats Company was preparing to start running twenty-four hours a day. For some time the company has only been able to run a twelve-hour shift, and very often not that long. It was impossible to get grain from the west fast enough to keep them running steadily. The company has a very large quantity of oats stored at Fort William, but when the railways were tied up, the mills were in the same condition. With the opening of navigation, however, the traffic situation has been greatly relieved. The big lake freighters have made their way through to the head of Lake Superior, have been loaded with oats, and have started down for the Quaker Oats mills here. The cargoes will be transhipped at Owen Sound and Midland and brought to Peterboro via the Grand Trunk. The first shipment is expected here at the end of the week and the first of next week the mills will start the 24-hour shift. This will mean the employment of about a hundred more hands. The company have on hand now enough orders to keep them running for at least six months.

There is a report that J. John, of Lachute, is about to open a tea store. His principal business, it is said, will be house-to-house canvassing. There is a strong feeling here that this method of obtaining trade should be discontinued, but without a retail organization the grocers are powerless, and can do nothing to protect themselves. In the opinion of many the grocery trade has degenerated and is degenerating from the amount of canvassing done by a large number of its members.

J. G. Hardill, the genial traveler for T. Kinnear & Co., and who resides on McDonald street, is the proud daddy of a thirteen-pound baby boy. It arrived Monday morning in time for breakfast.

Work was started this week at the Peterboro Cereal Co., on the erection of the drive sheds, of which notice was made in these columns some time ago. These sheds will occupy the space at the rear of the mills and will be for the accommodation of farmers bringing in grain or taking away products. They will prove a great convenience to the large country trade of this company and will also add materially to the shed accommodation of the city.

Victory for the Retailers.

The retail merchants have won a great victory over the mayor of the city and a couple of the aldermen, who so strenuously fought to compel all business men to take down their signs and to keep their goods inside the store. For the past three or four weeks deputations have waited upon the council and upon the committee of the whole with the idea of getting the sign by-law amended, but his worship tried hard to defeat their object. The sign by-law is one which was passed in 1879 and has never been enforced, except in extreme cases. Every business man was allowed to have a sign overhanging the street about two feet. But when the present mayor took hold of the reins of office he undertook to enforce the by-law to the letter and would hear of no modification.

He assumed the same attitude in regard to the displaying of goods and the box by-law. The Retail Merchants' Association took the matter in hand and fought it to a finish, with the result that the box by-law was amended to suit them; they are allowed to put up signs eighteen inches over the walk, and they can use twelve inches of the walk on which to display goods.

A deputation, headed by Mr. Routley, the new president of the association, waited on the committee of the whole on Monday night. Several addresses were made and then the deputation retired. The committee fought over the thing for an hour and in the end his worship was turned down and the merchants were given what they asked for. This is one case in which the organization proved its worth. It is only one of many which could be handled as successfully if the association was more active. The merchants are standing in their own light every day they neglect to advance organization.

PERTH.

Perth district has had one of the greatest maple seasons on record. The run of sap lasted for a full month and maple syrup and sugar were offered in large quantities. The retail price in the stores has held at $1 per gallon, but some lots were "peddled" at 80c.

Perth grocers are coming to the front in up-to-date store fixtures. Norman Miller has put in a handsome 10-foot silent salesman, a Dayton computing scale, and has hung out a new awning. Lloyd Jackson has installed a computing and C. A. Farmer a pendulum, scale. Five groceries are using monthly account systems. These systems are great labor savers and a firm that has once used them would hardly go back to the other.

Perth people are experiencing a second winter to day. About 8 inches of snow fell last Saturday and a few cutters made their appearance. This is a record for May 4th.

GROCERY TRADE NEWS OF NEW BRUNSWICK

St. John, N.B., May 6, 07

There was very little movement in the local markets last week. Fresh fish of all kinds are beginning to come in in large quantities now and, in consequence, prices are easier. Gaspereaux are now bringing $1 a hundred wholesale. A few harbor salmon have been caught.

Sugar is firm, granulated being quoted at $4.50 to $4.60 and Austrian, $4.40 to $4.50. Yellows range from $4 to $4.40. Flour is steady and firm. The quotations are: Manitoba, $5.25 to $5.35; Ontario, $4.15 to $4.35.

Lard and clear pork is easy, but domestic pork of all kinds is scarce.

Eggs have again eased off somewhat, but butter remains practically unchanged.

Navigation between P. E. I. and the mainland is now open and trade in this direction is commencing to be felt.

A new wholesale grocery has been started on the south wharf. Louis King, who for nineteen years has been in the employ of Thomas Gorman, has opened a store of his own at 11 and 12 South Wharf, in the quarters recently occupied by H. S. Wallace. From Mr. King's long connection with the grocery trade, he should have a prosperous and successful business.

R. H. Robb, who for many years has been connected with the drug business of Charles McGregor, 137 Charlotte St., has bought the business and will continue it.

Reports from Carleton county are to the effect that the present season has been better than for many years. The prices for farm produce are steadily increasing and farm lands are becoming more valuable. Potatoes are now worth $1.50 a barrel, but there are very few to be had. As previously reported, the growing of potatoes will be gone into on a much larger scale this year than ever before.

Sullivan Brothers, of Woodstock, have decided to sell out their grocery and go west. They have invested in a hotel in Winnipeg and expect to go to the western metropolis in a few weeks.

The Maritime Dairy Company have taken over the management of the Newtown cheese factory for this season. For a number of years the owners have managed the plant themselves.

The King's county farmers are going into the poultry raising industry on a larger scale this year than ever before. The Kinnear Poultry Company, of Sussex, have about 1,500 chickens in their coops at present. This number will be increased to about 5,000 within a short time.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Nappan Creamery Company was held in Chatham on Monday last, and a committee was appointed to try and arrange for the operating of the creamery this summer.

Col. A. J. Markham, formerly of St. John, is in the city on business connected with his recently organized oyster planting company. The company is the West Coast Fishing Company, and has grounds at Esquimalt Harbor, B.C. Shipments of oysters for the beds will be made from Charlottetown, P.E.I., and New Brunswick points.

The schooner Emma E. Whidden arrived here last week from Salt Quay, Turk's Island (B.W.I.) with 10,176 bushels of salt for Charles Colwell, the west end fish dealer.

J. Hunter White was a passenger on the steamer Empress of Britain Saturday. He wil spend six or eight weeks touring the British Islands and France.

F. T. Barbour, of the G. E. Barbour Co., left on the steamer Empress of Britain Saturday for a trip through England. He will be absent about two or three months.

Harry H. Brown has been engaged by Messrs. Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Chicago, as their New Brunswick representative. Mr. Brown, who is very popular on the road, has already entered upon his duties.

Percy Armour, representative for the Maritime Provinces of Lowney's chocolates, was in the city last week.

Robert Hirsch, of Montreal, was in the city last week in the interests of his firm.

Max McCarthy, representing Carritte-Patterson Company, was in Fredericton last week.

U. S. TEA STANDARDS.

The United States Customs Board of Tea Experts at its annual conference has adopted the same standards for 1907 as those which prevailed in 1906, running through twelve numbers, as follows: No. 1, Formosa Oolong; 2, Foochow Oolong; 3, Congou; 4, Ceylon (use for India); 5, Pinsuey green; 6, Country green; 7, Japan pan fired (use for sun dried); 8, Japan basket fired; 9, Japan dust or fannings; 10, Caper (use for scented Orange Pekoe); 11, Canton Oolong; 12, Scented Canton.

Mr. Drinkwater has again commenced general business in his own store at Castleton, after a rest from all trade cares and worries of about two years.

EGGS.

The egg situation is keeping the egg dealers guessing. The market is at a record level for the time of year and is firm. Buying is keen. Some of the largest dealers are said to be among the most aggressive buyers. As high as 16½c. is being paid for eggs in the country. Allowing for shrinkage they cannot be stored and carried for much less than five cents a dozen. That means a cost basis next winter of 22c.

It has been a custom of the egg trade not to invade another man's buying territory. To-day some firms are not observing this rule. The man whose territory is invaded is naturally prepared to go some in order to hold his ground, and competition in buying puts the market up. There may not be much of this; but there is enough to be noticeable.

There is no export business for eggs at present prices. Is the home market enlarging rapidly enough to absorb the product? Certainly the present consumptive demand is very heavy; probably heavier than ever before. Ontario is the great egg-producing province of the Dominion, and Ontario's eggs go to the Yukon in the west, and east to the sea. Montreal firms have regular shippers as far west as Windsor. British Columbia gets some eastern eggs, but the market in the west is somewhat uncertain. Winnipeg takes a good many carloads of Ontario eggs, but last January eggs stored in Toronto for Winnipeg dealers were sold in Toronto as offering a better market than the west.

Is the production of eggs increasing? It is a guess. The impression among the trade in Toronto is that it is not. Yet it was said last year farmers, enthused by high prices—for prices were high last year too—had started many incubators to work. Those chicks ought to be operating now. The backward season is a disconcerting factor. There were almost as many eggs coming forward in March as in April. Had the weather been normal the incubator theory would have been tried out.

It is not strange that egg packers are wondering a little more earnestly than usual what the eggs they are putting away will do for them. The little fellows can't make the market; the big fellows won't stop buying long enough to get it down and the game goes merrily on, while the farmer makes money.

SHORTER HOURS.

All over Canada there is a well developed movement for shorter hours in the grocery store. This must be evident to the readers of the correspondence from all over Canada which appears in The Grocer each week. Progressive grocers will help along this movement with all their might. The grocer needs recreation and change of occupation as much as any man living and if he sticks in his store from 7 a.m. to 8, 9, or 10 p.m., when is he going to vary the monotony? No man can do it and maintain the physical and mental energy, vim, resourcefulness, snap and initiative that make for success. The man who has these qualities for making business zip can well afford to close his store at 6 o'clock, and he'll do more business before six than his sing-song, rut-geared neighbor will do by 10. The good grocer can always get his customers on his side in a good cause like this. There will always be some mean man in a neighborhood who will not join with the rest to improve conditions. The community can be trusted to size things up right and public opinion will be found to operate against the kicker. The men for early closing can afford to do it and let the rest go hang.

RETURNED DRAFTS.

Much is said of the advantage to a merchant of improving and maintaining his business reputation among those to whom he sells. It is also very important that he be jealous of his reputation among those from whom he buys. Because of this we have drawn attention several times recently to the evil of returned drafts. A firm in Montreal have written us as follows:

"It is with satisfaction that we have read your latest article on 'Returned Drafts,' as we consider that the agitation against this evil cannot be overdone. We ourselves have been sufferers so long that we would like to see continued publicity given to the matter, in order that business firms may in time fully realize the great inconvenience and loss that results ro drawers from inconsiderate returning of drafts for trivial excuses. If the grievance is hard to bear from retailers, the annoyance is double when it happens on the part of wholesalers and manufacturers, who from their experience in such matters should know better. We always make a point of notifying drawees from five to seven days previous to depositing our draft, and furthermore on our statement we guarantee to rectify any discrepancies which may be found in the account. Notwithstanding this we frequently have drafts returned with endorsations such as named in your article.

"We hope that firms who are accustomed to paying for their purchases by sight drafts may come to realize that it is by attention to these matters that a good impression is formed of them, and a sound reputation is built up."

No one can read this letter without being convinced of the seriousness of the writer. It's so easy to return a draft, but if merchants before doing so would put themselves in the place of the man at the other end and consider what he will say when he gets it, the returned drafts, at least for trivial causes, would be fewer.

LEMONS.

It looks as though the SS. Fremona's cargo of November-cut lemons may open up in poorer shape than most of the reports have led the dealers to expect. The November crop was, if anything, in excess of the usual quantity, but owing to the high prices obtaining throughout November and December, the lemons were sold as soon as they were brought down from the country, instead obeing put into stock, as is the usual custom, and then shipped by the direct steamers to Canada.

This premature disposal of the fruit has forced the shippers at Messina to disregard their instructions to ship

November-cut lemons by the Canadian steamers, and to substitute fresh lemons in order to fulfil their contracts.

This means that out of the 46,320 boxes of lemons shipped from Messina on the 18th of April a certain proportion must almost inevitably be unfit by the time they reach Montreal, and the probable effect of this, in the opinion of a prominent Toronto importer, will be to greatly stimulate the demand for the later crop of Verdelli lemons. These command a high price at the moment, but in the light of present events, are liable to advance considerably within the next few weeks.

FAKE ADVERTISING.

Programme advertising is usually a fake under the guise of charity, church or some social interest. As it has become a recognized field of activity by some advertising canvassers who buy the "rights."

The only cure for it is for advertisers to positively decline that kind of publicity. Retailers would do well to make common cause against such piratical enterprise.

Some retailers are themselves occasionally guilty of holding up wholesalers on practically the same lines. They are managers of the local fair or other worthy undertakings and levy upon their wholesalers for subscriptions. What interest or profit can a wholesaler is Montreal, Toronto or Hamilton have in the annual fair in Bobcaygeon? Yet some retailers, who are not in business for their health, and know right well the wholesalers are not, have little or no hesitation in making their requests. Business would be improved if all this kind of faking were cut out.

MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE.

Since the organization of retail associations in Canada the proposal to start mutual fire insurance companies to carry the isolated risks of merchants at lower rates than those charged by the old line companies has been a hardy annual at all conventions but little or nothing has ever been accomplished up to the present time.

At the last general meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Western Canada a live committee was appointed to take up this project for the benefit of the western members of the association, and there is now every prospect that something practical will result. Assistant-organizer W. Ledoux has been visiting the merchants throughout the west in the interests of the association during the last two months and he has secured many applications for insurance running into large amounts. With a large amount of business already assured the organization of a company can easily be arranged, and it is certain that at the convention in Winnipeg next July active steps will be taken to carry into effect this long delayed project.

WESTERN POSTAL SERVICE.

Complaints of inadequate and inefficient postal service in Western Canada, are more numerous than ever, and apparently, the Post-office Department does not yet realize the gravity of the situation. These complaints are loudest perhaps from the newer districts, but even in the older towns, along the main line of the C.P.R,. there are constant complaints, and a little investigation or a little actual experience, will show that these complaints are well founded. The Department at Ottawa is so far removed from the scene of the trouble that the officials do not understand the situation, and they fail to realize that special attention is required to ensure an adequate service in the newer Canada that is so rapidly springing up in the country west of the Great Lakes. Western business men say that there will be no permanent relief until another deputy minister is appointed, who will be given a free hand in the opening of new offices in the new towns and in making radical and sweeping changes in the method of handling the mails in some districts. There is no sympathy in the West with a policy which piles up a surplus each year, while the service is becoming more unsatisfactory every day. The slow workings of a red tape official system compel new towns to wait weeks and months, before new post-offices are opened, and the meagre salaries paid the postmasters are responsible for the fact that the service is miserably inefficient in all parts of the West. Officials cannot be expected to do more than they are paid for.

In an effort to reform the service, some business houses and newspapers are trying a new plan. A letter received the other day from the Camrose Mail, Camrose, Alberta, bore the following inscription:—From the Camrose Mail, Camrose, Alberta, Canada. We are working for better freight service. Telegraph service and Postal Facilities on the C.P.R., will you held us? This letter was mailed November 21, when did it reach you? Tell the Camrose Mail."

We do not agree with the suggestion that the C.P.R. is at all to blame for the poor postal service whatever may be the case in regard to the telegraph and freight service. The C.P.R. trains run with fair regularity in the West, giving a service which, taken as a whole, is much superior to the service in Eastern Canada. When letters are delayed for weeks, as they very often are, the fault lies with the Post-office Department, and not with the C.P.R.

ORGANIZATION OF FRUIT INTERESTS.

Advocating a Dominion organization of fruit growers in a recent issue The Canadian Horticulturist says in part:

"Why should there not be a Dominion ruit Growers' Association? There are six provincial fruit growers' associations, all of which meet yearly, all of which receive regular provincial grants, and all of which are accomplishing much valuable work. It seems as though the time has come when the present organizations should be crowned by the formation of an association that will be representative of the fruit growers of the Dominion.

"The Dominion Conference of Fruit Growers, that was held in Ottawa last April, was productive of much good. It demonstrated that there are many matters relating to fruit growing that can be discussed to the best advantage only at a meeting representative of the fruit growers of all the provinces. Although three busy days were spent at the conference, much of the work had to be hurried through without sufficient consideration, while a number of important matters that were down on the program for discussion were not reached. This serves to show the necessity that exists for the holding of regular meetings of the same nature."

There can be no doubt as to the advantage of such an organization. Should it not include the marketing end of the fruit industry? The growers and merchants have each their own problems, but there are many considerations common to both and for the broad treatment of which there must be concerted action. As it appears to us, the cooperation of growers and merchants is essential to the best development of the fruit industry of the Dominion in relation to both domestic and foreign trade.

Canned Fruits—Scarce.

Fish—Revised.

Rice—Lower.

Sugar—Advanced 10c.

Tea—Japan market open.

Butter—Easier.

Montreal, May 9, 1907.

Navigation having opened, wholesalers are very busy with spring trade. Many orders that were held for the opening of the river have been shipped during the past few days. The warehouses of jobbers have been scenes of activity all week. The receipts of imported goods arriving by every steamer adds to the general hustle.

Sugar advanced ten cents since last week. This is the feature of the grocery situation. There is talk in some quarters of still another advance. Canned fruits are very scarce, which keeps trade in this line from being as good as it might be. Molasses is quoted due to arrive at 31c. Trade in this article at present is not at all large. The Japan tea market has opened, a week later than usual, and Canadian representatives are now ready to do business for new crop teas. For other teas, there is nothing to be said except that demand seems to be for the cheaper grades. Dried fruits are quiet. Currants appear to have reached rock bottom. Beans are steady. Coffees are going well. Butter is easier. Rice is lower.

SUGAR—An advance of ten cents has taken place in sugar since last report. There does not seem to be a great deal of buying at the advance. Some talk of still another advance in price. Whether or not it will materialize remains to be seen. A considerable quantity of Scottish sugars are reported due to arrive, a fact which should tend to keep the market from going any higher than it now is.

TEA—Demand is for the low-grade, cheaper teas, and trade is confined principally to these lines. Much interest is being taken in Japan teas, now that the market has opened. The opening this season is a week later than it was last year. One cable received reported the opening price 10 per cent. higher. Quality is said to be good.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — Little trade is being done in dried fruits, although demand is rather more active than it has been for the past few weeks, owing to the opening of navigation. Prices have not altered since last report. It is believed that currants are about as low as it is possible for them to go. Business in this line is small. Raisins are quiet. Valencias appear to be pretty well cleaned up in the States. Nuts are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL — A marked scarcity of canned fruits hampers business in canned goods considerably. There is a good demand for all lines, and it seems that such lines as strawberries, beans and tomatoes, which are not in good supply, are subject to greater demand than the other varieties.

TORONTO — Nothing definitely new appeared in the canned goods market but there is an appreciably better tone, due, apparently, to the backwardness of the season and the possibility of a poor season ahead. It may be just borrowing trouble from the wheat situation. There is better buying, too. The canned fruits are in good demand and vegetables are more active. As yet there are no signs of a shortage, but if the weather continues backward it may prolong the period of heavy consumption. Quotations are unchanged.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS :—

Sugar—Advanced and very strong.
Canned Goods—Better tone.
Butter—Easier.
Eggs—Higher.
Provisions—Prices maintained.
Pineapples—Lower.
Flour—Advanced 20c.

Toronto, May 9, 1907.

The advance in sugar and an appreciable increase in business generally, are the features of the grocery trade this week. The advance in sugar on Monday could not be said to be unexpected or unheralded, though a little slow in coming. Refined advanced another 10 points in New York Wednesday morning and a further advance is by some expected here. An improved tone to the canned goods situation, especially in regard to vegetables, is attributed directly to the backwardness of the season and the suggested possibility of poor crops. The molasses market is very slow. This is the season for jobbers to be buying stocks for next fall; but trade is backward. Some wholesalers are carrying stocks over and they don't like that. There is a good business passing in prunes. Stocks of other dried fruits are in very small compass. Tapioca continues strong.

Provision prices are being maintained, but lard prices are reported weak in spots. Butter is easier, owing to increased receipts, and eggs are firmer because of buying competition. Flour is advanced. The hide market is very dull.

TEA.—Retailers both in Canada and Great Britain are now buying from hand to mouth. One mail advice from London, under date of April 25, states : "It would seem that the high level of values prevailing is resulting in a marked disinclination on the part of retailers to stock beyond their immediate requirements. This fact has apparently had its influence on the auctions, for although a better tone has been noticeable in Ceylon growths, the same can scarcely be said of Indian descriptions, the quotations for which have moved slightly downward. During the next two months, it does not seem reasonable to look for much change in the position." Another advice says : "Teas up to about 8d per lb. have shown a hardening in value to the extent of nearly ¼d per lb."

COFFEE.—The hopes of those who look for an improvement in coffee values are now fixed on the next Brazil crop. The last one is admitted to have been 15,000,000 bags, which is abnormally large. After such a tremendous production, it is asserted that the trees cannot rise to normal for some years. The world's visible on April 1 was 15,397,742 bags and a year ago was 10,747,916 bags. Locally, prices are steady and business is normal.

SUGAR.—Canadian refiners advanced prices 10c Monday evening and the market was generally regarded very strong at that. This feeling was confirmed by a further advance of 10 points for refined in New York on Wednesday morning. There has been considerable retail buying here lately against the strong market. Consumption is not now heavy but the pineapple canning season is nearly here and there are a good many prunes being eaten just now.

The Canada Sugar Refining Co. is introducing an innovation in the form of a 20-lb. white cotton bag. Sugar put up in this way costs 10c extra.

The raw sugar market continues to advance. Willett & Gray at the end of last week, reviewing the market, said : "Cuba continues to control the position of the sugar markets of the world, and as it becomes more evident that requirements for United States consumption will be largely in excess of that crop and other nearby cane crops, the market values continue to increase both here and abroad.

"Europe gained from 9s 5½d to 9s 6d for beet sugar, while for the future months a greater gain is made, beet for delivery next February being held at 9s 7½d, notwithstanding that Mr. Licht reports weather favorable for field work.

"The Cuban sellers are gaining confidence all the time as to the improving value of the remainder of the crop and offer now only sparingly and at very full value.

"May shipments in any position must be quoted firm at 2½c c.&f. 96 degree test (3.86c landed), while June shipments will bear 1-16c higher quotation with light offerings for both months.

"Spot quotations advanced 3 points to 3.765c on sale of Porto Rico Centrifugals, basis 96 degree test, with indications of a further advance being established soon.

"Only 82 Centrals are now working in Cuba, against 180 last year. Receipts at shipping ports in Cuba were 34,000 tons for week, against 52,000 tons last year."

DRIED FRUITS.—The prune market for futures is very firm, but spot prices locally are not affected. There is a good consumptive demand for the fruit, however, and prices are firm. Current prices are firm and 7¾c is about low for Filiatras and most houses will give that quotation only to meet a cut. Eight cents is the price. Stocks of valencias are getting into pretty small compass. Prices are steady.

TRADE NOTES.

R. E. Strond, grocer, of Toronto, has sold to H. Mead.

L. W. Hunter, grocer, of Regina, has sold to W. Selater.

Lebel and Sansregret, grocers, of Montreal, have dissolved.

Z. A. Lambert & Co., grocers, of Montreal, have dissolved.

P. C. Roberts, general store, Claire, has sold to E. C. Wheeler.

Bert W. Bell, general store, Strafford-ville, has sold to W. A. Jones.

Robert Grassie, of R. & G. Grassie, millers, of Mount Albion, is dead.

John Gray & Co., grocers, of St. Mary's, are closing out their business.

The assets of Jos. Leduc, general store, St. Isidore de Prescott, have been sold.

The assets of Oscar Desgagne, general store, Les Eboulements, have been sold.

A. Beatty & Son, grocers, of Colborne, are offering their business for sale.

Miller & Sample, general store, Lloydminster, have been succeeded by R. V. Miller.

The assets of Thomas Simard, general store, Lac aux Sables, has been sold.

The stock of Judah Arnovitch, general store, Birtle, has been sold to Miller & Levi.

Urgele Limoges, general store, St. Charles, has assigned to H. C. Varin, North Bay.

J. B. Murdoff, grocer, of Trenton, has taken in a partner. The firm's name is now Murdoff & Long.

Paul Hamill, Canadian manager N. K. Fairbank Company, was in New York duing the week.

T. C. House, general store, Freelton, has removed to Teeterville, where he has succeeded J. M. Lamb.

Ross, Parnell & Atkinson, grocers, of St. Catharines, have dissolved, and John Ross continues the business.

John Meldrum & Co., egg merchants and potato dealers, have removed from Youville Square to 589 St. Paul St.

A Toronto grocery traveler, in company with an enterprising Japanese, was shown through the Durham Cement Works last week by President Williams. The output is now 1,200 barrels a day and will shortly be increased to 1,500.

Leon Fontanel, late of 207 St. James street, Montreal, is now located in large new quarters at 6 St. James St. Here he has a good-sized warehouse and much more office room. The change was necessitated by the growth of his business.

The Commercial Exchange has removed from 103 St. Francois Xavier street to 93 St. Francois Xavier street, Montreal, where business will in future be carried on. The Exchange handles Ragso Washing Powder among other lines.

GROCERS CLOSING EARLY ON THE PACIFIC COAST

Vancouver, B.C., May 6, 1907.

A large number of the grocers and other retail merchants of the city have signed an agreement to close their respective places of business at 6 o'clock sharp every evening, and on Saturday evenings at 9 o'clock. This agreement is to be presented to the city council with a request that a by-law be passed embodying the terms of the agreement, thus making it general and compulsory. Recently the business men declined to sign an agreement for a Wednesday half-holiday.

Several large consignments of flour from Canadian mills for the Orient were included in the cargo of the C.P.R. SS. Tartar, which sailed for Japan and China ports to-day. The steamer carried a full cargo, mainly Canadian goods, it being in fact as large a cargo as was ever taken out by one vessel from this port to the Orient, The three cargo steamers of the C.P.R. fleet, and the three Empresses are always unable to clean up the big dock warehouses when loading.

Northern shipments, both to cannery points along the coast and to White Horse, en route for Dawson, are increasing. The canneries are all preparing for the spring run and supplies of provisions, as well as of tin, are going north by every steamer. The canners are in difficulty so far as the supplies of tin-plate bought from American mills are concerned, owing to freight having been held up so much.

Distinctly disappointing have been the experiences of the week in the matter of the settlement of the strikes which have been agitating the western portion of Canada. The coal strike is presumably settled, the men being in favor of the latest proposal, and on which they are now voting. Not so the carpenters' strike in this city, which is now further from settlement than ever. An agreement was reached, whereby the men were to receive $4.25 per day, the additional 25c. to be left to arbitration. When it came to signing up, the Builders' Exchange, as the Contractors' Association is called, demanded that the "open shop" be recognized. To this the men would not accede, and a deadlock resulted. The men now say that never again will the carpenters' unions recognize the Builders' Exchange in any way. They are signing contracts with individual contractors, some sixty of whom have agreed to the terms, and to the recognition of the unions.

The prolonged strike in the coal mines has paralyzed the mining towns of the interior, temporarily. Business men are very much discouraged, and traveling men state that they cannot sell goods at the present time beyond absolute present requirements. Until the strike is settled there will be no improvement —rather a growing worse.

Salmon hatcheries are to be built on the Stuart and Babine lakes by the Dominion Government this year. That on the Stuart lake is for the Fraser river propagation. The young sockeyes, when ready to be liberated, will be taken to the headwaters of the Fraser, specially constructed tanks being provided for handling them. The other hatchery is for Skeena river propagation. Two smaller plants are also to be built on Vancouver Island, probably on the west coast, at Barclay and Clayoquot sounds. The two on the northern river will have a capacity of 25,000,000 fry each, while the two on the island will have capacity for 7,000,000 fry each. F. C. Cunningham, Dominion superintendent of fish culture, will be in the province at an early date to make arrangements for the building of the hatcheries.

Practically no changes can be noted in the markets this week. The staple lines of groceries are fairly steady, the only trouble being a very serious lack of stock in some lines, the freight situation not having improved, as the coal strike still handicaps the railway companies. In some lines, such as condensed milk, and similar eastern staples not usually stocked ahead of present requirements, the market is bare.

In provisions, there is a slight change in quoted prices of bacon and lard. Dry salt bacon is up to 14¼c., while lard in threes and fives is down to 13½c. Cheese is in small compass, no eastern stocks being held now, and none arriving. The small local supply is firm at 15½c.

Butter is still very limited in supply, the largest supply being local, with California coming in at intervals. The prices have remained firm, and until stocks are received from other sources, not much of a drop may be expected. Usually by this time there is considerable fresh-made eastern butter, and even some from Manitoba, but owing to the late season in the east, the shipments available for this trade are limited. Transportation difficulties also prevent stocks being ordered, as it is a problem if they are received after being ordered. Jobbing quotations are: California creamery, 33c. to 35c.; local creamery, 35c.; local dairy, 30c.

Eggs are as high in price as ever, with no show of coming down. Local sources largely supply the market at present. The price is 30c. Some eastern eggs are expected to arrive, but the price has not been fixed, though it is expected to be somewhat lower than local.

In fruits and vegetables, last quotations are firm. A very few strawberries appeared on the market one day, but they were a novelty and sold at luxury prices of 50c. per box. Lemons remain up to $6.50 and likely to. Oranges are still in good stock.

Australian onions were added to the vegetable stocks this week, selling to the trade at $4 per hundred. Potatoes have shown no change, and are not likely to lower in price, being still quoted at $35 a ton.

The effect of the building trade strike on retail business in Vancouver has been very marked. Retail grocers and provision dealers in particular, are feeling the shortage of cash following the shutting off such large pay rolls as are distributed through the building trades every week. The same grocers are, of course, asked to bear the brunt of this strike, as of all industrial strikes, by "carrying" Mr. Carpenter until he is at work and in funds again.

The West Coast Fishing Co. has been organized at Victoria to enter into the oyster cultivation industry. Fifty-six acres of sea ground has been leased from the Government, and oyster "plantations" are to be set down at once. Two cars of the bivalves, purchased in South Norwalk, Conn., are now in transit, and a magazine has been prepared for their reception at Island Cove, Esquimalt harbor. Other consignments will be laid down at Thetis harbor and Plumper Bay later on.

Flour-milling is receiving more attention every day in this province. At Victoria, the old 200-barrel mill, which has been in disuse for some years, is being re-opened by the Mount Royal Milling and Mfg. Co., of Montreal. The mill, besides having a capacity of 200 barrels per day for flour, has machinery to handle ten tons of rice per day. Fifty thousand dollars is to be expended putting in modern machinery and refitting the old plant. The flour mill will be ready to handle this fall's crop of wheat, which is expected to move westward from Alberta. Next year a big elevator is to be built at Victoria by the milling company.

SS. Georgia, of the Canadian-Mexican line, the first vessel to sail from B.C. ports in this service, left Victoria on the 27th. She loaded a large quantity of railway ties at New Westminster, on the Fraser river, and a considerable quantity of general merchandise was transhipped from Vancouver to New Westminster for the steamer. She also loaded a number of consignments at Victoria.

One change to be inaugurated by the new direct steamer line is dependent on the completion of the Tehuantepec railway line, now under construction across to the Gulf of Mexico. This will be the shipment of goods from England and Europe, which may be done in thirty days' time, as against sixty days by the Suez and Orient route, the present means of transportation.

SS. Oanfa, of the Blue Funnel line of steamers, discharged several hundred tons of general English merchandise at Victoria and at Vancouver.

British ship Deanmount, from Liverpool and London, with general merchandise cargo for Victoria and Vancouver, is in port discharging. She brought about 2,700 tons of miscellaneous merchandise.

SS. City of Puebla brought to port from San Francisco a large consignment of dried fruits, comprising several hundred cases of sixty tons weight for shipment to Australia by the Canadian-Australian steamer.

The H. A. Edgett Co., Ltd., has bought out the Hill Syrup Co., which manufactures maple syrup here, bringing the sugar forward from eastern Canada.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, May 9, 1907.)

Transportation difficulties are still the principal drawback to the business situation but conditions show a marked improvement. The C.P.R. lines in the west are doing fairly well now and the towns served by that road are not making many complaints. The C.N.R. is still in bad shape, although conditions show considerable improvement.

There are no important market changes this week.

CANNED GOODS — The canners are out of 2-lb. canned peaches, and as the supply in the hands of the jobbers is limited the price is advancing. Quotations now range about $4.60 per case. We quote:

STOCKS OF LARD.

The monthly bulletin issued by the N. K. Fairbank Co. show the stocks of lard held in Europe and afloat on May 1st to have been 155,600 tierces, an increase of 3,500 over last month. On May 1st a year ago they were 137,100, two years ago 158,850, in 1904 120,000, and in 1903 98,700. Of the European cities, Hamburg leads, with 26,000, the Baltic ports being second, with 20,000. Stocks held in America were 79,244 on May 1st, 32 tierces more than the same date last month. On May 1st, 1906, they were 92,220, a year previous to that, 173,354, and in 1904, 134,668. Chicago Prime Steam leads, with 25,191; Chicago other kinds totalling 17,435, and Kansas City coming third, with 14,327.

The total number of tierces held in Europe and afloat and in American cities on May 1st was 234,844, compared with 231,312 a month ago, 229,320 on May 1st, 1906, 332,204 on the date in 1905, 254,668 in 1904, and 146,667 in 1903.

CHEESE AND BUTTER REFEREE

Dominion Government Will Keep One at Montreal—Both Buyer and Seller Must Authorize His Services—May Have Standing Order

The Dominion Government has decided to re-establish the cheese and butter referee at Montreal this season. J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner, has issued the following information on the subject:

"I am authorized by the Honorable, the Minister of Agriculture, to announce that an officer of the dairy division will be stationed at Montreal to act as official referee of butter and cheese after May 15th next, in compliance with the urgent requests received from dairymen in various districts.

"In view of the representations which have been made by salesmen, the referee will act only on request of both buyer and seller. While it is recognized that the delay which may ensue before the salesman can be communicated with will result in any defect in the quality of the cheese or butter becoming more pronounced, and that it may interfere with the prompt exportation of the lot in question, the right of the seller to be consulted before any reference is made cannot be denied.

May Give Standing Order.

"Any salesman who desires to avoid the risk of increased loss, consequent on the delay of final inspection, may do so by giving the referee a standing order, in writing, authorizing the examination of his cheese or butter at any time on request of buyer alone. Such authorization must come direct from the salesman himself. Verbal notices will not be accepted. Any authorization of this kind may be cancelled by the salesman giving due notice to that effect.

"In giving certificates on the quality of butter or cheese, the referee will be guided by the classification and standards adopted two years ago. In this classification "First Grade" is equivalent to "Finest," a term used for many years to denote first-class quality; and "Under Finest" is divided into second and third grades, with clear definitions for each grade. The advantage to the seller of having the grades clearly defined and of having three grades instead of two must be obvious to all.

"The referee will furnish both buyer and seller with a report on the quality of all butter and cheese officially examined.

"Copies of the circular giving the standards or definitions for the three grades of butter and cheese were distributed in 1905, but further copies will be sent to any person who makes application for them.

"The standards are printed on the back of the referee's reports."

Mr. Griffin left on Saturday last to take his initiatory trip over the territory in company with Mr. Grant. T. E. Edey, formerly with C. H. & E. R. Almas, is taking Mr. Griffin's place in the city of Hamilton.

INSPECTION LAW AUGUST 1.

New Dominion Act Will Come Into Into Force on That Date

The act to provide for inspection of canned food products, meats and fish, passed at the recent session of Parliament, will come into force on August 1st. Regulations in respect to duties of inspectors, methods of inspection, etc., are now being drafted. The Government will appoint about forty-five inspectors, who will be under Dr. Rutherford as Inspector-General. The total cost of enforcing the act is estimated at $75,000 per year. The salaries of the inspectors will be $1,200 per year.

EGG CARRIERS THAT FIT THE BILL.

C. E. Choat & Co., of Halifax, are among the livest grocers in eastern Canada. Through The Canadian Grocer they got some Star egg carriers from the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, and after receiving them wrote:

"The Star egg carriers we received from you are certainly a great article. We are very pleased with them. They just fit the bill.

"We are large advertisers in our city papers and would be very pleased if you would send us two or three of your small cuts that we might advertise about the way we handle eggs to our customers. We could return the cuts to you after we use them."

There are two suggestions in this letter. They are:

Get the best equipment.

Timely advertising.

FRUIT CROP ALL RIGHT.

A representative of Canadian Grocer saw E. J. McIntyre, of Niagara-on-the-Lake, yesterday. He says that no damage, as far as he knows, has been done to the crops in Ontario by the recent severe weather, excepting in the case of tomatoes in frames, which were destroyed and will have to be replanted. He does not think that that will make much difference to the crop. Apples, peaches and everything else have not suffered.

NOTES.

A very neat folder is being distributed to the trade by the Ozo Company. It tells of the profit obtainable through the handling of Ozo pickles in the company's hygienic jars. The cut of the set of four jars sitting on the stand, which is given free with every order, is seen on the little booklet.

A small fire occurred in the premises of Theodore Lefebvre & Co., the Mokara Mills, Gosford street, Montreal, recently. No serious damage was done, thanks to the quick work of the fire brigade. This is the second time this firm has been visited by fire within six months.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Cheese has not changed very much since last week. Prices have fluctuated more or less but still hover around the figures which ruled a week ago. Navigation is now open, and for this reason there is a little more interest taken in this article. Quite a lot of cheese is being exported by this week's steamers from Montreal. In all there would be not far from 30,000 boxes. Most of this is held cheese, that is stock that was kept in store in Montreal during the winter awaiting instructions from the houses in England which had earlier in the season purchased it. There would probably be no more than one-third of the lot to be shipped which could be called strictly new made.

Returned produce merchants say that there is no very great interest taken in Canadian cheese in the Old Country at present. Dealers across the water appear to feel that after the experience they had with the cheese purchased last fall they should watch their actions closely. A great many lost goodly sums of money and they are wary lest a like loss is in store for them this year.

Active trading with England will hardly assume any proportions before receipts increase. At the moment, lots arriving are not very large. What is received is taken up quickly.

Dealers report local trade about normal. Demand is good for new make at prices which are steady. Some old cheese is obtainable at figures around those asked last week.

Quite a lot of interest is being taken in butter. Receipts, while a little larger each week, are not yet as good as dealers would wish. All lots arriving are sold in short order, so that produce merchants are kept busy securing sufficient stock to fill daily orders.

The reason for the short receipts is apparent. Various points throughout the country, such as Ottawa, Toronto, and other cities and large towns, are calling for supplies and the creameries are shipping small lots to these centres, sending the remainder along to Montreal. The amount consumed locally is by no means small. As a result, stocks are not accumulating, even in a small measure.

Prices are lower than they were last time of writing, having gradually dropped. Still lower figures are expected to rule in the near future. Just as soon as provincial centres are supplied Montreal will receive large lots of butter and then there is likely to be a decline which will bring prices nearer to an export basis than they now are.

Butter dealers are unanimous in the opinion that the quality of the creamery and dairy arriving this year is superior to that which was received last season. One of the chief reasons for the improvement no doubt lies in the fact that prices are presently much higher than they were at this date in 1906. As a consequence there is no temptation to hold the make in hopes of higher prices. Rather the reverse is the case, and butter received is particularly fine quality.

Prospects for export business appear none too bright. As may be seen present figures are too high to tempt buyers in England. Again, the market on the other side is not one ready to receive the Canadian article at present. Conditions will have to change considerably before the wires are kept hot with cable business. Returned produce dealers are not at all optimistic regarding the coming season's business after having viewed the situation as it is, and as it was, the latter part of the past season, in the United Kingdom. Importers are still feeling the place in their pockets where they kept their money before they lost it on Canadian butter, and if they go slowly in their cheese operations this year they will certainly exercise caution in their butter transactions.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

The hog market is again a little excited and reports vary as to prices being paid for live hogs, ranging from $6.15 to $6.35. This is merely a repetition of what has been going on for months and is the result of an aggregate packing house capacity of 50,000 to 60,000 hogs a week, with supplies of 16,000 to 20,000 and a very adverse export market. When prices get down the farmers back up and pretty soon it becomes a question of keeping the factory going; then the competition in buying is resumed and prices begin to climb. Sometimes, as now, the movement is helped by a slight improvement in England. Thus the ebb and flow of the market continues.

In the Old Country an improvement of from one to two shillings is expected this week, due entirely to the smallness of the quantity of Canadian hogs on that market. Canadian is practically on a parity with Danish, which is a most unusual situation and can be maintained only by keeping the supplies of Canadian on the London market to its present small proportions. Danish deliveries are as heavy as they have been and there is no indication that they will be smaller in the near future.

Packers all speak hopefully of the outlook for products on the domestic market. The consumptive demand has increased appreciably and is general from the Atlantic to the prairie provinces. Eastern packers are still holding their western trade. They, the westerners, like the Canadian product best and will pay for it ½c. to 1c. more than for American. The great inflow of immigration and the large amount of railway building are other factors in increasing the consumption of pork products in this country. Altogether the packers believe, or try to, that the consumption will absorb the increased domestic stocks resulting from the diversion of exports due to the losing game in Great Britain. It is generally conceded that exports are not now over half what they are usually, which means that quite a number of thousand more hogs a week than usual are going to increase the quantity for the home markets. Of course, it is to be borne in mind that deliveries of live hogs are not as heavy as they have been. One report of last week's deliveries was 18,000 to 19,000, another 22,000 to 23,000, the latter influenced by Montreal requirements, as distinct from the Ontario. Domestic prices are being maintained, thought there is said to be here and there a weakening in the lard situation.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS. — Quite a few shipments of lard have been made during the past few days since navigation opened. Prices are unchanged. Hams and bacon are rather slow owing to cool weather. It is expected, however, that there will be better demand for these lines in the near future.

EGGS — The market is higher and the egg dealers are all guessing at what the final outcome will be. Prices are at a record level, and firm at that. There's no question that consumption is increasing in Canada, because of increased population, and the dealers' doubt that production is increasing at all. If the weather were to get really seasonable for a while there might be something more to say about that. Anyway, consumption just now is very heavy.

CEREALS AND CONFECTIONERY

Market Still Rising on the Strength of Crop Reports—Situation in the Canadian West—Advance in Flour—Summer Confectionery.

Crop destruction is still in the ascendant, and the price of wheat continues to rise with an occasional rest. The American Government's crop report, to come out to-day, is looked for anxiously in the hope that it will give some authentic and encouraging information. Prices advanced 2½c. in Chicago on Monday and a sample of the wild stories going was that the wheat acreage in the Canadian west would be half what it was last year. Reports here indicate that there will be about 10 per cent. decreased acreage, but there is also reliable information that it will be about the same. It is said that wheat planted up to May 20 will do very well. The decreased acreage does not, however, represent a distinct loss. Oats and other grains can be planted much later than wheat and it is estimated that these will make up to the west the shortage in wheat.

Flour has advanced 20c. a barrel and is very firm. There is plenty of export enquiry, but foreign buyers have not risen to the new level. Domestic demand is very good. Wheat cereals are also advancing.

Confectionery.

There's a good trade in confectionery to be done during the summer and now's the time to get ready for it. Confectionery is one of the most profitable lines a grocer can carry. We've said that before, but it ought to be said every week. To get the best out of them, however, they should be specialized, properly displayed in the most attractive way possible. Shown in a modern silent salesman they will sell themselves. The case and candies both add to the appearance of the store. The energetic progressive grocer should handle confectionery.

EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

HOW TO PRODUCE IT

Brief Talks Given Occasionally by T. Johnson Stewart.

"Some fellers can't tell a truth with a straight face any more than an advertiser can always sell below cost."—Rusty Mike's Diary.

Blessed art thou, Rusty Mike! Once more you have provided the text for our advertising talk. You may be the rustiest-looking proposition on the Pacific slope; but your quaint philosophy is always pleasing and sometimes profound. Keep on living and ousting Solomon from the hearts of the populace as king of the proverb business. And if I may not attend your marriage may I be permitted—in the fulness of time—to write your epitaph. Both are sorrowful jobs for men who have peered into human nature as we have done; but I never go back on a pal. Let's dismiss 'em and all other phases of life which our all-important subject—advertising—does not embrace. But when we ponder o'er our subject for a moment we discover that there is nothing which we can dismiss. History is the fulfilment of advertising, and without advertising there would be no history at all. Nor will there ever be.

Let us return to Rusty Mike's statement. Are you one of the grocers who sell — not infrequently— below cost? There are so many grocery and provision merchants doing that very thing that I am worried about their future and the future of their posterity. Miracles seem to happen in the grocery business. Unfortunately, I belong to a considerable and growing class, easily discoverable in any community, which does not believe in impossibilities. Already this minority is too considerable for any wise man to ignore. And it is expanding—growing rapidly all the time. We believe in "sweet reasonableness" in all things. A goodly number of the grocers in Canada have been selling goods below cost for years. These generous gentlemen are not the sons of bankers. When they started business all they possessed was in their wives' name. It's decidedly amusing to realize that the poor merchant, who persists in selling below cost, can only invest in one lot annually when he might just as well sell at a decent profit and invest in two. This type of a merchant is a regular wonder-worker—at least for some time. He goes on selling goods below cost—just to oblige the public and demonstrate the art of living on nothing—minus less than cost. That game is amusing but it is utterly impossible to fool all the people all the time on any spot on the globe. Gradually the public loses faith in the business rectitude of the man who persists in the "Below Cost" refrain. Only the ignorant poorly-paid people of a community—the people who have little to spend—attach any significance to that brand of advertising. There are rare occasions when a merchant can advertise goods at less than cost. Shrewd merchants seldom do so, and when they do they are quite frank in their reasons for holding such sales. If this "Below Cost" paragraph serves to warn the man who inconsiderately advertises goods that way too often it will have served its purpose.

mere purpose of keeping your name before the public. Because the other fellow is sure to be doing a little more than that and as a result your name is pretty certain to be ignored. Have something to say, and then say it "peppery and to the point." Mr. McCrea might have left out the reference to the weather. The people knew that the weather was disagreeable that particular Wednesday morning and it certainly was a mistake to rub it in. However, the writer got to the essential points pretty quick. These Japanese cups and saucers are bargains at the price. The women folks know it. I don't. But I do know that McCrea & Son did a better business on that disagreeable Wednesday than if

Pineapples Down at Last — Vegetables Quiet— Southern Conditions Continue to Affect Prices—Potatoes Still Unequal to Demand.

The pineapple situation is rapidly assuming a healthier outlook. The stock has dropped considerably in price and is coming to hand plentifully and in good condition. It will be two or three weeks yet before the first of the Florida pines are reported, but accounts point to a splendid crop from that country, although it is probable the sizes will run small. 24's were about the standard last year. This year it will be 30's and 36's. The first car should be along before the end of the month.

There is a fair trade passing in vegetables, but the weather has been too uncertain to permit of business being consistently good. What activity there is is divided impartially among tomatoes, of which there is a considerably greater supply this week, asparagus, celery and new cabbage. Owing to so much cold weather in the south a great deal of damage has been done to all the early vegetables, and prices consequently remain high. A lower level all round is, however, anticipated shortly.

Potato prices remain about the same for Delawares, eastern stock being a trifle easier. There is a scarcity of supply in some quarters, the stock held by a fair proportion of the dealers being quite inadequate to the demand.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—There are no radical changes in fruits this week. Bananas are selling at prices slightly lower, but still high enough to keep profit narrow, since demand is not so strong with advanced figures ruling. Oranges and lemons are selling freely. Other lines are normal.

FISH—Dealers report business fair to good. Pike, brook trout and market cod are included in the new lines quoted this week. Haddock is a little higher, as is also halibut. Steak cod and sea trout are lower, the former offering for 6c. and the latter for 11c. New haddies are now quoted 9c., an advance of one cent. Dry cod in bundles is up $1, the price asked being $6.50. Labrador herring is arriving more freely and prices are easier. N.S. herring is also lower.

FRUIT — The most noticeable feature this week is the drop in pineapple prices, there being a reduction of 50c. to $1 on all sizes. It is unlikely that the former high level will be reached again this year, which should be good news to more than one dealer. The demand for oranges continues unchecked, and prices remain firm. A brisk trade will be passing in bananas from now on, but as most of the fruit has to be ripened after it reaches the city it not unfrequently happens that dealers are short of stock.

LUNCHEON OF ANCIENT CANNED GOODS

Demonstration to Show the Needlessne ss of the Dating Agitation.

L. J. Callanan a New York grocer, is leading the fight against adding to the United States law providing for canned goods inspection a clause requiring the dating of all cans when packed. On the last day of April he gave a luncheon of ancient canned goods to demonstrate that canned goods need not be dated. The New York Commercial telling the story, says:

'Twas just a shrimp, good, but old,
Sealed in a dateless can,
Packed years ago, or so, 'tis told,
And served by Callanan,
To prove contentions are amiss—
To dissipate a fear—
That canned goods get a bit remiss
If kept from year to year.

The seedless lemon is with us
To squeeze on boneless fish;
It's good enough if taken plus
The date for which we wish.
A painless ache may come some day,
But yet we cheerless scan the process food interned, let's say,
In dateless, old tin cans.

Defying cramps and divers stomach ills a little band of canned meat packers, grocers and newspaper men yesterday in the cause of anti-dating tin cans, ate and made merry over portions of fish, fowl and beef in tins ante-dating the present decade. This reckless (some may think) exhibition of hardihood was the feature at a special luncheon served on the second floor of No. 41 Vesey street, the headquarters of the warmest opponent the much advocated dating law for canned food products knows. It was given by L. F. Callanan, the grocer, and its purpose, to demonstrate by actual test the fact ante-dating law experts maintain, that canned goods properly processed will keep an indefinite period and not deteriorate as to quality and harmlessness.

There was no introductory harangue, no stimulating strain of pleasant music to leave drooping spirits and stiffen shaken knees (if any were there) as the visitors trooped into the room where assembled on the tables, platters lay containing positively the oldest collection of canned eatables a month's ransacking of grocers' shelves had been able to discover. Once at the tables the host cracked a ghostly joke. He said: "I have ordered ambulances from all the nearby hospitals to meet us here at 5 p.m." This did not seem to break into the icy reserve of some of the guests. An attendant observed in a loud voice: "We are serving pea soup packed in 1888, 1893 and 1907." There were no distinctive marks on the portions served. Some present gasped—and—and—fell to.

Antiques Wet and Dry.

The soup was merely the start. Beef-stew, nine years old; brazed beef, ten years old; roast chicken, four years old, and plain potted chicken, six years old, followed in quick succession. Many of the guests were hungry, those who were not were thirsty, and did ample justice to a liberal display of certain old vintages that give color to the face. The appetites of a few, it was noticeable, improved somewhat after drinkings of sauterne and libations of rye extract. Down to the shrimp salad there was no more than a natural hesitancy shown in sampling the undated goodies heaped upon the plates. When the shrimps appeared, some of the guests found the hour was late and they had to go. Had such a good time, you know, but—

Uged by the host, most of the visitors lined up at the table and—"This," said Mr. Callanan, indicating the can, "is shrimp packed seven years ago, and this," tapping another can, "was packed last year. Tell me which is the better, as to flavor and quality." Most of those remaining at the board had reached the stage where nothing mattered; everybody ate, and singularly enough, the earlier packed shrimp got the vote.

The views of the guests on all the commodities served were taken by secret ballot. The decisions were written on pieces of paper, the portions of food voted upon going by numbers. It is a matter of record that in almost every instance the food packed the longest period received the largest number of votes. Samples eaten were from goods packed by the Franco-American Soup Co., Armour & Co., Richardson & Robbins and the Baratarria Canning Co.

Took Their Own Medicine.

In addition to the newspaper men present, there were H. E. Cragin, of Armour & Co.; Dr. Willis Cumming, H. H. Richardson, Walter B. Timms, of Austin, Nichols & Co., and Thomas Garrett, secretary of the Franco-American Food Co.

Backing up argument with deeds is the way Mr. Callanan expressed the purpose of the luncheon. "The charge is made," said he, "that canned goods deteriorate with age. I contend they do not. You, gentlemen, now know that they do not," (there was some enthusiasm here). "I maintain," said Mr Callanan, not heeding the interruption, "that the packers should come forward and defend their goods and fight down the sentiment in favor of a dating clause for canned goods in the Pure Food Law. Let them come forward and explain to the law-makers that dated cans will unnecessarily hurt the business of the packer and grocer, and won't help the consumer one bit."

There was no need for the ambulances. No use for the services of the physician who was present. The goods were tried on him as well as the other guests. The ptomaine family were conspicuously absent and the guests were able to leave the building.

"A BETTER WAY OF DOING BUSINESS"

If one or two or a score of Grocers made that remark when speaking of any man's business method it would be worth considering; but when 85 per cent. of the Grocers in this Dominion say so the phrase becomes important. Apart from the known goodness of it is remarkable that so large a percentage of Canadian Grocers should speak that way of my business methods. How much does the phrase mean to you? Shouldn't you, in fairness to yourself, find out? Better Cigars you cannot stock than PHARAOH and PEBBLE. Connoisseurs say so. I want your personal opinion of my way of doing business. Send me your address to-day.

GROCERY TRADE NEWS OF THE ATLANTIC COAST

Halifax, May 6.

The local markets are well supplied with eggs, and the price continues to drop. Quotations vary throughout the province; in Lunenburg they are retailing at twelve cents per dozen, in Cornwallis at fifteen cents, while in Halifax sixteen is asked for Nova Scotia stock and fifteen for Prince Edward Island. The receipts from P. E. I. have slackened off some during the past few days, and it is thought here that the cold storage men have started in buying.

Butter is still scarce, though some small dairy tubs are now coming in. The quantity is so small, however, that it has had no effect on the price. No good butter can be bought under 25 cents. The creameries are kept busy supplying the local demand which is very good.

Canned goods are selling very freely at present, beans, peas, corn and tomatoes being the leaders. Prices for all these lines are well maintained. Good apples are now about off the market and bananas are commencing to arrive in larger quantities. Potatoes continue very scarce, but there is a good supply of turnips, parsnips, beets and carrots on the market. This stock wintered well and is in fine condition. The retail butchers of Halifax have advanced the price on sirloin roasts and sirloin steaks two cents per pound. Sirloins are now quoted at 17 cents all round. The dealers give as the cause of this increase the universal demand for this class of meat, and as there is only a small proportion of sirloin in each animal some of the butchers find it difficult to supply their customers.

New Produce Firm.

Messrs. Hutcheson & Power, who for the past twenty years have carried on an extensive business on Argyle street, dealing in butter, eggs and cheese, are retiring from business.

Messrs. Clifford Wickerson and W. A. Hart have purchased the good will of the business and will carry it on in future as a wholesale establishment only. Both are energetic young men, and with a good established business in their possession they will, no doubt, make a success of their new venture.

In addition to produce they intend to carry a full line of fruit.

Grocer Suffers by Fire.

Fire last week destroyed the retail grocery store, with contents, of W. J. Nauss on Lower Water street. Mr. Nauss had a large stock on hand and his loss will be heavy as he carried very little insurance. The same fire also destroyed a portion of one of the large warehouses of A. G. Jones & Co., West India merchants. The warehouses were filled with stock, but the loss will not be very great. On all the warehouses there is $47,000 insurance, but on the one damaged by fire there is $4,500.

The steamer Ocamo, which arrived here from the West Indies during the week, landed 8,280 bags and 135 barrels of sugar besides a large quantity of miscellaneous cargo.

The maple sugar and syrup season is about over in Cumberland county and those engaged in the industry say that it has been a very poor year. The product is considerably below that of last season.

News of the Fisheries.

The first fresh salmon taken this season were offered for sale last week in the city at 65 cents per pound. Some of the local fish dealers imported from Boston a small quantity of this season's catch of fresh mackerel. The fish were of poor quality and sold slowly.

The Bank fishermen have been greatly hampered in their operations this season. The prevalence of drift ice has seriously interfered with their operations, and the season is fully a month behind last year.

The scarcity of bait has been another serious drawback. Most of the vessels that had frozen bait report fair catches, some of them above the average.

Lobsters are very scarce, and the packers have started the prices fairly high, which, when only small catches are taken, permits of the fishermen making fair wages.

Four Lunenburg bankers have returned with the following fares: Mattewa, 500 qtls.; Acadia, 400 qtls.; Parana, 475 qtls.; Lela B. Hirtle, 500 qtls. These vessels also made some good hauls of halibut, for which a ready market was found.

D. Hockin, assistant manager of the National Drug Co.'s Halifax branch, is visiting towns in Nova Scotia introducing to the grocery trade St. George's baking powder.

Packing Co.'s Business Grows.

The J. M. Roop Packing Co., of Middleton, N.S., will be formed into a joint stock company. Mr. Roop has been operating the factory in Middleton for two years, and has met with good success. He says that the supply of hogs has been 20 to 30 per cent. higher this season than last. The prices have been higher, and the output has sold about one dollar per hundred higher than last year. The demand has increased enormously and the factory has orders far in excess of its output. During the year almost $15,000 was paid out in cash to the farmers for hogs. Mr. Roop has decided to form a joint stock company, with a capital of $30,000. The plant will be enlarged and more machinery installed.

J. M. Welton, of Kingston, N.S., estimates that from 35,000 to 40,000 barrels of apples were shipped from Kingston during the past season, which netted an average of $1.50 to $1.75 per barrel, or a total of $50,000 to $70,000 to the fruit growers of that section of the county.

Western Counties Exhibition.

A county exhibition will be held at Windsor during the coming autumn at which Kings, Annapolis and Hants will participate. At a recent meeting the following committees were appointed to prepare the prize lists:

Fruit—Wm. Sangster, W. J. Aylward, C. A. Dill, Wm. Brown.

Roots, vegetables, grain seeds—Wm. Sharp, C. A. Dill, Geo. Haley.

Poultry—S. P. Schurman, J. O. Stevens, Robt. Dill.

Dairy products—H. B. Tremain, H. A. Lynch, J. F. Dill.

Ornamental plants and flowers—E. C. Shand, R. B. Dakin, M. G. Goudge.

Domestic department—Mrs. William Sangster, Mrs. Byers, Mrs. Tremain.

Industrial exhibits—J. A. Smith, C. Macnab, Dr. J. W. Reid.

MR. BALL IN WINNIPEG.

R. W. Ball, of the Essex Canning Co., was in Winnipeg last week and was seen by The Canadian Grocer representative in the offices of Nicholson & Bain. He was on his return journey east, having completed a successful business trip in the west, visiting the trade in the various centres between Winnipeg and the caost. As a result of his trip, Mr. Ball states that the Essex Canning Co.'s goods will have as strong a hold on the trade in Alberta as they have already on the trade in Manitoba and British Columbia. The west can consume almost unlimited quantities of canned goods, and the Essex Canning Co. will get their share of the trade.

Mr. Ball is well satisfied with the business outlook in the west and is not inclined to be pessimistic because of the trying winter, with its transportation difficulties. The evil effects will be only temporary, in his opinion.

FAKE ADVERTISING.

Devices that Have Become a Nuisance In Many Cities.

On checking over the various small sums paid here and there for advertisements in programmes, year books, church, school and society announcements of various kinds, the average Toronto business man finds that he has spent a sufficient sum to have paid for a year's contract for real advertising in a really good daily newspaper, where the actual returns are sure to be profitable.

Why does he do it?

For divers reasons.

He belongs to a church. He and his family attend regularly and contribute their full share to its maintenance. A concert is projected, programmes are required. The committee go out to get ads. enough to pay for printing and perhaps a little over. They check over the list of the business men of their congregation—and there he is. They call. It's only $2.50 for a page. Time is valuable. "All right. Put me down for a page. Miss —— will write out something to put in it." He knows he can't expect one cent of return, so copy is really a matter of no importance. How can he escape?

His lodge, his regiment, his favorite charity, all get after him in like manner. The "help along" argument is worked. The canvassers in many cases don't really try to prove that any benefit will ever come to him as a result of the expenditure but——"help along a good cause."

In cities like Toronto this traffic has come to be so profitable that professional fakirs are making a business of getting out these programmes, often paying the committee in charge a considerable sum in addition to the cost of furnishing so many hundred programmes. In return the committee furnishes a list of names of members who are regarded as legitimate prey.

Forth goes the programme fiend; not to talk advertising. Oh, no! That's not his best card, and he knows it. But to get the "member" to "help along." There are tears in his voice as he presents the claims of the "good cause." They are trying to make the entertainment a great success. The committee asked him to call on Mr. Merchant to see "if he couldn't please aid them by paying $10 for the back page." (Dummy programme is here produced.)

And so he puts up the $10, feeling that, while he may not be doing a good stroke of business, he is at least assisting the finances of some worthy institution. In many cases not a dollar of his $10 ever reaches the treasury of that organization. The programme fiend gets it.

If a man ever allows his name to appear on one of these programme schemes he is sure to be hounded for all time by all the others.

Their name is legion, theatre programmes, Horse Show programmes, Massey Hall concert programmes, Pure Food Show programmes, Poultry Show programmes, Exhibition programmes, Dog Show programmes, Woodbine racing programmes, baseball programmes, lacrosse programmes, sporting schedule and musical curriculum, and so on, ad nauseam.

In many cities the leading business men have banded together and made an agreement to withhold their patronage from the many and varied advertising schemes to which they are called upon to contribute from time to time. There is not a city in the country where the business men would not profit by making the same sort of agreement and be money in pocket at the end of the year. If the solicitors for the many schemes referred to were given a firm refusal it would only be a question of time before these fake advertising schemes disappeared entirely.

This is the cure: Turn all down promptly and firmly. Make no exceptions.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE RETURNED DRAFT BUSINESS

To the Editor of The Canadian Grocer:

We hear and read a great deal of complaints from wholesalers about drafts being returned not accepted. One great trouble (with country merchants especially) is that wholesalers send their drafts all over the country in place of finding out the customer's bank, where it would be held until either accepted or refused. But when it goes off to another place, unless the merchant has nothing else to do but attend to it the first mail, the bank returns it marked "no attention." In the meantime the merchant has accepted it and returned same to the bank, marking it payable at his own bank. Two or three days later the merchant gets a draft on some other bank for the same amount. What is he going to do about it? Who is to blame? How is it to be remedied? It is as much a nuisance to the retailer as it is to the wholesaler.

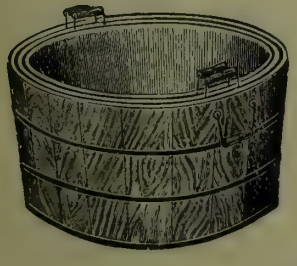
MONEY IN YOUR POCKET



That's the main difference between a "Cane-Made" Tub and any other line of Tubs on the market to-day.

The reasons which go to make up this difference are known to most practical men.

Here are a few:

The raw material is carefully selected and properly kiln-dried.

The hoops cannot come down because they are carefully rivetted.

"Cane's Brands" assure the come-again customer. Is it worth while stocking other lines?

A Guarantee that is Worth Something

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES

is printed and packed in every box of SUN PASTE Stove Polish. Our guarantee stands at par because all you have to do is to notify us if any of our SUN PASTE is found defective in any way and we do the rest. It is no surprise to us, however, that so many thousands of storekeepers are selling our SUN PASTE year in and year out with never a defective tin. We make the goods right. That is the kind of Paste Polish you find it worth while to push.

VAGUENESS

People are not satisfied with things of a negative quality and a vague, doubtful nature.

They admire the positive, the true, the faithful in their own kind, and full worth and value in what they pay for and use.

"WOOD'S COFFEES"

stand as an illustration of the positive idea. They represent all that is good, pure, delicate and delightful in the great beverage.

EVERY GROCER KNOWS

to his cost the trouble which arises from stocking goods which deteriorate in quality when kept on his shelves for any length of time. He loses both money and custom by it and is caused endless annoyance. With C. & B. goods he does not get the chance for the goods to remain in his store long enough to deterioriate in the slightest degree, for though every grocer sells C. & B. products, not one in a hundred keeps them for any length of time. Even if he did, the quality of the raw materials and the care with which they are packed, render them less liable to damage through long keeping than ordinary brands.

Ask any grocer whether he has any difficulty in selling C. & B. Goods. We know what he will tell you.

DO YOU KNOW

the facts about the lines of maple syrup and maple sugar which we offer you ?

Perhaps you do. Maybe you do not.

Let us tell you.

To start with, we require from each and every producer from whom we purchase, a signed statement to the effect that every gallon maple syrup we buy from him is absolutely pure; that it is made from the sap of the maple tree only.

We operate in Quebec Province, the largest producing district in the world. We are right in the heart of the maple forests. This is a significant fact. Adulteration is unnecessary. We can secure the pure article right at our doors. We have no temptation.

Besides, you have our absolute guarantee that the goods offered you are not adulterated in any respect. They are pure after Government analysis.

Therefore, you are assured of quality.

Our lines are labelled most attractively, put up in glass and tin, as illustrated.

They sell on sight because they are of better appearance than any other line on the market.

Write us if you are not handling our lines.

Credit and Money

Nine-tenths of the grocers who sell Windsor Salt (pure, white, crystaline, won't cake) have money in the bank. They discount their bills. Their credit is "A, Number One." Happy grocers they!

Windsor Salt plays its own little part in bringing about this contented state of things. It never disappoints the grocers' customer who buys it. It serves to hold confidence in the quality of a grocer's general stock. It establishes permanent family trade. It helps a grocer's credit—it brings him money.

MANUFACTURERS AND SHIPPERS

Do You Know?

By placing your goods with the CALGARY WHOLESALE TRADE through us, you reach retailers in ALBERTA, whose patronage it is impossible for you to secure.

FROM CALGARY, freight rates enable wholesalers to ship as far north as RED DEER —as far south as LETHBRIDGE and FERNIE, B.C.—as far west as Revelstoke, B.C., and as far east as MEDICINE HAT, Sask.

THIS IS THE REASON why your competitors' brands are seen on the retailers' shelves in place of yours. While you are endeavoring to sell your goods to the retailer from eastern points, he is securing his requirements from CALGARY. WHY NOT try the method others are following? Place your account with us and see if the results do not bear us out.

DISTRIBUTION OF CARS. We are handling cars for a large number of eastern manufacturers and shippers, and can look after yours. WRITE US FOR OUR RATES.

TORONTO, - CANADA

"Grocer Hashisownbrand bought flour of a firm of good millers and sold it under "Peerless" Brand. He worked up a large and profitable trade, when the siren came, in the person of a talkative salesman of another mill, who offered what he claimed was as good or better flour for 50 cents per barrel less. The bait was taken, and in three months Hashisownbrand had lost his trade in Peerless flour and then excused himself with 'I didn't mean to.'"

DO YOU SEE THE POINT?

Aylmer, Little Chief, Log Cabin, Horseshoe, Auto, Kent, Lynvalley, Maple Leaf, Lion, Thistle, Grand River and White Rose Brands have been on the market for over a quarter of a century.

You have been selling some, or all of these brands ever since you have been in business. You know that your Customers have been well satisfied. You know that the Canners' guarantee is behind every tin, and that you run no risk.

DON'T listen to the siren. HOLD FAST to those Brands that have satisfied your customers in the past.

On the chance of making a few extra cents you cannot afford to lose your trade.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

MONEY, REPUTATION, QUALITY

The only trinity which can possibly save a merchant from commercial disaster is conspicuous in every ounce of canned goods bearing our name.

Essex Brand Canned Fruits and Vegetables is representative of something more than purity. All reputable canners see to it that no tainted fruit or vegetable finds its way into their canning department—all are shrewd enough to conduct business along rigidly-cleanly lines ; but

The Process of Canning Does the Trick

The consumer longed for the taste of ripe, juicy fruit and the invigorating flavor of fresh vegetables between seasons until the advent of

THE ESSEX BRAND

Succulent, appetizing fruit has no goodness which we do not can—in brief, we perpetuate the health-giving qualities of ripe fruit and fresh vegetables, and we have no other reason to give for the ever-increasing demand for Essex Brand.

Essex Pork and Beans are handled by grocers who are out for the particular trade. We cornered the flavor because we couldn't corner Pork and Beans.

You may forget our Apple Butter, but the children never do. Mr. Grocer, stock the brand that pleases the little folks, and you'll hold the trade shrewd dealers strive hard to retain.

The Wants of Women—Study Them

MR. GROCER! You may invest more money in your business; you may advertise the best lines of staple groceries on earth; you may know your trade from beginning to end; but—unless you know and study the wants of women—your business acumen will avail you nothing in the struggle for commercial supremacy. Women, consciously or no, dictate the policy of the business world, and no merchant is great or powerful enough to ignore their decision. Now, sir! since these facts are indisputable, and since the women of Canada have almost unanimously declared that of Canned Goods is peerless—beyond compare—surely you owe it to yourself to stock and talk the brand which clinches both reputation and profit. No brand of Canned Goods on the market can do more for you than Old Homestead. That much we are positive about. But the particular and economical housewives of Canada are just as positive that is so much superior to the next best brand of Canned Goods that there is no comparison. And there are strong reasons for their belief. All the goodness of succulent fruit and fresh vegetables is retained in Old Homestead Brand. The name stands for surety of purity and that palate-pleasing, appetizing flavor which has made the brand famous.

Have You a Supply of MONTSERRAT LIME FRUIT JUICE ?

We Are Likely to Have Hot Weather Any Day

Hot weather will mean a demand for Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice.

Have you got a supply to meet this demand ?

A very hot summer usually follows a cold spring.

Get ready for the hot weather which will surely be along in a few days now.

The consumption of Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice has been getting larger and larger each year.

This year we intend that it shall be a great deal larger than ever before, and have made arrangements for an extensive advertising campaign throughout Canada.

This campaign will help you sell Montserrat.

The fruit, from which Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice is made, is grown on our own Island of Montserrat—the finest place in the world for the development of Lime Fruit.

Montserrat is made from pure lime fruit—it is absolutely free from foreign acids and other injurious ingredients.

And, what's most important, Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice can be recommended with absolute safety for its purity.

Why not send in your order to-day before you forget?

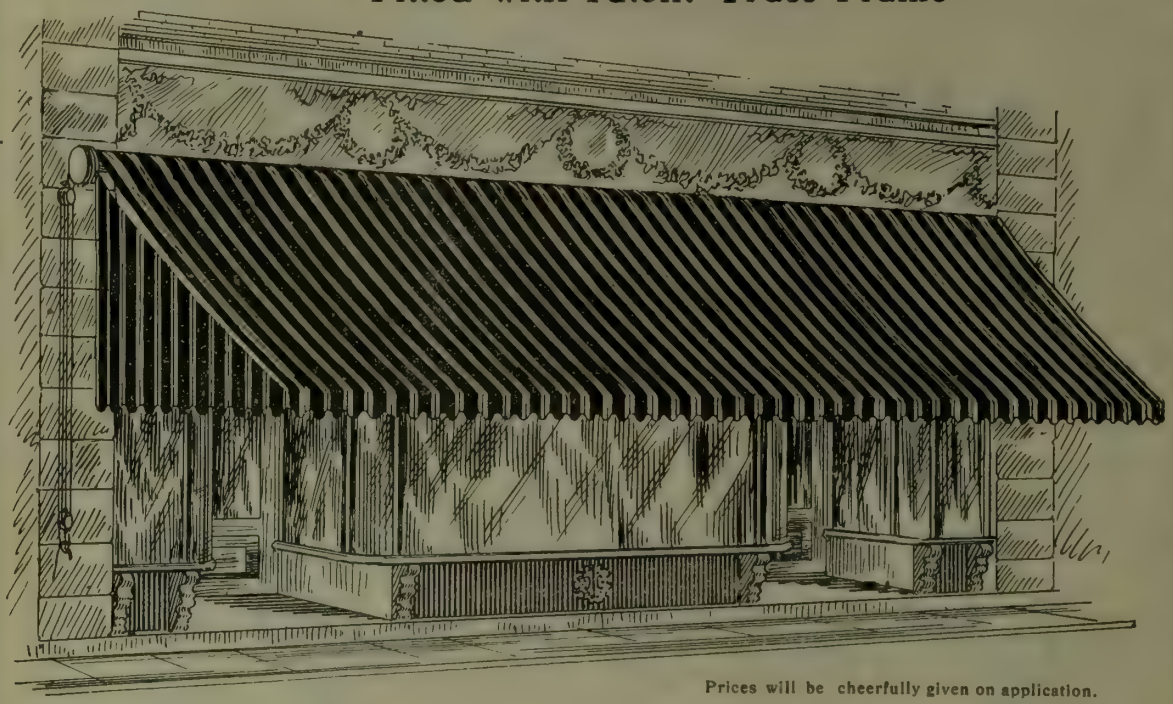
TOBIN'S "PEERLESS" ROLLER AWNING

Fitted with Patent Truss Frame



Prices will be cheerfully given on application.

LAST CALL!

The remarkable success that has attended the introduction of this, the most modern awning construction, will surely be the means of its universal adoption on all up-to-date stores, both in cities and towns alike. The roller principle is the acme of perfection, for the canvas covers last three times as long, and naturally retain their colors much longer than the old style. We can span a storefront of 35 feet with only the two end rods supporting the whole combination. A list of our progressive merchants using these will be found on last page of our catalogue. Look them over and ask their opinions on this principle. You will never use any other system. The roller is made of standard galvanized iron, and will guarantee a solid and firm support of any size of awning. The Bryson Graham Co., of Ottawa, have the longest roller awnings in the country, 65 feet span and patent truss frame, as above cut, and are a standard criterion of our work; Mr. Tobin being the Patentee.

AS A MEANS OF SUCCESS

Are you still using that old antiquated system of book-keeping,—Bound Ledgers, Day Book, etc., which are awkward to handle and never posted to date?

If you are it is surely not because they supply what you want, but because you have never troubled yourself to look for something better. You soon would change your mind if you could see the many advantages and conveniences arising from the use of

The use of this system tends very greatly towards the success of any business. Why? Because it saves time, labor and worry. It is always handy, is compact, and is the best system in use to-day.

You had better investigate this, for you will profit thereby. Drop us a card and ask us for Catalogue "G," which will give you all details.

What is Your Book-Keeper's Time Worth ?

SYSTEM THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Is your ledger arranged on any special system ?

Ten minutes wasted six times a day looking for an account means a daily loss of one hour. On a ten hour day, this means a loss of a month a year.

And your book-keeper has more than six accounts a day to look up.

Can you afford it ?

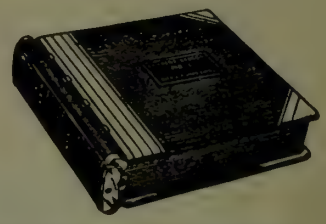
* * * * * *

Business Systems ledgers are all built on the loose-leaf principle.

Business Systems make your ledger accounts run alphabetically; if an account runs over the space you gave it, you merely drop in another leaf.

Business Systems loose-leaf ledgers open perfectly flat and give a level writing surface.

Write us today for full particulars.



This will not obligate you in any way and will enable us to tell you exactly how Business Systems may be most economically applied to your accounting department.

EGG INSURANCE

is the only remedy for broken eggs. The only way to be insured against breakage is to adopt the modern system of delivery by using

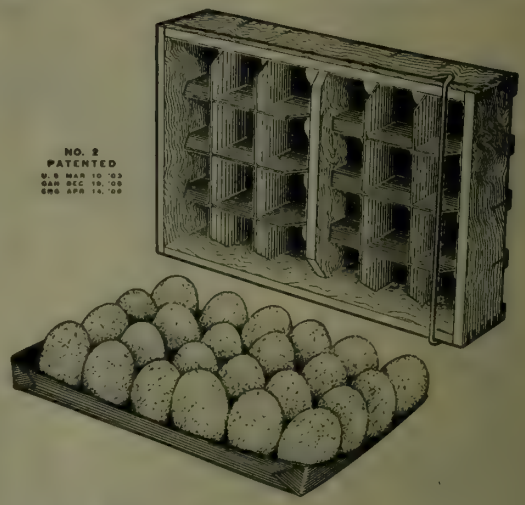
THE STAR EGG CARRIERS AND TRAYS

This is the only safe way of delivering eggs from the shop to the customer's house.

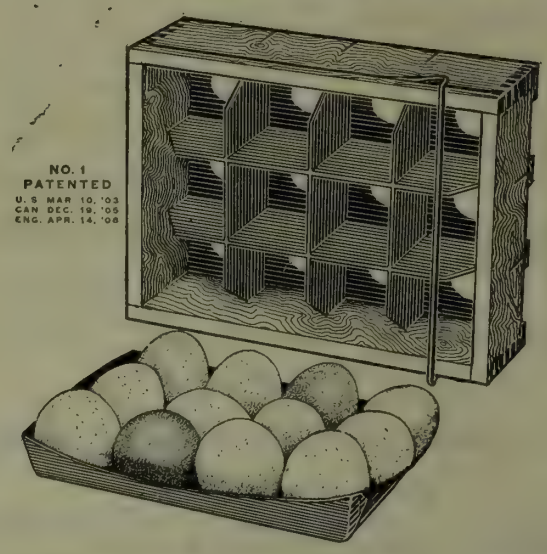
The uncertainty of breakage is turned into the certainty of no breakage whatever.

The quick way too; it saves 75 per cent. of the time usually taken to make the delivery by any other system. This alone is worth more than the money it costs you.

The delivery boy can leave the eggs anywhere, in any position at the customer's house, without waiting for a dish to place them in. Your customers will appreciate this.



THE PREMIUM IS VERY SMALL



To deliver eggs by the STAR EGG CARRIER and TRAY SYSTEM costs less than one-third cent per dozen eggs. No other way is as sure or as safe or as clean or as cheap.

Star Egg Carriers and Trays are made in two sizes, to deliver one or two dozen eggs.

Short Talks on How to Help the Paper

The Canadian Grocer should be a clearing house for grocers' ideas about trade, ideas on subjects that have any sort of relation to the grocery business. Grocers in this country have not been doing enough at exchanging ideas. It would help the trade if they did more of it. The Canadian Grocer's columns are open to any grocer who has anything to say on trade subjects. There's a subject say that interests you. You've been turning it over in your mind. You would like to discuss it and see it discussed. You would like the views of other grocers. Send the idea to The Canadian Grocer and we will be glad to submit it to the trade.

HOW TO IMPROVE THE PAPER.

You've been reading The Canadian Grocer and an idea has come to you and you say to yourself "If the grocer would do that it would improve it." Don't say to yourself "I'll write to the editor about that some day." Go right away and get paper and pencil and send us the suggestion. Putting things off is the deathtrap of many good ideas.

WINDOWS.

Window dressing is a very important department of the grocery business. It's getting to be more important every day. We are trying to make the good window dressing department of the paper both interesting and helpful. We would like to see a great many more entries in the monthly competitions. If you don't want to enter the competition, send us a picture of your window. Of course we can't undertake to reproduce every picture we get, that would be too large an order, but we will criticize the window, point out its defects if we can and make what suggestions seem needful. We want articles on window dressing, too. And if you happen upon a good window device, send it to us.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

Whenever you send a photograph to The Canadian Grocer, write on the back of it your name and address and an indication of what the picture represents. We get a great many letters commencing, "I am sending under separate cover." The photo mentioned arrives a mail or two later, without any sign or mark by which to identify it. As we said, we get a lot of photographs, and it takes pretty good guessing sometimes to connect them up with their proper letter. The name on the back of the picture would eliminate the possibility of error and save a lot of trouble.

NEWS.

We have correspondents, and good ones, in many of the larger cities and towns of the Dominion. There are some places where suitable men have not yet been found. But there is grocery news all over the country, and we want it. Send it to us. We can't stand sentry at every store door, but our friends can help us to many interesting items. It will not be much trouble for them to send an occasional item and we will be glad.

MARKETS.

We are at very great pains to carefully and accurately report the commodity markets from week to week, but we do not pretend to be a purchasing agent, one whose position enables him to bargain for the lowest prices. Nor are we above making mistakes. What we try to do is to give the fair market price. If there are errors we would esteem it a favor to be told of them. It is by this kind of co-operation that the paper can be brought to the highest state of efficiency.

WRITE ARTICLES.

The grocery business is chuck full of difficulties and hard problems. Have you solved some of them for yourself, or have you ideas about them? If you have, or if you want to propound a problem and ask questions, write an article for The Grocer. It will do you good. It's wonderful how much clearer one's view become when he tries to explain them to others. We want practical articles on grocery topics all the time.

HINTS.

Is there a subject you would like to see dealt with editorially or otherwise by The Grocer? Tell us about it. Just say what you would like and we'll try and do it for you.

QUESTIONS.

There are a lot of things the editor of The Grocer doesn't know about groceries and the grocery trade, but with the sources of information at hand that he has, and given a little time, he can answer pretty nearly any reasonable question any subscriber would like to ask. Ask some. A department of questions and answers should be very interesting and instructive.

CLERKS.

Everything on this page applies as much to grocery employes as as to employers. Some of our best friends are clerks.

COST OF DOING BUSINESS.

One of the most difficult problems the grocer has to tackle is the cost of doing business, and how to find it. We have had a number of articles on it within the past six months. We want more. Camparative,y few retailers make any attempt to ascertain the cost. They all ought to and we want to get more of them at any rate to do it. Send us an article relating your experience.

RELATE YOUR EXPERIENCE.

We often ask ourselves why it is that more original compositions do not reach this office. This paper was not established for the general public. It was instituted and is published in the interests of the large and ever-growing community of retail grocers throughout the Dominion.

To present the doings of the grocery world from the viewpoint of the retailer has been, is, and will continue to be our object, but to get that viewpoint accurately it is essential that we should be freshened and kept in touch by information furnished from the practical experience of the grocers throughout the land. No man can run a grocery store two weeks without being confronted with a problem of some sort, be it big or small. Tell us what it was and how you solved it. The majority of grocers have their own ideas on how to dress windows, how to display goods inside the store, how to build up fresh trade, how to run a special sale, how to advertise, how to write show-cards, how many times their stock should be turned over during the year, what are the best methods to adopt for keeping track of goods bought and sold, the amount of stock a small store should carry, on the merits or otherwise of a retail organization, and on several hundred other subjects.

Tell us about them—how you did and are doing.

CANADIAN DAIRYING

A large factor in the prosperity of the country—What is being done in Manitoba and on the Pacific Coast —Better milk the great problem.

THE DAIRY IN ONTARIO

Modern dairying in Ontario is a development of the last quarter of a century, but especially of the past ten years. Though the total product does not exceed $20,000,000 in value, and the field crops of the province show a total of over $142,000,000, dairying has been the stimulus of agriculture in the premier province of the Dominion and saved the farmer from despair through a season of great depression.

Butter, as compared with cheese, is an important factor, as the following tables, taken from the statistical report of the Provincial Government, show:

The problem before the dairying industry in Ontario is how to produce better milk. Years ago the Government took steps to provide competent cheese and butter makers. It has at work this year 35 sanitary inspectors to see that the conditions in and about the factories and creameries are cleanly and sanitary. Education must, of necessity, work from the top down. For years, through official bulletins, farmers' institutes and the press, the work of educating the farmer to improve his raw material has gone on. Now that has become the principal problem.

Views of an Expert.

Nothing more interesting and instructive about the dairying industry of Ontario has been told in recent years than is contained in an address by C. C. James, the very able Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, before the Western Ontario Dairymen's convention in London a few months ago. He said, in part:

"A short time ago the announcement was made in the Toronto papers that the headquarters of a British loan association was to be moved from the Province of Ontario to Manitoba, and the reason given by the manager was this, that he could not longer do business with the farmers of this province. The farmers were becoming so well to do, and they had so much money in the bank, that there was very little loaning to be done and they had to seek new quarters and were going off to Manitoba and the Northwest. And there is something in that.

"There is a small section in the eastern part of Ontario, and ten years ago it had very few cheese factories, and agriculture was in a rather down-hearted condition. Hard times of the worst kind were being felt; but the dairy industry came in, and a few years ago the formed a cheese board in one of the near-by towns, and the sales of cheese on that cheese board this past year aggregated no less an amount than $700,000. Just picture what the effect of that has been. Here is a little community surrounding a small town, and in one year $700,000 in cash is brought in from the sale of only one line of produce, although, of course, that is the main produce of that district. A man who had visited that town ten years ago recently went back there on business in connection with our department, and he told us on his return the change that had taken place there was simply marvellous. A new feeling was in the community. The farmers had progressed, and were comparatively well to do; everything was on the uplift, and the whole was due to the fact that dairying had been brought in and had progressed along proper lines.

Twenty Years Ago.

"It is just twenty-one years ago last week since I went to work in connection with what is now the Department of Agriculture. At that time the only thing we had in connection with the dairy work of the Province of Ontario was two or, I think, three dairy associations; absolutely nothing else. We had no dairy school. We had no dairy department. We had nothing working for the dairy interests of this province but the two or three dairymen's associations. I remember that at the Agricultural College there was the remains of an old discarded cheese factory; nothing being done. The vats and the other apparatus were standing there covered with cobwebs. Then for the first time they appointed an instructor in dairying, and he came into the work just at the time I did.

Spending for Dairying.

"Ten years later, 1896, we had made some progress; not such a very great deal, but we had three dairy schools started. One was at Guelph, and the property had been purchased at Strathroy for the western, and the eastern school was in operation at Kingston. In that year there was expended for dairying work, apart from the general agricultural work, $22,000. We had grown from the small grant, in 1886, of about $8,000 to $22,000. Let us take another jump of ten years and come up to 1906, and we find that last year we expended, over and above the revenues, a sum of not less than $50,000 for purely dairy work in the Province of Ontario. In 1896 we expended altogether for agricultural purposes in this province $191,000, and last year we expended $377,000. So you see that we are making progress. The appropriation for agriculture as a whole has not quite doubled, but the appropriation for dairying work has more than doubled.

Raw Material the Great Problem.

"If we make the same progress in dairying in Ontario in the next ten years that we have in the past, the development of our dairy industry will have assumed enormous proportions. And yet we go on, year after year, holding conventions, having sessions of our dairy schools, sending out our instructors, and when we come back at the beginning of the year the same old questions seem to crop up again and again and again, and year after year we have to face the same difficulty. I will guarantee there have been questions proposed and propounded in connection with this convention that have been brought up and discussed and settled at every convention held for the last twenty-five or thirty years, and you come back to this point every time: what we want is good raw material.

"You can have the most skilful and the best trained buyers in the world, and you can have the best trained and most skilful makers of butter and cheese that any country can produce, but if you have not the producers of the raw material, of what value is it all? Of these three classes, the most important and the biggest class is the producing class, and until we can in some way solve the problem of how to improve the raw material that goes into this great manufactured product, we will have to go on holding conventions, and conducting dairy classes, and holding dairy institutes, and sending out bulletins and reports, and continue to inspect and carry on the work in the same way year after year. We have not solved that question, and we do not seem to be in a fair way of solving it; and until we do solve it we will simply be working at this question from the wrong end.

Doctrine of Cleanliness.

"Until we can get hold of the great producing classes of this country, and make it a necessity that nothing but first-class milk, and the best quality, shall be sent to our factories, we cannot expect to put this dairy industry upon a sure and steadfast basis. How are we going to get into the farmers' homes? How are we going to get hold of the farmer himself? How are we going to compel him to keep his stables clean; to produce the best food for the feeding of his animals; to handle his milk in a clean manner, and to have it delivered at the factory in first-class shape? Are we going to do it by passing laws, and saying that the farmers must do so and so; or are we going to do it by attending these dairy institutes and conventions? We have been holding dairy institutes and conventions for a great many years. They date away back to the year 1883. We have been preaching the doctrine of cleanliness to the farmers of this country over 20 years, and a great deal of improvement, of course, has taken place in that time. But a new class of producers has come up, and we have got to go back and go all over the work again.

The Women Will Do it.

"The first genuine ray of hope I have seen in connection with this work came into this question, as far as I am concerned, in the month of December, when I saw gathered at the Agricultural College 400 or 500 women from the farms of the Province of Ontario. It was the most inspiring convention I ever saw, and the most interesting audience I ever addressed. Just picture to yourself a room like this packed to the doors with women from the farms of the Province of Ontario, and every woman sitting there with her pencil and note book, taking notes of what was going on. I said to myself as I sat there and looked at them, 'We are at last getting a grip on the agricultural community of this country such as we never had before.' When 400 or 500 women from all parts of the Province of Ontario will come from the farm homes to a convention of that kind, meaning business, and to take up questions of vital importance to the agriculturists of this country, there is a hope that at last we are going to do something, and we are going to begin at the right source. The women of this country can do what the men cannot do, and they will make the men of this country do what they won't otherwise do. If the farmers' wives and daughters tell the farmers that they have to put their stables in a clean condition; that they have to carry on their work in a clean way; that they have to keep their implements in a clean state and send the milk to the cheese factory in a clean form, it will be done. We have at last got our foot into the farmer's home.

In the Public Schools.

"If we can deliver the gospel of cleanliness in the farm homes of this country there is hope of doing something; and when I saw that women's convention listening to addresses on the subject of pure milk production, and of what it meant to the health and wealth and happiness of this country, I said: 'This is the best dairy convention I have ever attended, and this is the best work we have ever undertaken in this province.' The farmer's institute work grows very well, but the women's institutes of this country are growing at a tremendous pace. Few people have any idea of the great social revolution that is taking place in connection with the agricultural life of this country. I pleaded with those women to go home and demand that something be done in the rural public schools of this country to help out our agricultural work. I said to them: 'If you will go home and tell your husbands and your brothers that the rural school life of this country has to have some rational education put into it, then we will see it done before some of us die.' If we can get the farmers' wives and daughters to work on this question of pure milk, whether for home consumption or cheese making and butter making, and if at the same time we can have introduced into our rural schools some simple instructions so that the boys and the girls will get some little knowledge of what milk is, and of the first principles and value of milk as a food, and the necessity for its being kept absolutely clean; then, and not till then, will we have this question finally settled.

"This great dairy industry has been the salvation of the Province of Ontario. If it had not been for the development of our butter and cheese industry the conditions of the Province of Ontario would be of a most lamentable nature. It has been the salvation of the agricultural classes, and upon the development of the agricultural classes of this province has been built up all the other industries, including manufacturing.

"Why are we having such good times in this country to-day? Simply because the farmers have been having good times. Why have they been having good times? Largely because of the development of our cheese industry, our butter industry and the allied bacon industry. The beef industry has come up at the same time, but you cannot get away from the importance of the dairy industry. The men who have their hands upon the financial pulse of the country will tell you that if they know the condition of the dairy industry to-day they can tell you what will be the condition of the financial world to-morrow; and those of us who are giving it their closest attention are only too anxious that not only shall we hold what we have gained, but that we shall gain a great deal more. And so I say this question will never be settled until we have effectually settled that question, namely: 'How shall we persuade the farmers of this country to give to our cheese and butter makers milk in a first-class condition?' "

Three Resolutions.

Three significant resolutions were passed at this convention, one calling for the appointment of a dairy chemist and bacteriologist to study the cause of mold in butter; one endorsing a petition of cheese and butter makers that a standard of qualification for their work be established and none be allowed to engage in it without a certificate of competency, and a third, urging that plans and sites for cheese factories and creameries be approved before construction by the Department of Agriculture.

DAIRY INDUSTRY IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

While Quebec cannot justly be called the dairy province of the Dominion, it is quite correctly termed occasionally the butter province. The quantity of butter produced in this part of Canada is larger than the amount turned out in any other section, and the quality, although it has not been up to the standard set by a certain other province, is, on the average, as good, and every year brings with it an improvement. This statement regarding quality is not applicable to all sections of Quebec Province, as the butter made in some portions is of superior quality to that made in any other part of Canada. The improvement mentioned has been especially noticeable during the past three or four years. The quality and style of the butter being produced by the dairy interests in all parts of Quebec is much better this year than it has been in former seasons. The packages are more neatly put up and, the most essential improvement, the butter itself is better. There are more reasons than one for this better state of affairs.

The farmers are gradually learning that the greater the care they take of their milk the better are the results obtained in good, pure, marketable butter. Again, there is in St. Hyacinthe an excellent dairy school which is doing much toward educating the farmers in the province in the making of good butter in the right way. The system of Government inspection is also of great assistance. This will be dealt with later.

Eastern Townships Lead

Quebec's chief butter producing district is that part known as the Eastern Townships. The butter made in this part of the province cannot be excelled in any part of Canada, and many of the provinces cannot equal its good quality. Eastern Townships butter is known better than any other Canadian grade in the English markets, where it has a reputation that is most enviable. This butter is entirely creamery. In fact, most of the butter made in the Province of Quebec is creamery. The making of dairy butter has not assumed large proportions, most of what is made being large rolls which are used for local trade. Quebec depends a great deal upon Ontario and Manitoba for dairy.

Divided Into Districts.

As stated, the Eastern Townships district is the chief butter producing portion of Quebec. The entire province is divided into districts, each having its own particular style of butter, and each with its own reputation. There are, for instance, the St. Hyacinthe, Bedford, Cowansville, Sherbrooke, Intercolonial, Quebec, and North Shore districts, each with its own individuality, if the term may be used in this connection.

Lion's Share of Export Trade.

Canada's export butter trade is large, and the Province of Quebec supplies the greater part of the exports. Opinions differ as to just how much of the butter exported is made in Quebec. It would be safe to say, however, that from 65 per cent. to 75 per cent. is produced in that province. Surely, under the circumstances, one is justified in calling Quebec the butter province of Canada.

During the past few years the make of butter in Quebec has not been so large as heretofore, owing to the high ruling prices of cheese. Many factories are equipped for the making of either butter or cheese, 75 per cent., possibly, are so constructed, and when cheese prices ruled continually high it was not surprising that many factorymen should devote their entire energies to the making of cheese.

The Cheese Industry.

The cheese industry has not reached the proportions attained by butter. There is a great deal of cheese made in Quebec, but Ontario leads in quantity and more or less so in quality.

Quebec does not make much more than half the quantity Ontario does, but what is made is good—which is not an insinuation against the Ontario make. In Quebec Province, however, the packing of cheese, for example, has not been brought down to the fine art it is in Ontario, while factorymen have not learned all the little pointers which are employed to such advantage by their competitors in the sister province. Education is coming with the years, and it will not be long when Quebec cheese will refuse to take second place to any made in the Dominion.

Shipping of Green Cheese.

There has been some complaint recently by Government inspectors to the effect that their work is hampered much through factorymen shipping their cheese too quickly. At a late meeting between the inspectors and the dairymen of the province, the former stated that on many occasions they had entered cheese factories to inspect the make only to find that there was not a box in the place. Every cheese had been shipped. The inspectors believe that this state of affairs should not be allowed to continue, as it would not be for the ultimate good of the industry. The factory men say that they are obliged to ship the cheese as soon as made owing to the strong demand there is for it and in order to keep up with their competitors. The inspectors say that the factorymen injure themselves by shipping the cheese too green. There is loss in weight, loss in appearance, and loss in quality. The make of the whole country is likely to be judged by the cheese from one factory and as a consequence if green cheese are exported and cast aside as not up to the standard, what will become of the reputation Canada is so rapidly building up as a cheese-making country? There is more or less difference of opinion on this matter. Some contend that the cheese should not be shipped from the factory for at least ten days after it is made, in order that it may have the chance to be properly cured. Others believe that there are not always the facilities in the factory for the proper curing of the cheese and in their opinion it would be better in every case for the cheese to be shipped to the warehouses of exporters in the city where it could be cured as it should. But suppose city exporters had orders for the other side which required immediate fulfilment—would they not be tempted to ship the uncured cheese in their possession?

System of Inspection.

The inauguration by the Government of an adequate, well organized system of inspection has met with the approval of all concerned in the dairy industry.

There are in Quebec in the neighborhood of twenty-six hundred cheese and butter factories. About half of this number are "syndicated" and these are under the inspection of some sixty-five inspectors each of whom is responsible for about twenty or twenty-five factories. These inspectors are responsible to one of two chiefs, J. D. Leclaire, butter, and E. Bourbeau, cheese.

The inspectors are supposed to visit each factory under their charge at least once a month. They look after sanitary conditions; learn how the milking is done; criticize the methods in making the cheese and butter, and generally see that the factories and creameries are conducted on hygienic principles.

The factories remaining cannot be syndicated owing to local conditions, but the Government has appointed five or six inspectors to look after them. Possibly with the growth of the dairy industry they may be organized under such a system of inspection as prevails for the factories in the syndicate.

The Dairy School.

A word about the dairy school at St. Hyacinthe is in place. Much is being done through it to raise the standard of butter and cheese in Quebec. Farmers' sons and daughters may attend and be instructed in the latest and most sanitary methods of making butter and cheese and the principles of the school are in a very few years in practice all over the province. One of the ideas being carried out at the school at present is the pasteurization of cream. The instructors are devoting much attention to the teaching of this gospel.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

While the "sea of mountains" idea of British Columbia has long since been exploded, there is still abroad in the rest of Canada rather an erroneous idea of the country, its condition, capabilities and the extent to which it has been developed, especially in agricultural lines. So used are eastern producers, for instance, to shipping their surplus stock of butter west to this province, that it might be news to them that butter-making was carried on to any considerable extent here at all. In this brief article it is proposed to set forth a few facts which will dispel that idea effectually.

It is a safely conservative estimate to place the butter production of the creameries of British Columbia for 1907 at one and a half million pounds. Compared with the total production of the creameries of any of the three Northwest provinces, this is a figure not to be ashamed of, when it is considered that dairying is being given great prominence and attention in the whole prairie country, and that Government-aided creameries, Government schools, and other accessories have been placed at the disposal of the farming community in those provinces.

Where the Creameries Are.

There are sixteen creameries in operation in the province. Of the number, four are on Vancouver island, one on Salt Springs island, six in the Fraser valley, exclusive of the New Westminster creamery, two moderate-sized ones in Vancouver city, two in the Okanagan valley. The largest output of any of these is estimated at 250,000 pounds annually. Many of the smaller do not put up more than 25,000 to 40,000 pounds.

To reduce the output in pounds to more concrete examples, the 1,500,000 pounds estimated as the production of these sixteen creameries for the present year, would be 750 tons. Taking it at a fair estimated average of 24,000 pounds per car, it would take nearly 65 cars, or two or three train-loads to transport the whole production. As the Northwest is in the habit of sending a large proportion of its surplus creamery butter to British Columbia, it will be interesting to compare the number of carloads sent from there with the above figures of butter produced in the province.

Then it is to be remembered that no account has been taken in this at all of the production of dairy butter, which is general throughout all the districts of the province where farming is carried on. The securing of data even approximating the actual production of dairy butter in the province would be hard, for the reason that much of it never reaches even retail dealers' hands. Very little, and in many months none at all, reaches the hands of the jobber. But in the whole of the Fraser valley from Agassiz to the sea there is more or less dairying carried on in addition to the support given the creameries. In such interior districts as Cariboo, Kamloops, the Okanagan, Similkameen, Nicola and the settlements on Vancouver Island and the islands of the gulf, there is production sufficient in most cases for local consumption. Many small towns and settlements adjacent to dairying districts receive all or the greater part of their supply locally. It is fair to say that as much dairy butter as creamery stock is made in British Columbia.

Some idea of the butter production of the province may be gathered from the foregoing. Turning to consumption, it is well known that very large quantities are constantly imported. The reason for this is not that local production is small, but that from the shipping centres of the province many outside markets are supplied, and demands are made for supplies from quarters not to be classed as home consumption. The Yukon district is perhaps the greatest customer from the outside, supplied in its entirety from Vancouver and Victoria. The output of one creamery used to be entirely shipped to the north. The finest class of butter only is sent north, and the local fresh creamery can best be shipped in good shape for that trade. Another great factor which has to be regularly supplied from the coast cities is the shipping trade. Many steamers ply regularly from the ports of this province and these in most cases have to be provisioned regularly here. The whole fleet of coasting steamers gets its supplies here also, and that is in itself no small item. These outside consumers are regular customers and the quantity used in this way is constantly growing.

To consider the classes of population in the province is to realize that a very large percentage are consumers. Over two-thirds of the entire present population of British Columbia is to be found in the four coast cities. Then the largest centres of population in the interior are mining towns. Nearly all the smaller towns are either mining towns, lumbering towns or railroad points, all heavy consumers. Of the rest of the population, there is a large percentage scattered in logging camps all along the coast and in the interior, while quite a number follow fishing, and there are isolated mining camps and lone prospectors scattered everywhere. This province has so many people so situated that they cannot secure fresh milk, that importations of condensed milk are very large, the province being the best customer of the condensed milk and cream factories. That indicates also a large number who must buy butter and some of these require butter put up in hermetically sealed tins, actually "canned butter." Some of the trade regularly requires a quantity of this tinned butter for the north and for the miners' trade of the interior.

As the province does not produce anything like the half of its butter requirements, it is dependent on large importations. As stated, the Government creameries send large quantities, but even that, with the dairy butter also brought in from Northwest provinces does not suffice. There is some eastern butter brought in also, though this is becoming less every year, from various causes, one being that at the season it is most required it is hardest to get, and another that the butter of eastern Canada finds an enlarging market in the Old Country.

British Columbia is so fortunately situated that it can reach all the butter producing countries of the world. For instance, at the present season (the first two months of the year) when supplies are shortest from local production and no fresh butter is obtainable from the Northwest, New Zealand and Australia, from their antipodean position are at the height of production. Later on, when this source is becoming exhausted, the dairying districts of California are coming in to full production. Then the local supply of fresh grass butter, much of it dairy butter of high quality, comes in. Finally, in the autumn the June to September make of the Government creameries of the Northwest is brought in and placed in cold storage for the winter stock.

One feature of butter production in British Columbia is especially worthy of note, if it is not the most noteworthy; that is the length of the season of production. No province in Canada has such a long season in which dairy cattle may be fed on natural grasses run in the open and the production kept up. From very early in the spring the cattle can run and as soon as the rainy season is over there is no need to house them. Late in the fall, until the rain again commences, the grass is still good and even after rains are frequent the cattle may run, though housed at nights. Another feature is the enormous growth of grass, due in the coast districts to the humid climate. Clover is indigenous to the soil and is a luxurious growth from March till November. This rank vegetation is also ideal for ensilage and dairy farmers are fast adopting this method of putting up winter feed for their cattle, at once a convenient and cheap supply. The only disadvantage of dairying which enters into the industry as a serious obstacle is the price of mill stuffs. These are largely, almost altogether brought by rail from the mills of the Northwest, and from the two or three mills in the Okanagan. Some supplies of cocoanut oil-cake, a substitute for oil-cake proper, are brought from the south and this is a very useful article. But with the extension of grain shipping to this coast from Alberta, a milling industry is likely to be established on a large scale and mill-stuffs will then be cheaper. Some rough grains are grown by farmers themselves, but not in quantity to meet their own demand.

The creameries of the province are in most cases run for and by the farmers themselves. One or two have received some small Provincial Government aid. Most of them are very prosperous. In ordinary seasons the price, to the trade is not less than 25 cents, though occasionally it may drop a cent or two below that figure for a short time. On the other hand the price for all the butter produced by local creameries this winter has been 35c. per pound to the trade, with 40c. for a short time. At no time for some months has it been below 30c. This is a big wholesale price, and the supply has never yet been such that there was not keen demand. With attention being paid to agriculture on all sides in this province, the development of intensive farming, and the increasing demand for the product, buttermaking is sure of large expansion in the immediate future.

W. Saylor, of Trenton, is thoroughly renovating his store, putting plate glass in his window, among other improvements. H. Kemp is doing a good business in the grocery department.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY IN MANITOBA

For the reason that Manitoba farmers have up to the present devoted most of their attention to the growing of wheat and have neglected mixed farming and the raising of stock, the dairy industry in the "postage stamp" province is still in its infancy. The Province of Manitoba does not yet produce enough butter and cheese to supply the local demand and is accordingly obliged to bring in supplies from Ontario. This is a condition of affairs that cannot last forever; whether they want to do so or not the Manitoba farmers are being forced to take up mixed farming and the butter and cheese production of the province is increasing every year. Recognizing the importance of affording all possible encouragement to the dairy industry, the Manitoba Government have established a dairy school in connection with the new agricultural college and have also lent support to the Manitoba Dairy Association. The result is seen in the increased production of cheese and butter and the better and more scientific methods that are now employed.

Extent of the Industry.

There are in Manitoba at the present time some 36 cheese factories and 21 creameries, distributed as follows:

Of these creameries, only four operate during the whole season, viz., the National and Crescent, in Winnipeg; the Brandon creamery and the Trappists's at St. Norbert. The others operate only during part of the season. That the operating season will not long be so limited is shown by the steady increase in the output each year. Through the courtesy of the Deputy Minister of Agriculture The Canadian Grocer is enabled to present the figures for 1906, although the report for that year is still only in manuscript form.

Dairy butter marketed by farmers	2,910,989 lbs.	4,698,882 lbs.
Average price of dairy butter	17c. per lb.	17.8c. per lb.
Total value dairy butter marketed	$494,621.72	$840,006.85
Creamery butter manufactured	1,249,967 lbs.	1,552,812 lbs.
Average price creamery butter	22c. per lb.	22c. per lb.
Total value creamery butter	$279,969.43	$342,485.48
Cheese production	1,201,382 lbs.	1,501,729 lbs.
Average price cheese	10.6c. per lb.	13c. per lb.
Total value cheese production	$127,346.49	$195,244.51

Total Value Dairy Products, 1905.

Dairy butter	$494,621 72
Creamery butter	274,969 43
Total butter production	$769,591 15
Cheese	127,346 49
Grand total	$896,937.64
	1906.
Dairy butter	$840,006 85
Creamery butter	342,495 48
Total butter production	$1,182,502 33
Grand total	$1,377,746 84

From these figures it will be seen that the year 1906 saw a steady and satisfactory increase in the production of all dairy products and those who are best qualified to judge expect an even greater increase during 1907, as the farmers of Manitoba are being forced into mixed farming and are beginning to realize the profits that are to be derived from the dairy. It is only a question of time until Manitoba is in a position to supply her own market with dairy products and to ship them west to the new provinces. But with the rapid increase in population and the consequent increase in demand for dairy products, it will be many years before Western Canada can have cheese or butter to export. The home market will absorb the entire production for many years to come.

BUTTER COLORING LEGAL IN THE STATES.

The Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture in the United States, in a letter regarding the application of the pure food law to the manufacture and coloring of butter, says: "The department has ruled that since the coloring of butter is specifically allowed by federal statute the presence of color in the butter need not be declared. Of course, the color which is used in the butter must not be of a poisonous character.

"With regard to what is poisonous we have experts making inquiry, and will publish a list as soon as we can get agreement among the three secretaries."

CARRIERS WON.

A London cable announces that the Court of Appeal has given judgment in favor of the Allan line in a freightage dispute. The question involved the payment of the carriage from Milwaukee to Montreal of 366 bags of flour damaged by the stranding of the Hibernian at Newfoundland and sold there. Tasker & Company, the plaintiffs, claimed they should pay only on the flour delivered.

BUILDING UP A TEA TRADE

From an address by George Lewis, Chicago, tea expert, before a gathering of grocers.

Tea drinkers are diminishing in America because of the thoughtless manner in which tea is retailed, and the grocer is hurting a branch of his own business which can be made an important part. What the silk department is to the dry goods store, the tea department can be made to the grocery store. And the successful grocer, even if only a small merchant, will make departments of his business. He will have a tea department, a canned goods department, a sugar department, a soap department, and so on. He will learn the fine points of his business, and he will know something of teas. The merchant who rests on his sight to buy tea will usually fail to satisfy his customers. Colored rice, very attractive to the eyes, has been sold more than once for tea.

Let me tell you how the first tea store started. There are those grocers who will buy a tea for fifteen or twenty cents and sell it for 50 or 60 cents. I want to say that is next to robbery. It is not square dealing. It is equally as bad as holding someone up with a gun. The clerk of such a grocer discovered what the merchant was paying for his tea; he learned the brand and he knew every customer of that merchant. He conceived the idea of buying that tea on his own account, taking it to his merchants' customers in small trial packages and when they were satisfied that it was just as good as the tea sold at the grocery, he offered to sell them at the old price and to give them a pretty cup and saucer with every pound of tea purchased. He got the business and that was the start of the first tea store. The grocer cannot afford to give other than a square deal to his customers; he should be satisfied with a fair profit and should not try to make up on tea what he loses on sugar. In answer to a question I once defined a tea store as a store which featured tea and besides carried sugars; a grocery was a store which featured sugar and besides carried tea.

Make a specialty of tea and be satisfied with a fair profit and then, what is equally important, guard against the loss of strength and flavor of tea. Don't you suppose that the little Japs have a good reason for packing their teas air tight? Are you not aware that the ordinary chest of tea deteriorates by being left open in the back part or any part of the store? Don't you know that tea is sensitive to the odors and the conditions surrounding it? It will absorb the smell of onions in less than twenty-four hours. It loses its flavor when exposed to the air, and no matter what price you pay or how meritorious may be the tea, if you do not keep it in air-tight packages the tea loses its virtue and its flavor.

I have made the tea business a life study, and my business at present is cupping and grading teas. Yet were I to go many days without cupping, my taste would lose some of its cunning. The successful man, no matter what his line, must keep everlastingly at things, reaching out for new idea and keeping a little in advance of his business and the times. You may not become a great tea expert, but you can improve over your present status surprisingly so, and you can do more at this age than any other body or class of men to elevate the tea business to its proper place.

NO GUESSERS WANTED.

When I hire a man I want a hustler—a man who will really do something. I presume most employers are the same way, says a writer in Department Store Chat.

For five or six months I have been trying to get a place for an acquaintance of mine—and I cannot get him a thing. He's a good man, too—knows his business, is a good worker and has as clean a record as any man on earth.

The whole trouble in his case is that he says: "I guess so." And he does not say it promptly or positively, but sort of drawly, like this: "I— guess—so." Now that doesn't sound as if it amounted to much, but it has knocked him out of a round dozen of good jobs.

An employer asks: "Can you do this?" The answer is: "I guess so." That settles it right there—it's not guesses the employer wants. He wants to know. You may have ability to burn, but unless you can show some confidence in yourself you will get little chance to demonstrate the fact. Don't guess—be sure, and, being sure, don't be afraid to say so.

CLOVES OF ZANZIBAR

How the Spice is Grown and gathered. The Industry and its history, the country and its past.

One of the most interesting of foreign trade representatives is Alex. McWillie, of Toronto, the representative outside of the United States and Canada of H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburg. He was in Toronto recently; just returned from another trip around the world. Mr. McWillie is a very unassuming man, but he tells some wonderful tales of the road. On his latest pilgrimage he served a dinner of Heinz pure foods to the King and crown princes of Siam, which is one of the oldest reigning families in the world. But that is not for the telling here. He sojourned for a little in Zanzibar, the principal source of the world's present supply of cloves. He told a great deal that was interesting about this strange country and its chief industry and furnished The Canadian Grocer with some interesting photographs.

To understand Zanzibar one must know a little of its history. Centuries ago it was part of a great Arab kingdom that included a considerable part of Arabia and practically the entire east African coast south of the Red Sea. This power was broken by the Portuguese after rounding the Cape of Good Hope. The remnants of that Arab glory flamed up again under the leadership of the ruler of Muscat. It was divided late in the last century and Zanzibar, with its sister island, Pemba, and a considerable portion of the east African coast, went to one son of the late ruler. The European powers took a hand, and in 1890 Zanzibar became a British protectorate, Great Britain surrendering to France all claim to Madagascar, and to Germany Heligoland. The present sultan is practically a pensioner of the British Government.

The islands are divided among large Arab landholders, who are the aristocracy. Great Britain abolished the slave trade in 1897. The total population of the two islands is estimated at 200,000.

Capital of the Dark Continent.

The city of Zanzibar has not a very savory reputation. Prof. Drummond, who was there on his way to the interior of Africa, said of it: "Zanzibar is the focus of all East African exploration. No matter where you are going in the interior, you must begin at Zanzibar. Oriental in its appearance, Mohammedan in its religion, Arabian in its morals, this cesspool of wickedness is a fit capital for the dark continent. But Zanzibar is Zanzibar simply because it is the only apology for a town on the whole coast. An immense outfit is required to penetrate this shopless and foodless land and here only can the traveler make up his caravan. The ivory and slave trades have made caravaning a profession and everything the explorer wants is to be had in these bazaars, from a tin of sardines to a repeating rifle. Here these black villains, the porters, the necessity and the despair of travelers, the scum of old slave gangs and the fugitives from justice from every tribe congregate for hire. And if there is one thing on which African travelers are for once agreed, it is that for laziness, ugliness, stupidness and wickedness, these men are not to be matched on any continent in the world. Their one strong point is that they will engage themselves for the Victoria Nyanza or for the grand tour of the Tanganyika with as little ado as a chamounix guide volunteers for the Jardim; but this singular avidity is mainly due to the fact that each man cherishes the hope of running away at the earliest opportunity. Were it only to avoid requiring to employ these gentlemen, having them for one's sole company month after month, seeing them transgress every commandment in turn before your eyes—you yourself being powerless to check, except by a wholesale breach of the sixth—it would be worth while to seek another route into the heart of Africa."

The city comprises two distinct quarters, Shangani, the centre of trade and residence of the sultan, and the eastern suburb, occupied by the lowest classes—fishermen, porters, slaves, etc., with a total joint population estimated in 1887 at about 100,000. Viewed from the sea, the place presents a pleasant prospect, with its glittering mosques, palace, white houses, barracks, huts and round towers. But the interior is a labyrinth of narrow, filthy streets, winding through a dense mass of hovels.

History of the Clove Trade.

Four-fifths of the world's crop of cloves are grown in the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba.. The clove tree is a native of the small group of islands in the Indian archipelago called the Moluccas, or Spice Islands. It was long cultivated by the Dutch in Amboyna, one of the group, and two or three small neighboring islands. Cloves were one of the principal Oriental spices which early excited the cupidity of western commercial communities, having been the basis of a rich and lucrative trade from an early part of the Christian era. The Portuguese, by doubling the Cape of Good Hope, about 1500, obtained possession of the principal portion of the clove trade, which they continued to hold for nearly a century, when, in 1605, they were expelled from the Spice Islands by the Dutch. That power, to hold the trade, destroyed the trees outside of the island of Amboyna, and enslaved the cultivators there. In 1770 a French naturalist got from an obscure island of the Spice group 450 nutmeg stalks and 10,000 nutmegs in blossom, together with 70 clove trees, and distributed them among the French islands in the Indian Sea. Most of them died, but a few survived. In 1818 the clove tree was introduced into Zanzibar, from Mauritius and Bourbon, and by 1835 had almost supplanted the native cocoanut. In 1839 the crop amounted to barely 30,000 pounds, but in 1859 it was 7,000,000 pounds, and in 1895 the exports of Zanzibar and Pemba amounted to 18,825,000 pounds. The clove is grown also in Amboyna, Java, Sumatra, Reunion, Guiana, and the West India islands.

Some Statistics.

The Statesman's Year Book gives the exports of cloves from Zanzibar by value, from 1897 to 1904, as follows :— 1897, £92,416 ; 1898, £143,730 ; 1899, £197,232 ; 1900, £158,148 ; 1901, £164,-358 ; 1902, £137,172 ; 1903, £186,399 ; 1904, £332,429. By weight, the exports are given for five years as follows: 1897, 99,985 cwt.; 1898, 96,234 cwt.; 1899, 148,155 cwt.; 1900, 105,251 cwt,; 1901, 106,804 cwt. It will be seen that the crop varies a great deal.

A Luxury of the Ancients.

Of cloves in Europe we hear first about 175-180 A.D., in the reign of the Emporer Aurelian, when they are mentioned in history as imported into Alexandria from India, the isthmus of Suez and the Red Sea forming then, as now, the great water highway along which flowed the traffic of the east. By the Javanese they were obtained from the Moluccas, their native land, and taken to the peninsula of Malacca, thence they were transported to Calicut, the once famous capital of Malabar. From there they were moved to the western shores of India, and crossing the Arabian sea found their way up the Red sea to the Egyptian ports, and from there the way to the European countries was easy.

When we consider the travels of this spice, and the many vicissitudes of such a journey, it doesn't seem strange that in those days cloves were found only in the houses of the very wealthy. Undoubtedly the ancients valued the clove more highly than we do, but they put it to more uses. For instance, they were in the habit of stuffing fowls with cloves before roasting them, and they introduced them into all sorts of sauces and highly seasoned dishes. Furthermore, they, some of them, believed that an orange thickly stuck with cloves was a sure preventive of infectious diseases, so the demand for them, as well as the difficulty in getting them, served to keep the price up. Indeed, in England as late as the fifteenth century, they were occasionally sold for $10 per pound—a higher price, as one chronicler of those times tells us, than was asked for a good, fat sheep.

How the Clove Grows.

The clove tree belongs to the order of Myrtaceae, which includes in its family the guava, the pomegranate, and the rose apple. And the name "clove" is from the French word "clou," which means nail. The tree is a beautiful evergreen, which frequently grows to a height of from 40 to 50 feet, having large, oblong leaves and crimson flowers growing at the end of small branches in clusters of from 10 to 20. The clove of commerce is the unexpanded flower-buds, dried. At the first forming of the cloves they are quite white, then light green, and finally pink when they are gathered. The gathering process is an interesting though simple one. Beneath the trees are spread great pieces of white cloth, and then with bamboo sticks the tree is gently shaken till all the cloves drop.

How it is Cured.

Then they are dried in the sun, being turned and tossed about daily, till they acquire the rich black color that proclaims them ready for their travels. The bearing life of a clove tree is about 60 years ; it begins to bear at the age of ten years, if everything has gone well with it, and continues its good work till the age of 75 years, after which it sort of goes into a decline.

The actual clove season, that is, the period during which the produce of the trees ripens and is picked, dried, and brought to market, extends from September to March, and is at its height in January.

Tree Needs Care.

The clove tree is one which requires a good deal of care and attention, and which well repays the labor bestowed upon it ; it is, of course, important that the roots should be kept clear of the weeds and tangled undergrowth, which in this more than in other climates so rapidly grow and spread amongst them, but it is in the picking season especially that the scarcity of labor is felt. Experiments have shown that the buds should be picked when the calyx tubes or stems are of a pink color ; if they are left until the stems become red the latter will be brittle, and the flowers apt to open during the process of drying, with the result that many of the heads, which are composed of the imbricated petals, will drop off and the sample deteriorate in value. If picked too green, on the other hand, the dried cloves will be shrivelled. The buds grow on the trees in bunches, and in each bunch there may be buds in various stages of ripeness ; to obtain a good and uniform sample the trees should be carefully watched, and the buds picked as each reaches the certain condition in which experience has shown that it can best be submitted to the subsequent process of drying. To properly carry out this method, however, would require a far larger number of laborers than either the Arab landowner is able to employ or the country to supply.

ZANZIBAR—The Operator is not Barbering ; He is Catching Things.

The price which the Zanzibar clove commands in the home markets is never so high as that of the Penang and Amboyna varieties, chiefly, it is supposed, because sufficient attention is not paid to the important process of drying, and the cloves being, in a majority of cases, exposed for too long a time in a tropical sun much of the oil is evaporated. Experiments which have been and are still being carried on in this respect tend to show that, with proper care, as good a sample can be produced in Zanzibar as in any other part of the world.

THE EPIC OF THE BEAN

History, Agriculture, Production, Treatment and Marketing of the Bean in Canada.

By Victor Lauriston, Chatham.

A straight line, drawn from Toronto to Sarnia, would mark with approximate accuracy the northern and eastern limits of the Ontario bean industry. For, important as this industry has become in the last fifty years, frost, the most formidable enemy of the bean, has limited and still limits, it to the narrow compass of a few western countries. The estimate of experienced dealers is that of the entire crop, fully seven-eighths comes from the four counties of Kent, Elgin, Essex and Middlesex. Within this narrow space, however, there was last year produced a crop of approximately 920,000 bushels, valued at over $1,000,000, an acreage of 57,000 being devoted to the industry.

It was in Harwich township, in Kent, that the industry had its birth. The bean, as a commercial proposition, was introduced in 1852 by enterprising American farmers, Ransoms and Handys, who saw in the fertile fields and mild climate of this district something—yet only a little—of the possibilities which have since been realized. The experiment proved a success. Through the intervening fifty-five years the annual output has grown, and with it the area devoted to the crop; till this year the estimate of a prominent dealer places the probable output at a million and a quarter bushels, a crop of which, it is safe to say, the pioneers of the industry never even dreamed.

Kinds of Beans.

Of last year's crop of 920,000 bushels, all save approximately 40,000 consisted of what is known as the pea bean. Half the 40,000 were yellow eyes; whilst the balance comprised marrows, red kidneys, white kidneys, black turtle soups and mediums, the latter scoring a minimum of about 3,000 bushels. Yet the white medium was the first bean grown in Canada. Introduced in 1852, it was grown exclusively up to 1860. In that year the pea bean was introduced, and rapidly achieved the pre-eminence which it has ever since retained.

To the uninitiated, the phrase, "three-pound picker prime pea bean," and kindred expressions will convey no meaning. Such terms are mere jargon to people whose knowledge of beans is limited to a mere dinner acquaintance. To the full-fledged bean man, however, these phrases carry deep and special significance, a significance readily translated into dollars and cents.

Basis of Marketing.

All beans are bought on what is called a hand-picked basis—usually, in bean literature, abbreviated to h.p. H.p. beans are the highest grade, being the best price, and are practically clear of damaged beans, dirt and waste material—waste being limited to the nominal percentage of 1½. Other qualities are called "primes," and are designated as 2, 3, and 4-pound pickers, according to whether there are, respectively, two, three or four pounds of damaged beans, dirt and waste to the bushel. The value of these various grades of prime beans is arrived at by deducting five cents from the hand-picked price for each pound of waste that can be taken out of a bushel. For instance, two-pound pickers would be 10c., and three-pound pickers 15c. less than the hand-picked price. The hand-picked price may vary; but the prices for the inferior varieties are pretty nearly always regulated accordingly.

Seed Time and Harvest.

As a rule, beans are planted early in June—between the 1st and the 10th, for even in the mild west, frost up to about June 4th is quite frequent; and frost is the one enemy which beans have most to dread. To obtain the best results, beans should be planted on gravel or loamy land. For heavy clay, unless the soil will pulverize well, the pea bean is naturally unfitted; though red or white kidneys, or marrows, stand a better chance of thriving in such soil, being a stronger stock. Beans should preferably be planted on old sod or clover, plowed as deeply as possible. Old growers declare that sod is the secret of a good harvest. Nowadays the average crop is eighteen bushels to the acre. In the '60's a crop of 40 bushels to the acre was not uncommon ; a less crop was, in fact, considered disappointing. In those days the country was new, sod was available, and beans were nearly always planted upon sod. Even now, where dos is available, when sown with choice, hand-picked beans, a crop of from 25 to 40 bushels to the acre may be safely looked for. The theory is simple, By the time the beans begin to flower the roots will have reached the sod, and consequently the most stimulating and nutritious part of the soil is available just when they need it.

CLOVES OF ZANZIBAR—Cloves Drying in the Sun.

CLOVES OF ZANZIBAR—A Clove Tree.

Aid of Machinery.

From planting to harvesting, the farmer is to-day aided by specially devised machinery. Machines for planting were, indeed, in use as far back as 1854, Mr. Ransom, one of the original bean growers, having introduced the first, while the late Mr. Stevens, father of N. H. Stevens, the well-known president of the Canada Flour Mills Company, had the second. One-horse cultivators were also then in use. They have since been improved on, so that it is now possible to drive a span of horses and cultivate two rows of beans at a time.

In the course of growth, the crop is subject to another enemy—the bean rust, which a short time ago made its appearance in Michigan, and is spreading to this country. Under this general name, there are included three distinct diseases, practically all of fungus growth and parasitic in nature. In the opinion of expert growers, however, these diseases can be effectively combatted by using for seed only the very best hand-picked beans, perfectly white of skin, and neither stained nor marred, and planting on a deep plowing of sod.

Value in the Bright Bean.

Harvesting may begin about August 20th, or may take place as late as October 1st, all depending upon the growth of the beans and the soil in which they are planted. As a rule, it takes place during the first two weeks of September. The beans should have an opportunity to ripen thoroughly; and after they are cut or pulled, they should lie in piles until the stalks are so dry that there can be no danger of heating after they are stored in the barn.

In the harvesting and threshing processes, special machinery is very much used. In the early days there was no harvesting machinery beyond what nature provided in the way of muscles and fingers ; the beans when ripe were pulled by hand, the work being paid for at the rate of one cent per row for every ten rods. Since then, however, a device has been introduced whereby beans are cut by a knife run into the roots; and by this means a team will now cut from five to ten acres in a day. Machinery is available also for shaking out the dirt, and loading the crop upon wagons; while at the end of it all the beans are threshed by a special threshing machine.

The Cleaning Process.

Next—often after the lapse of months—the beans pass into the hands of the dealer. Here the picking takes place. In the process of picking—that is, sorting out the waste—machinery is sometimes used, the first machines for this purpose having been invented about eight years ago. They take out all dirt and rough beans; but, where beans are merely discolored, and in all other respects smooth and sound, the machines are ineffective. Consequently, their use is limited rather to the better class of beans. In the machines, revolving rubber rods are used, the beans running between two of these rods on a decline. The smooth beans slide over readily enough, while the rough beans, together with any pieces of dirt or clay, stick to the rubber and go through.

Most of the beans are picked on individual machines, operated by girls. The chief feature of the mechanism is a cotton belt eight inches wide, which is kept moving by a treadle, the concern being operated by girl-power, somewhat after the fashion of a sewing machine. The unpicked beans take passage on this cotton belt, which is kept continually in motion, and during their progress the girl in charge, with deft fingers, sorts the good from the evil. The elect go one way, and the other variety—split and discolored beans, together with dirt and stones—take another direction, and never even dream what their destiny might have been had they been good. Every night each girl's quota of bad beans is weighed up and credited to her, payments being made weekly. The girls are paid, as a rule, three cents per pound for the bad and split beans and other waste picked out, their daily wage ranging from 75c. to $1.25. To some of these girls the industry will furnish employment all the year round, since many farmers do not market their beans till the next crop is practically ready. One large establishment employs steadily from 25 to 35 girls, while during the busy season, from Sept. 1st to March 1st, they usually double the number.

The Markets.

The market in Canada now reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In the far west, however, beyond Calgary, Canadian dealers are at a certain disadvantage, the recent increase of 15c. in the Canadian tariff being, they declare, still insufficient to enable them to cope with the Californian product. The practically prohibitive duty of 45c. per bushel serves tp exclude Canadian beans from the United States. There is a market for them, however, in Newfoundland and the West Indies, while shipments have been made to much further distances. Indeed, a few years ago the Canada Flour Mills Company of Chatham, made two shipments simultaneously, one to Cape Nome, on the Pacific coast, and another to Cape Colony, South Africa, which, by the time they had reached their destinations had traveled a combined distance equal to two-thirds the circuit of the globe.

AFRICAN VANILLA CULTURE.

Cultivation and Preparation in German East Africa.

Richard Gomolla in the "Tropenflanzer."

The best variety of vanilla comes from vanilla planifolia, which requires a mucky, porous soil. The plant thrives up to a height of about 1,600 feet above sea level and as its fleshy roots do not penetrate deep into the soil it requires only a proportionately thin layer of soil. The plant bears merchantable fruit in the third year, sometimes even in the second year, which require from seven to eight months to mature, and the harvest takes place from April to June. Five to seven harvests are made from the same plant before it is exhausted. New plants must not be planted in the same place as the old.

Protection against wind, also shade, is of great importance for the growth of the plant, and therefore the fields must be surrounded by trees and hedges. Grubs and snails are enemies of the vanilla plant; the former eat the roots, the latter the young sprouts and beans. While in the third year only about one-tenth part of the plants blossom, the percentage increases from year to year up to the seventh. The cultivation of vanilla in German East Africa is impeded by the absence of insects which are instrumental in fructifying the vanilla blossoms. Each separate flower has therefore to be fructified by human hands, the cover of the stigma being raised by means of a thin little rod and the pollen, which is just above the cover, is pressed against the stigma.

When the young beans have grown to the length of a finger, they must be closely inspected and all defective ones must be cut off. The beans mature from seven to eight months after the fructification process. The ripe beans have a yellowish green color.

The way of preparing the beans varies, but an ever-increasing temperature is required to dry them and obtain the well-known brown-black color. In this way the thin-skinned bean with its fine aroma is produced. If hot water is used for heating the beans, they are placed in baskets and immersed in it. The water has a temperature of 80 to 84 degrees R. Afterwards the beans are packed into wooden boxes, which are lined with woolen cloth, and closed. The next day they must have a glassy appearance. They are then again wrapped in dark woolen covers and laid in the sun to dry. If the weather is rainy, they must be dried in a dry-room at a temperature of 50 degrees R., but an after drying in an airy room of from two to four weeks is necessary. After that the dry beans are packed in tin boxes, where they, however, require close inspection, and have to be repacked every week in order to remove diseased beans or such which have become moldy.

The value of the beans is measured by their length, which is from 12 to 25 centimeters. For shipment they are sorted, bound in bundles, and put into tight but not soldered tin boxes, which are now lined with paper instead of tinfoil, as fomerly. Black mold is especially dangerous to the beans, while white mold is rather harmless.

TAPIOCA.

What it is, How it is Made and Where it Comes From.

Tapioca is of particular interest just now, as there is comparatively little on the market and the demand seems growing larger.

Tapioca is produced from a plant known as cassava or manioc, which is a native of Brazil. The plant is easily transplanted and thrives in all tropical countries. It grows very rapidly, attaining maturity in six months.

Tapioca, the commercial product, is a farinaceous substance prepared from cassava starch, which is made from the large, tuberous roots of the plant. The plant itself is bushy and reaches a height of six or seven feet. The stems are white, brittle and full of pitch. The roots are large and resemble turnips somewhat. Some of them weigh as much as thirty pounds. From three to eight roots grow in a cluster. Both plants and roots contain a milky fluid, which is an acid poison. This is easily dissipated by heat and extracted. The roots are washed and grated to a pulp. The pulp is spread on iron plates and heated. The heat is sufficient to cause a partial rupture of the starchy granules, which burst into what is known as flake tapioca.

Seed pearl tapioca is frequently known as sago. It is different from the ordinary pearl tapioca only in size and shape, caused by slightly differing methods of production.

Most tapioca to-day is raised in Straits Settlements, and is exported through Singapore and Penang. The cost of growing and manufacturing is not very great.—Grocers' Review.

WESTERN DEMAND FOR ONTARIO FRUIT

The Present Situation and the Future Outlook.

By J. J. Philp, Dominion Fruit Inspector, Winnipeg.

Webster defines the word "commerce" as follows: "The interchange or buying and selling of commodities, especially the exchange of merchandise on a large scale, between different places and communities—extended trade or traffic."

Nothing could better describe the conditions existing between Ontario and the three western provinces.

Exchange of Staple Necessities.

The writer remembers well on one occasion at a small station in Ontario having to wait while the last sacks of Manitoba flour was removed from a car, so that he might use the same car to load Ontario apples for Manitoba. This brings us to a new train of thought—as bread, the staff of life, is made from flour, and flour from wheat, it is thus the product of the grain which is at once the mainstay and hope of the western province, and while Ontario is a prolific producer of what we term small fruits, there can be no question of the fact that apples (for the present at any rate) are by far the most important in the catalogue of fruits.

Unfortunately in inter-provincial trade there are no statistics available from which a report of the number of barrels or other packages can be compiled. Consequently any computation is, to a great extent, the result of guess work, and is necessarily more or less open to difference of opinion. There are some, however, in a better position to guess than others, they having some data on which to form their opinion, much as Foster, the weather man, has for his weather predictions: I think I may claim to be as well fixed in this respect as anyone and will furnish as nearly as possible my estimate of the quantities handled.

Some Big Figures.

I have indisputable proof that I saw, and to a greater or less extent, examined at one place in the City of Winnipeg, thirty-one car loads of small fruits, consisting of apples (in baskets), pears, peaches, grapes (largely the latter) and tomatoes, and a few musk melons, quinces, etc., all from Ontario. Personally, I might be willing to concede that this firm had the largest number of carloads of that kind of fruit, but I know this would be disputed by at least three other firms in the wholesale trade. Let us allow, then, that they were all equal, that makes thirty-one at one place. Grant that there are three others with an equal number, that makes four thirty-ones or one hundred and twenty-four carloads between these four firms.

But there are still five other firms to be heard from; these will easily average ten carloads a piece or fifty for the lot. Add these to one hundred and twenty-four cars before mentioned and it totals one hundred and seventy-four cars of let us say, basket fruit, all, mind you, from Ontario.

The importations from the United States will easily double this, while receipts from British Columbia are also looming up into figures that in the near future will press Ontario's output very hard.

Their Equivalent in Cash.

Now what does all this represent? To intelligently understand it let us arrive as nearly as we can at the cash value, but before doing so let me add there are still many carloads to be accounted for. Allow Brandon forty carloads; Regina 10 carloads; Portage la Prairie ten; ten other places two car loads each, and sixteen places one car load for each place, and we have for country points ninety-six carloads which, added to the previous one hundred and seventy-four for Winnepeg, makes a grand total of two hundred and seventy carloads. I am informed that the net returns of cash made to the shippers from sales is approximately equal to five hundred dollars per car load and we have thus a return made to Ontario shippers equal to one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars for small fruits.

Apple Imports to the West.

We have still to deal with the apple trade, which, at the beginning of this article was characterized as the most important in the catalogue of fruits. It would be folly to attempt to make even a guess at the number of barrels of apples that come to this country from Ontario. One firm, however, gave the writer to understand that thirty thousand barrels was the number they proposed to reach, and I think they succeeded.

If I may hazard a guess it will be that the total quantity for all points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for a whole season will not fall short of two hundred and fifty thousand barrels, and may reach three hundred thousand.

An Estimate.

Allowing that only one-half of these are from Ontario, though that will be below the actual quantity, this will make Ontario's contribution amount to, say, one hundred and fifty thousand barrels, at $2 per barrel f.o.b., Ontario points (and this is less than half that I have known in some cases to have been paid) this amounts to three hundred thousand dollars. This, added to the $135,000 for small fruit sales, brings the total up to four hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars, or say, with shipments by express, half a million dollars for one season's output of Ontario fruit for the west.

Speaking about prices paid for Ontario apples by western dealers, I have before me a trade sale catalogue from Liverpool; a lot of them in fact, for we receive them regularly. From a close study of the most recent, I am led to believe that merchants of the west are paying considerably more for apples in the Ontario markets than has been realized by the consigners to Liverpool; this is particularly true of spies.

Two Resolutions.

Having given with as much accuracy as is possible under the circumstances the figures representing the value of the western there it remains only to add that this article will fall far short of its object if it fails to arouse a greater interest and a stronger determination on the part of the Ontario grower and shipper to:

(1) Produce a quality of fruit that shall compare favorably with any fruit from any country.

(2) To take sufficient interest in the transportation facilities to ensure that what has been achieved in the orchard shall not be destroyed through lack of care while in transit.

Necessity for Constant Care.

A suggestion here will possibly be in order, and to copy the action of others similarly situated will possibly be as wise a thing as can be done.

The banana trade is assuming very large proportions, and extensive dealers in this fruit have their cars constantly in charge of a man detailed to travel with them and watch the conditions, and guard against either too much heat, or the danger of having them chilled. The experience of the trade is, no doubt, satisfactory, as this method is being continued, and it would doubtless be equally satisfactory if it were put into practice in connection with the shipments of the more delicate fruits from Ontario to the west.

HOW TO PRODUCE IT

Brief Talks Given Occasionally
By T. Johnson Stewart

The late Cecil Rhodes, easily the most picturesque of modern Empire builders, once said: "What's the use of big ideas if you haven't the money to carry them out?" One might readily reply: "Big ideas are the most powerful things in the world, because they only require to be big and useful enough to attract all the capital necessary to make them realities." Of course, Rhodes was merely apologising for his huge fortune when he deprecated the utility of big ideas—not talking sound sense. No man had a shrewder notion of the cash value of big ideas than Rhodes and no man possessed, in a greater degree, the magic power of turning ideas into currency. And big ideas are going to produce several millionaire grocers in this Canada ours during the next fifteen or twenty years. Are you going to be one of them?

There are easily ten thousand grocers in Canada—all making a living at the trade, some making more, a few making fortunes. And there must be scores of alert and sagacious men in the business, men who dream of big things and doing them in a big way. While it is our intention to make this article interesting to all grocers, yet it will be more interesting to the man with ideas just as big as the development of this country will allow him to entertain. Our main object is to encourage that man. It is no stretch of the imagination to suppose that Lipton saw himself a merchant as powerful as any in the world when, as a penniless youth, he crossed the Atlantic for the first time. The optimistic young voyager was enough of an Irishman to be a dreamer and enough of a Scot to analyse his dreams far more subtlely than most men need ever hope to do. Young Lipton crossed the Atlantic with a fixed purpose. He wanted money—just enough to start business. He secured enough in eighteen months, returned to Glasgow and laid the foundation of the immense commercial organization which to-day girdles the globe. Lipton's freight cars roll along every transcontinental road in North America; his traders sail every sea carrying his goods raised on his own vast estates to his central warehouses situated in various big cities of the old world. Big ideas and judicious advertising did it all in less than twenty years. The genial Sir Thomas expends a million dollars on a yacht race with smiling equanimity. He wants that cup, he is a true sportsman; but—well, the million dollars could not be more judiciously spent in advertising. It would be nonsense to imagine that the clear-seeing Irishman ignored, or failed to see the benefits accruing from international yacht racing publicity. Lipton always had "a different way" of advertising.

The man who knows his business never slights big ideas—not even the whimsical ideas of a crank. Because, in the procession of cranks unknown genius lurks. Big ideas rule the world and will create better than we know. And no man of affairs—no business man, however small his business may be, can entertain big ideas without being brought face to face with his advertising problem. It is splendid to be contented; but it is not good business. If you ever anticipate conducting a business which will place yourself and family in affluence you must consider advertising, and consider it very seriously. The successful grocer of the immediate to-morrow must advertise as the big successful men of to-day have advertised. And as the years go by they must do more and more advertising. It is no far cry to the day when the majority of women in every town and village in Canada will order groceries by telephone. The grocer who can tell the story of his values best in print will be the successful grocer of the future. The man who cannot see that day coming, and coming very quickly, might as well consider himself out-classed in the race for supremacy. He is assuredly not one of the million-

The necessity of advertising cannot be too strongly emphasized. Some may think that we are too insistent on this subject; but it is practically impossible to err in this direction. I know as well as any man that the majority of Canadian grocers have very little money to invest in advertising. The wording of that sentence is important. There is a difference between investing money in advertising and spending money in space-buying in the newspapers.

Space-buying has disgusted more than one man with advertising, although it is not advertising at all. A house will not miraculously appear on the lot you buy and business will not flow from mere space-buying. Before your house appears there has been much serious thought on your part—the architect and contractors employed all think. And there is considerable money sunk in that hole in the ground before the house appears at all. Many weeks, often months, sometimes years, elapse before the owner reaps any benefit from his expenditure. But at the last he has the house he wants—arranged just the way he wants it.

The analogy between house-building and business building may, or may not be, apt; but the analogy is clearly there. The man who would expect a house to jump on to a vacant lot would be just as foolish as the man who would expect business to result from the usual space-buying, familiarly known as advertising. Lot-buying is not house-building. Space-buying is not business-building. Nor is it advertising.

Whatever is not business-building is not advertising. Successful advertising calls for knowledge, consideration, time and then more knowledge, consideration and time. The only knowledge available is a knowledge of your business. Advertising, of the proper sort, will draw business just as surely and as powerfully—if imperceptibly at first—as the moon draws the tide. No power on earth can keep the tide from flowing and no power known to the shrewdest business men of the age can avert the flow of dollars towards the man who advertises judiciously. When you buy space know what you want it for. Fill it up with a meaty ad. Vacant lots may pay your grandchildren. Vacant space only pays the publisher. And it does not pay him half as well as it would pay him filled up with selling facts.

Grocers do not advertise because they haven't the money to invest in advertising. So they say and in most cases—honestly. They actually think they haven't a dollar to invest in advertising. And so long as they do not advertise they will not have any more. Grocers are poor largely because they do not advertise. There is only one way to corner enough money to carry on an effective advertising campaign. Start advertising. That's the only way.

We reproduce two ads forwarded by McCrea & Son, of Guelph, Ont. Mr. McCrea kindly forwarded 21 ads all labelled "Trade-Bringers" and these two are fair samples of the bunch. They go to prove that our contention is correct, viz., that there is nothing mysterious about good advertising. The people of this age are material enough to look for facts. You'll perceive that Mr. McCrea wastes no time. He doesn't believe in buying space for nothing. He goes straight to the point at once—tells the people of Guelph and vicinity that he has values for them—values worth considering and that will be considered—because he states the price. Money talks strongly all through the Guelph merchant's advertising and, of course, enhances its trade-bringing qualities. The McCrea people change their copy regularly and this must also be considered in order to appreciate the forcefulness of this brand of advertising.

Mr. C. A. Farmer, Perth, Ont., has sent us a few small ads for criticism which he hopes we will "rake over the coals." Your breakfast food advertising may have paid you well; but it is not what I would call judicious advertising. Food faddists are becoming rare. So much has been claimed for these breakfast foods that people are growing sceptical. You have enumerated no less than ten all-cooked foods in that ad and quoted sentences descriptive of each particular food from the manufacturers' general advertising. And all these descriptions are exaggerated statements of the qualities of these breakfast foods. Don't try the patience of customers too much. All grocers may profitably heed this advice. Don't lead people to expect glowing health from an indulgence in these patented foods or you're liable to suffer more proportionately than the manufacturers. No food on earth can do what some of these foods are advertised to do. Advertise staple lines. Be sure that the goods you handle will make good all your advertising, and dwell on quality all the time.

The other two ads are good; but it is questionable if any man can afford to advertise a single line. I think your ads should be more general. However, if you occupy the same space every week in two papers your brand of advertising must pay. The question for you and many grocers is: "Can I make my advertising pay better?"

All ads sent in will be acknowledged hereafter. Sometimes the space at our disposal has kept us from reproducing first-class grocery and provision advertising. Still we ought to get more sample ads. Better wake up and send a few along.

JAMES EPPS, COCOA MAGNATE

Died in England Immensely Rich — A Pioneer in the Trade.

James Epps, of cocoa fame, died on April 22, at the age of eighty-six, at his beautiful residence, Bigginwood House, Beulah-hill, Norwood. Although the knowledge of cocoa as a valuable article of food was brought to Europe by Columbus, the earliest intimation of its introduction to England, says the London Chronicle, is found in an announcement in the "Public Advertiser" of June 16, 1657, notifying that "in Bishopsgate street, in Queen's Head-alley, at a Frenchman's house, is an excellent West India drink called chocolate, to be sold where you may have it ready at any time, and also unmade, at reasonable rates." Later on it became a fashionable beverage, but the heavy duty and the high price at which it was retailed made it a luxury in which wealthy people alone could indulge. Nearly two centuries after, in 1832, the duties on cocoa were greatly reduced, and one of the first to take advantage of this was Mr. Epps, who established a cocoa business on a popular basis, and in order to supply homeopathic patients with a beverage which was not so stimulating and exciting as tea or coffee.

Dr. John Epps, brother of the deceased, was a homeopathic physician and the first to introduce homeopathy to England. He carried on his practice in Great Russell street, and James assisted him as chemist, dispensing the drugs. The particular preparation known as Epps's cocoa was produced by Dr. Epps, and in 1839, at the time of the extension of the homeopathic school in London, the firm of James Epps & Co., Limited, came into existence. The tables of the poorest were supplied with an agreeable and nutritious article of diet, and no fewer than 5,000,000 pounds of cocoa were turned out in the course of the year.

From an early period, James Epps carried on the business of homeopathic chemist, not only in Great Russell street, but also in Old Broad street and Piccadilly, and of later years in Threadneedle street and Jermyn street, Piccadilly.

Mr. Epps has died immensely rich. He was active almost up to the last, and notwithstanding his advanced age he visited the works in Southwark attended by a nurse as recently as six weeks ago. His only son passed away suddenly, while visiting the cocoa plantations in the West Indies in Jan., 1905.

KEEPING STORE AND BUYING GOODS

Thorough Grocer's Straight Talk on Ways and Means

By A. Irving, Toronto.

Having been closely connected with the retail grocery trade in various capacities both in Canada and the States, I have had, perhaps, unusual opportunities for observing the many different methods adopted by the retail grocer for directing his business and managing and arranging his stock. These suggestions are the outcome of such observation and are written, not with the intention of dictating to the retailer how he shall run his business, for circumstances alter cases to such an extent that, even had I the inclination, it would be absurd for me to attempt such a thing, but with the object of lessening his work, reducing his expenses, and generally brightening up his surroundings.

Buying and Selecting Stock.

Upon the judgment exercised by the retail grocer in buying stock depends very largely his chances of success. It is difficult sufficiently to emphasize, especially to the inexperienced, the paramount importance of knowing ones own mind with respect to the amount of stock to be handled, and though I am well aware that some men will regard this as a truism and others as an insult, in my opinion it cannot be too strongly insisted upon as often as an opportunity presents itself.

The number of grocers who allow their business virtually to be run by the travelers is past belief, and the small amount of reliance which the majority of them place in their own experience of their customer's wants as brought home to them every day, is little short of amazing. No one realizes better than I that successful judgment is essentially the fruit experience, but the fruit will be mighty bitter, for just so long as the retailer remains blind to the fact that he has picked a lemon, and unless he gives up swallowing the juice before it chokes him there will be another three-line ad. in the real estate columns of the daily papers.

Be on your guard, therefore, against being talked by some silver-tongued Cicero into buying a line for which there never was and never will be any profitable movement in your locality. Travelers, take them all round, are not bigger liars than the rest of us, but the majority of them are chock full of optimism with regard to the selling qualities of their goods, and are not above drawing on their imagination when other methods fail. There is nothing criminal about this. It is only human nature. If a salesman doesn't believe in his goods he isn't going to induce other men to handle them in a hurry. He has got to hold down his job just the same as you have got to make your living, and for the half hour or so that he spends in your store it is natural enough that you should be the best friend he ever had.

But make no mistake about this. The traveler is the grocer's best friend in more ways than one. He has opportunities of observing what is going on all over the country that are denied to the store-keeper and very often to the newspapers themselves. It is as much a part of his business to study the general conditions of trade as it is to sell goods. So whether you buy from him or not, don't antagonize him by being short in your replies or disagreeable in your manner. The traveler has his full share of troubles in this world and a little of other people's thrown in to make up weight, and he is just as susceptible to a friendly greeting and a warm handshake as you would be if you were in his place.

To return to the purchase of stock. Make this your golden rule if you have not already done so: "Buy only what you need and when you need it." Some men are so attracted by the word "bargain" that they will pack up and travel 50 miles to town in order to buy a few cases of canned goods or what-not on which the reduction amounts to a little less than half their railway fare. Use what common sense God has given you and hang up this motto in your store where you can see it without using a stepladder:

"A Bargain is Never a Bargain Unless You Require It."

A real bargain comes along so seldom and there as so many spurious imitations of the genuine article, that some men have forgotten what it looks like and fail to recognize it when it happens their way. If I have laid stress upon the importance of rejecting inducements to buy at a reduced price what you can never get rid of at any price, I should also have emphasized the necessity of training yourself to recognize a bargain that is a bargain when you see it. Keep your eyes open and your wits polished and you'll get so far ahead of your neighbor that you'll meet yourself coming back.

Legitimate Investment.

If you get a chance to buy a line of staple goods for which there is a constant and steady demand among your customers, at a little under the usual figure, don't hesitate. Buy all you can; and if you are a new man in a new locality try the effect of advertising a special sale in the local paper. You won't make anything in actual cash that time, but it will be a real bargain to you nevertheless, for it will attract customers whom you might not have been able to reach by any other method, and in various ways, materially assist your future success.

The case of the little boy who put his hand in a jar of plums and grabbed so many that he couldn't pull it out again fairly illustrates the system upon which a large number of grocers buy their stock. The inevitable result is that they gradually get tied up with a lot of useless and unprofitable truck, find themselves unable to purchase the lines that they are absolutely in need of, and are fortunate if they escape without serious financial embarrassment. Better buy a little at a time and do it often, than buy a car lot and get stung on the investment. Follow this maxim and you will save money and keep your stock clean.

Neatness and Arrangement.

You may acquire or succeed to the largest grocery business in your town, and within six months lose the entire trade through slackness, untidiness and bad arrangement of stock. Nothing irritates a customer so much as to be kept waiting while the grocer goes for a still hunt along his shelves for a special brand of pickles or a favorite blend of tea. Uncleanliness generally goes hand in hand with hap-hazard arrangement, and as likely as not our friend, having bagged his quarry, will descend to earth hot and triumphant with his hands black with dust and his clothes in much the same condition. The grocer should know exactly where he can lay his hands on anything in the store.

Classification.

Classify your stock according to the circumstances and conditions obtaining among your customers. Don't banish those lines for which there is the most frequent demand to the top shelves; even if you are a physical-culturist and like the exercise you will have a hard job to assmilate your views with those of your patrons.

Classification doesn't mean putting all the bottles on one shelf, piling all the packages on another and then sitting down and wondering why it doesn't look right. Nor yet does it imply throwing your fruit boxes in one corner, brooms in another and empty packing cases in a third, and then cussing because your customers don't fall all over themselves in an effort to tell you how much they like the effect. You'll find out how much they like it without them telling you, because it will be a case of "Lost to sight to memory dear" for yours, and "Out of sight out of mind" with them. So let's get down to work and see what we can do.

Here is a sample arrangement that I have found to work very well in my own store and for that reason submit it for what it may be worth.

Starting from the front with the right-hand shelving:

1. Pickles, sauces, catsups, relishes.
2. Jams, jellies, preserves, fruits, marmalades.
3. Extracts, essences, cocoas and chocolates.
4. Jelly powders, gelatines, starches, blueings..
5. Cereals, bird seeds, packages, fruits.

Then the shelving on the left-hand front.

1. Biscuits in tins.
2. All package teas and coffees.
3. Canned goods: fruits, vegetables and fish.
4. Matches, blackings, black lead and lamp goods.
5. Sundry goods and broken packages.

The under parts of the counter and shelving can be arranged as best suits your own convenience.

Arrangement of Floor Space.

There is one other matter which comes under the head of general store arrangement and which should not be disregarded. This is the lay-out of floor space.

Opinions differ as to the exact proportion which should be allowed to the display of goods, but the majority agree that anything approaching over-crowding should be avoided as one would avoid a leper, and that the happy medium is "Attractiveness combined with facility of movement." If I may once more be allowed to draw upon my own experiences I would suggest having a movable stand, consisting of four or five shelves built after the manner of a stepladder, which will fold up into a small space when not in use. Upon such a stand an almost inexhaustible variety of exceedingly effective displays can be arranged, and the whole moved easily from place to place. If the grocer handles flowers as a side line he could not do better than keep one of these stands constantly banked up with fresh flowers in a conspicuous part of the store, but in any event he will find it invaluable as a display medium for samples and an attractive asset to the general appearance of the interior. One or two small pyramids of breakfast foods arranged on the floor so as not to incommode either yourself or your customers, may not be out of place, but it is infinitely preferable that the floor should be kept scrupulously clear and clean than that there should be the slightest suggestion of congestion or untidiness.

Clean Counters.

Have your counters as free as possible from packages and other unsuitable matter. The paper-roll and scales are the two essential requisites for a counter, and if you add anything else be sure before you do so that it would not go just as well or better in another part of the store.

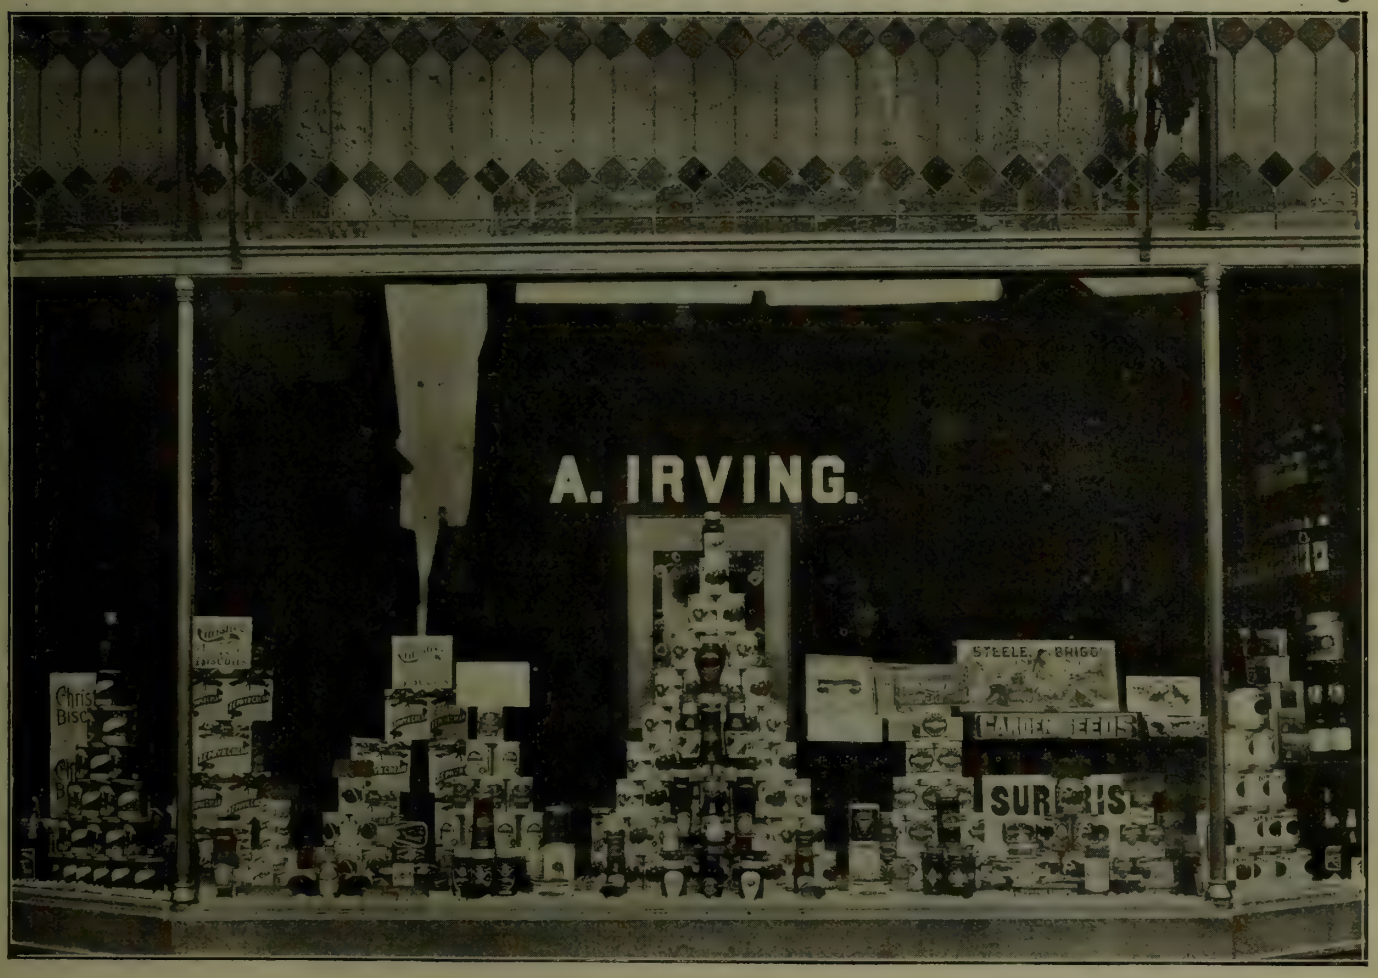
A Few General Hints.

Give special attention to 'phone orders, to orders sent in by messenger, and to those delivered by children. If you are the sort of person that children like you are blessed beyond your understanding, for the surest way to a woman's trade is through the heart of her child.

Don't have two prices and don't substitute. Both or either are ruinous to business. If you haven't got what a customer wants tell her so frankly and let her make her own selection to take its place, but be sure by the time she calls again that you have the original article to offer her.

If a customer quits you, you should know the reason. It may be your fault or it may be your driver's, or it may be one of half-a-hundred other things. Find out. She may be irritated over some fancied neglect, or she may have been lured away by an attractive sale of one of your competitors. Find out. Keep finding out until you get the reason, and you will be on the high road to the recovery of your lost business.

Don't advertise bargain days except as a great rarity. If you do, the public will be expecting every day to be a bargain day, and the mere detail that you cannot see it in that light will not appeal to them at all. The public is unreasonable and must be treated as such.



Window of A. Irving's Store, Toronto.

Keep a cost book and use it. If it is necessary for the wholesaler it is equally necessary for you. Your memory may be infallible—in theory—and it may be mistaken in practice. Better keep a tangible record to back it up.

DETAILS THAT SPELL SUCCESS IN RETAILING

From "The Making of a Merchant," by Harlow N. Higinbotham, partner of the late Marshal Field; President of the World's Columbian Exposition, and prominent financier.

The credit system of the retail store is the cardinal cause of so large a percentage of failures among the keepers of small stores. It is an actual fact that hundreds of small storekeepers become insolvent before they know it, and they believe themselves prospering until aroused to their actual condition by the credit man of their jobbing house. This statement will, I am sure, be verified by the credit man of almost any wholesale house, particularly in the grocery or dry goods business.

One of the rocks upon which thousands of storekeepers go to pieces is that of failure to figure the cost of their goods. I do not believe it an exaggeration to say that not one storekeeper in a thousand, the country over, adequately figures the cost of the merchandise which he sells. Almost invariably he fails to include in his estimate some important element of fixed charges, of his running expenses. For example, if he owns his store building he figures that he is saving the entire item of rent, and consequently he does not include this in his fixed or running expenses; because he has his son helping in the store as a clerk and his nephew delivers the goods, he makes no charge for their services on his salary account; again, he is unusually exact if he makes any charge on account of the insurance which he is obliged to carry on his building and stock. Of course, not all merchants are as careless as this with regard to their record of operating expenses, but it is safe to say that very few of them charge anything to the account of interest on their investment beyond, perhaps, the actual sums which they are obliged to pay out for interest on money borrowed. In a word, the average keeper of a store has no idea whatever of his total operating expenses and he is uncommonly fortunate if he figures into the cost of his goods one-half of the expense which should be charged under that head. Really, I do not think that fifty per cent. of the smaller storekeepers in the country districts figure into their cost of a specific invoice of goods the money actually paid out for the transportation of that shipment, to say nothing of any charge for hauling and handling inside the store.

Let me give one instance, which is thoroughly representative of hundreds of others, of how a storekeeper figured his cost. He bought a case of canned goods and had it hauled from the station to his store in his own delivery wagon. The fact that he did not have to pay any drayage on these goods was the one thing prominently in his mind when he opened them and for this reason he told the boys to mark the cost at fifteen cents and the selling price at twenty cents. When he sold these goods he flattered himself that he was making a good margin of profit, while, as a matter of fact, if he figured in a right percentage of all of his operating expenses he would have realized that he was selling the goods at a margin of less than a cent a can, if not at actual cost.

Another point which the storekeeper is prone to overlook is that of failing to decide for his customer. As an example: The storekeeper carries several brands of tobacco. In tobaccos, as in most other lines of goods carried in the small general store, there is a wide difference in the margin of profit which the storekeeper can exact from his customer. Those brands which are the most widely advertised invariably afford the smallest margin of profit. Let us suppose, for example, that the Chippeway brand of plug tobacco gives the merchant a margin of only ten per cent., while the Cowboy's Pride and the Real Comfort brands give him twenty to twenty-five per cent. margin. If he is a good salesman and a natural trader he will invariably hand his customer a plug of Cowboy's Pride instead of Chippeway, unless the buyer, of his own volition, asks for Chippeway. On the other hand, the storekeeper who is not thoroughly up to his task will ask the customer, "What brand do you want?" thus leaving the decision entirely to the customer, and thereby cutting his own profit in half. It must be confessed that, in a majority of cases, the general storekeeper, or his clerk, fails to make this decision for his customers. Of course, when the decision is put up to the customer he will invariably name the brand most widely advertised, because it is the first one that comes to his mind. If this were not the case what is known as "general publicity" advertising would be a failure and the millions of dollars spent in this kind of publicity would be wasted. Depend upon it, the customer will always name the brand which gives the least margin of profit, unless the storekeeper takes the matter in his hands, and makes the decision in favor of the brand against which the manufacturer is not obliged to charge the expenses of a heavy publicity advertising campaign.

This matter of pushing brands which give a liberal profit in preference to those yielding only a narrow margin is a most important one which calls for a nice discrimination in many ways. No merchant can afford to push a poor quality of goods and thus impose on his customers, no matter how large the margin of profit may be. On the other hand, if he is an intelligent buyer he will find little difficulty in securing goods in which there is a generous margin of profit, and which are nearly, if not quite, equal in quality to brands which are called "standard" because of the large advertising back of them. Then, he should remember that he has it in his power to make unadvertised brands of goods almost as well known to his customers as those which are largely advertised. This he can do not only by word of mouth, but by using intelligent discrimination in displaying the brands which he is most anxious to sell. He should remember that people dislike to be thought ignorant of brands and qualities and that he has it in his own hands to create the impression in the minds of his customers that certain profitable brands are the desirable ones.

There is no necessity for a merchant to give the most prominent display to brands in which there is the least profit. Instead, it is the part of discretion and good salesmanship to give the most conspicuous place in his show windows and on his counters and his shelves to those goods which he is most anxious to sell because they yield him the larger profit. A little intelligent work, in a hand to hand way, will do wonders in educating his customers in the idea that certain unadvertised brands of goods are equal in quality to those which have received greater publicity and for which a higher price is charged. It is human nature to feel gratified over a good bargain, and when once the customer is made to feel that he is buying something for ten cents as good as others are getting for fifteen, he feels a certain sense of gratitude to the merchant who has put the bargain in his way.

Of course the small country storekeeper cannot get the jobber to put his own brand on goods which he buys, but this is easily possible with leading merchants in the larger towns and provincial cities, and this is one of the strong points in good merchandising, particularly in the grocery business. No opportunity to do this should be neglected, provided, always, that there is no doubt as to the intrinsic merit of the goods. When the storekeeper, little or big, recommends an unadvertised brand of goods as against an advertised brand, he must be absolutely certain that the goods have the merit and will bear out his recommendations.

It should not be inferred from what I have said, however, that a merchant's stock of goods is complete without the leading standard or advertised brands of goods in the various lines. There are always, in every community, people who will demand these and be dissatisfied unless they are able to get them.

Perhaps the most important thing which any merchant sells is that for which he does not make a direct or open charge. The name of this commodity is service. Nothing on his shelves or counters is of greater value and the quality of service which he gives his customers is just as vital to his success, perhaps more so, than is the quality of the goods which he sends out in his delivery wagon or puts into the hands of his customers. On the other hand, service is just as tangible a commodity as sugar or dress goods, and should be as carefully reckoned in his cost account as his bills for goods or his freight or insurance expense.

It is not too much to say that good service is the most profitable thing which the merchant can sell, and that poor service is, by the same token, the most unprofitable thing that he can have about his store. Comparatively few storekeepers have any realization of this, and seem to conduct their business upon the supposition that service is an intangible quantity, and that the cheaper they can get their clerk hire the better. Few mistakes can be more fatal to merchandising than this notion. From the delivery boy up to the proprietor, quality of service should be considered the very essence of good merchandising. It is a fundamental trait of human nature to consider the manner in which a transaction is done to be quite as important as the more material part of it. When the storekeeper gets into the city he likes to get his meals at a first-class restaurant. Why? Not because the food served to him is really any better than he would get at a cheaper restaurant, but because the service is better. In other words, he is entirely willing to pay for a superior article of attention, and for more attractive surroundings. If he is observant and thoughtful, he will at once realize that his customers are made of the same clay as himself, and that they will, consciously or unconsciously, take the matter of service into the same consideration in buying goods as he does in buying his meals. They will, as he does, put a premium upon attention, attractiveness of surroundings and promptness and reliability of delivery, not to speak of an agreeable manner in those who render the service.

Neatness is a prime essential in store keeping. Many merchants have found their trade going to their competitors, and have been unable to account for this loss of patronage. Knowing their merchandise to be as good as that sold by their competitors and their prices to be as low, they were unable to account for this loss of trade. If they could have taken their customers into their confidence and arrived at the real reason of this falling away of patronage, they would have been astonished to learn that lack of neatness was the real cause at the bottom of the matter. This observation applies especially to stores in which dry goods and groceries are sold, for the reason that, to a very large extent, these commodities are bought by women, and that there is nothing against which woman nature so instinctively rebels as disorder and dirt.

To put it less bluntly, women are especially sensitive to all that is cleanly, neat and attractive to the eye. They like pleasant and tasteful surroundings and anything which suggests disorder and confusion repels them. Although perhaps men are not generally as sensitive to these things as women, at the same time they are confused by a disorderly array of merchandise and are attracted by a neat and pleasing display of goods. Any well-circumstanced man or woman shrinks from attempting to buy in a store where the stock is untidy and "cluttered." Instinctively the best trade in any community will gravitate towards the store which is kept up in the most orderly and attractive manner.

Consequently, not only will the merchant who has the real trading instinct be awake to this important element in merchandising, but he will also see to it that he hires clerks who have a sense of neatness and order and have an ability to display goods in an attractive way. As a general rule, the dry goods merchant is quicker to realize this than is the grocery man, but dirt and disorder in the grocery store are quite as distressing and inimical to success as in the dry goods establishment. Again, neatness and order are essential to the success of the storekeepers from the standpoint of economy, as well as from their effect upon the sensibility of customers. Goods which are not handled with cleanliness, neatness and order deteriorate much more rapidly than those which are kept and handled in a neat and orderly manner. The cluttered, ill-arranged and untidy stock of goods is the one which is going down hill with the greatest rapidity.

Equally important in the manner of service is the quality of promptness. This comes into play from the moment the customer enters the door of the store until the goods are delivered in his house. What reader has not heard the remark, "I like to trade with Smith, because I get waited upon right away, and because I know that the goods I order will be delivered in time for me to use them as I have planned." Thousands of times grocerymen in villages and small cities have lost good customers because the goods have not been delivered in time for the next meal. This may be caused by the slowness or the carelessness of the clerk or the delivery boy, or perhaps the proprietor himself. But no matter where the blame may rest, the disappointed customer will not forget the incident, and if it is repeated the loss of the family's trade is almost sure to result. This suggests the not unimportant point that a bright and active delivery boy is quite as important a member of the storekeeper's force as is the head clerk.

Many merchants are prone to give very little consideration to the selection of a delivery boy; but this is decidedly a mistake. The right kind of a delivery boy has many times been able to hold the trade of a customer in spite of defects in goods and prices and in the service rendered by the proprietor and his clerks. The delivery boy who is a natural "hustler" is a tower of strength in the organization of any store, and the merchant who does not recognize this fact is overlooking an essential point. The storekeeper should not forget the fact that the delivery boy is the person who closes the transaction, and who goes into the homes of his customers to do so. He is, so to speak, the living link between the store and the home. In many cases much of the buying is done by servants, and it is the delivery boy who comes into daily contact with the maid of the house. If this work is done in a prompt, intelligent and agreeable manner he gets a personal standing in the homes at which he calls, and not infrequently brings out the remark: "They may be a little slow at the store, but that boy is all right and can be depended upon to get the things around in time and in good shape."

Perhaps some of my readers may feel that I place too much importance upon the delivery boy, but he is a factor in community trade which has received altogether too little consideration—and perhaps he also generally receives too little compensation. Certainly there is no kindergarten for the merchandising business equal to the delivery wagon, and the boy who makes a success in that humble capacity is the best possible timber out of which to make a clerk or proprietor.

FISHERIES OF CANADA

By Prof. Edward E. Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries.

The fisheries of Canada are the most extensive in the world.

The eastern sea coast of the maritime provinces from the Bay of Fundy to the Straits of Belle Isle covers a distance of 5,600 miles, which is more than double that of Great Britain and Ireland.

While the salt water inshore area, not including minor indentations, covers more than fifteen hundred square miles, the fresh water area of that part of the great lakes belonging to Canada is computed at 72,700 square miles, not including the numerous lakes in Manitoba and other western districts all stocked with excellent species of food fish.

Value of the Fisheries.

The whole catch of fish in our waters by Canadians, including fish products, seals, &c., during the season of 1905, aggregates the large sum of nearly twenty-nine and a half million dollars. It was a record-breaking season, exceeding by over four million dollars the large output of 1901, and by over six millions the yield of 1904, which was considered a very good season. The Province of British Columbia alone shows the vast increase of over four and a half million dollars, due to the large salmon catch.

For the first time in the history of our record has Nova Scotia been superseded as the banner fish-producing province of Canada. Although it shows an increase of nearly one million dollars over the yield of 1904, yet the Pacific province heads the list by $1,600,000.

Notwithstanding the large estimates of fish for domestic consumption in British Columbia, it is said to be far under the immense quantities used by the Indian population of that province as well as that of the Yukon district and other remote parts of the territories where fish food is a staple article.

In past years there seemed to have been an apparent struggle between salmon, lobster and cod for first place, but owing to the phenomenal catch of salmon in the British Columbia waters, that king fish not only heads the list with an aggregate value of nearly nine million dollars, but equals the combined productions of lobsters, cod and herring together. While the capture of salmon was considerable in the maritime provinces, the above mentioned extraordinary result is chiefly attributed to the enormous yield of British Columbia. At times, the run was so large that canners had to limit the boats to 200 fish per day, not being able to handle more. The quantity of salmon salted or disposed fresh was also larger than usual. Altogether, no less than eighty-one million pounds of salmon were contributed to the industry by the western province during last season.

Not only did the lobster industry again hold its own, but the season of 1905 shows an improvement of nearly a quarter of a million dollars over that of 1904. This, however, must be ascribed to more remunerative prices received, especially for live lobsters shipped to Boston and neighboring markets, as the pack of last season was less than the previous one, being given at about ten millions and a half lb. cans, while there was 43,000 cwt. more of crustaceans disposed of in the shell than in 1904.

Of the fresh water species, pickerel alone shows a surplus yield, while whitefish, trout, pike and stugeon have fallen off.

From the years 1869 to 1905 inclusive, the five principal commercial sea fishes have yielded the following values to the industry :

Cod	$136,043,567
Salmon	90,933,459
Lobsters	79,868,626
Herring	72,565,569
Mackerel	46,047,244

Export of the Fish.

During the last fiscal year, the fish and fish products including marine animals exported from Canada to foreign countries, chiefly to the United States and Great Britain, amounted to $16,040,000, being an increase of over five million dollars over the previous export. This surplus export corresponds well with the increased production.

The expenditures of the Dominion Department of Fisheries for the year here treated, amounted to $968,722, divided as follows: Fisheries proper, $155,929; fish culture, $209,376; fisheries protection service, $249,876; miscellaneous expenditure, $194,994, including $158,546, distributed as fishing bounties among the deep sea fishermen of the Maratime Provinces.

Since its inception in 1882, the sum of $3,790,685 has been distributed amongst fishermen to enable them to better develop their industry.

During the season of 1905, no less than 82,870 fishermen were engaged in the Canadian fisheries, exclusive of the thousands employed in the lobster packing industry.

While 9,366 sailors manned the 1,384 fishing crafts, 73,500 fishermen used 41,463 boats for the same purpose.

The lobster plant alone is valued at $1,426,300, comprising the equipment of 723 canneries, dispersed on the coast of the Maritime Provinces. Of these establishments, Nova Scotia operated 237, New Brunswick 198, Prince Edward Island 196 and Quebec 92. Besides the packing industry, the shipping of these crustaceans alive or fresh to the New England markets has developed large proportions. For those suitably located, the latter branch of the lobster industry is the more remunerative. Over 14,000 persons found profitable employment in these different establishments, which put on the market about 10 1-2 million pound of the preserved article, valued at $2,624,400. Including the fresh lobsters, the whole output aggregates a value of $3,907,000, the second of importance on the list of commercial value.

ENCOURAGING JAPAN TEA.

The tea manufacturers of Shidzuoka prefecture in Japan have decided to raise $10,000 per year for three years, and to present that amount to any company which shall export 3,000,000 pounds of tea per year and whose capital is over $250,000. As a result of this decision, all the manufacturers agreed to establish a company with a capital of $500,000, buying out the Toyo Kaisha, Fujiedo Refining Company, etc., and they intend to export the product to the extent of over 3,000,000 pounds per year.

A GROCERY STORE IN THE MAKING

A Practising Architect's Practical Advice.

By J. Hunt Stanford, Architect, Toronto.

The planning of a store suitable for a grocery business, while not presenting many serious difficulties to the architect, is, nevertheless, a matter needing his careful consideration. Much, of course, depends upon the situation of the proposed building, on the amount of money the client wishes to spend in its erection, and the amount of business he is likely to do when he has taken possession of it, but in all cases—in the smallest store equally as in the largest—there is an absolute need for careful planning and efficient construction.

Three Essential Considerations.

Generally, the three main problems which an architect has to solve in laying out a store building are, (1) to provide for a good cellar suitable for storage purposes; (2) to give as much light, shelving and floor space as is possible in the shop, and (3) to arrange the domestic apartments so that the woman whose province they constitute may have no cause to hurl anathemas at the head of the architect, on the score of inconvenience, difficulty in keeping clean, or the amount of running to and fro, which she finds it necessary to do.

The Cellar.

First, then, let us consider the cellar. This should be at least seven feet high in the clear; the walls built of stone, brick or concrete, (the latter for preference), of such thickness as may be called for by the local building by-laws, and the floor laid with concrete, with a heavy top coat of cement and sand, finished from the float—not from the trowel. I mention this latter idea particularly, because experience has taught me that a concrete floor used so much as is that in a store cellar wears much better when the top coat of cement and sand is carefully finished with a wooden float, than does a floor brought up to a smooth surface with a steel trowel.

As it is absolutely necessary that the cellar should be quite dry, the walls—if of brick or stone—should be rendered on the outside with a heavy coat of cement mortar, and—to make assurance doubly sure—weeping tile drains should be laid around the outside walls below the level of the footings, and connected with the drains from the rain water leaders. Plenty of light is needed, and to obtain this it is necessary to make the windows (which for the most part are below the ground level) as wide and deep as possible, with brick areas around them, at least two feet out from the main walls. Windows should also be fixed in the front of the building, above the level of the ground and below the show board of the shop windows. To make these more effective, it is advisable to put no joists to the shop floor, below the show board, and to taper the masonry below the window sill on the inside of the wall. The absence of the floor joists permits the light to enter unobstructed, and the tapering of the masonry allows barrels and boxes to easily slide through into the basement. In a store cellar it is a good thing to have a w.c. and a fairly large sink, for the use of those serving the shop.

Coal bins, a compartment for vegetables, etc., and a laundry room should be provided for, and the position of the furnace must also be taken into careful consideration, but these items need not be enlarged upon here.

The Store Proper.

Our attention must next be given to the shop. This should be at least ten and a half feet high from floor to ceiling; the floor covered with maple or birch, tongued and grooved, flooring in narrow widths, and the ceiling covered with metallic plates. It is probably best to cover the walls (after same have been rough plastered) with ¼-inch pine sheeting, as this makes the fixing of shelves, etc., an easy matter.

The entire front must be glass. If the shop is a deep one, and it is impossible to obtain light from the sides and rear, it is advisable to fix prismatic glass to the upper part of the shop front. If this is necessary, the appearance of the front is enhanced by the introduction of leaded glass above the transome. Metal mullions at the angles of the plate glass in the front are preferable to wood, the former being better from every standpoint. Comparatively inexpensive ventilation is obtained by hanging a fanlight above the shop door.

Plan for New Grocery Store—Designed by J. Hunt Stanford for Wrigley Bros., Toronto.

Time was when the grocer put almost half his stock in his shop windows, but this is not now the case, and all that is needed immediately behind the glass is a fairly wide show board slightly sloping toward the front, and shelf at the back about eighteen inches high. The best height for the show board is 28 inches above the floor level.

Light and Ventilation.

Where the store is on a street corner additional light for the rear of the shop can, of course, be easily obtained, but as wall space in a grocery store is valuable, it is advisable to make side windows of a shape and size least likely to interfere with the shelving. Such windows, I find, are best about 3½ feet wide, 2 feet high, and 6 or 7 feet from the floor. They should be made to open, as they then assist materially in ventilation.

Shelving and Fixtures.

Shelving should not run higher than 6½ feet from the floor to the top shelf. There should, of course, be a wood cornice above the top shelf, on which the grocer can display such articles as packages of cereals and tinned goods.

The introduction of mirror glass on the wall—say two large mirrors on the side opposite the counter—adds considerably to the interior appearance of the shop, but if this desirable fitment is adopted, only the very best silvered plate glass should be used. The least "wave" in the glass throws the reflections out of touch, and makes the whole shop look awry.

General Lay-out.

The most attractive arrangement for a grocery store of average size is to have the counter on one side only—usually on the right—with tiers of shelving on that side from front to back, and with the bins for tea, etc., under the shelving. On the reverse side a large mirror near the window gives a surprisingly spacious effect, apparently widening out the store, and increasing the light, besides rewarding the grocer for the care he has exercised in the display of his shelf goods on the opposite side. Next to the mirror should be shelving similar to that behind the counter, and in the centre of same, if the shop is a large one, another mirror might advantageously be introduced. In front of this shelving is the place for a show case or two, and at the end of the shop is the refrigerator, which latter should stand well forward, with plenty of room all round it.

If it is at all possible, it is very desirable to have a small warehouse behind the shop, with a door into same immediately behind the refrigerator, and not visible from the shop.

Interior Wrigley Bros'. Store, Toronto.

Graining an Abomination.

For the shop fitments nothing is better than oak, stained with an alcohol stain (such as Sherwin-Williams "Handcraft" variety) and finished with a lacklustre or an egg-shell gloss. If oak is too expensive, then good, fairly clear white pine, if stained and finished similarly to that suggested for oak, is the next best. When this stain is applied to pine, however, it should be rubbed on immediately after application, and a most pleasing effect will result. Graining is an abomination, it has no beauty that men should desire it; it is inartistic, and at best is but a servile imitation. Therefore, Mr. Grocer, please do not grain your shop interior.

Study Your Wife's Comfort.

Now let me pass to the domestic apartments, and right here I would say that the most important item to be considered is the kitchen. "Give a woman a good kitchen and plenty of cupboard room, and you will make her happy," is advice by which I have profitted, and I would add to this, "Give her as few stairs to climb as possible." For this reason, I think that the proper place for the kitchen in a store building is in the storey over the shop. Too many stores have been erected with the kitchen behind the shop, and with the other living apartments seventeen or eighteen steps higher up.

A Good Example.

The plans accompanying this article give what is to my mind a most satisfactory arrangement of the domestic apartments. The plumbing fixtures are all together, the kitchen well situated, there is a minimum of passages, and all the rooms are easily accessible. What is more, the flat roof over the one-storey warehouse, access to which is from the kitchen, gives a good airing and drying space.

In store buildings, where no side light is obtainable, the kitchen, bathroom and pantry can be placed in, and lighted from, the rear, while the dining and sitting rooms can be placed in the front. Then the upper storey will give, as a rule, four good bedrooms, and one very rarely requires more than this.

Much tramping up and down stairs can be avoided by running a small dumbwaiter from the kitchen to the basement, and a clothes chute from a suitable place on the first floor to the laundry in the cellar.

The finishing of the rooms need not here be considered. This is very much a matter of individual taste, and no set rules can be outlined. I have said nothing, it will be noted, about the exterior. This is a matter best left to the architect, but it can be confidently laid down as a sound principle that it is better to err on the side of severity than on the side of efflorescence.

PLANS FOR A NEW GROCERY

Store Recently Built in Toronto for W rigley Bros. by J. Hunt Stanford at a Cost of $7,500.

Herewith are shown the complete plans of a store erected this year for Wrigley Bros., at the corner of Bloor and Markham streets, Toronto. The architect was J. Hunt Stanford, whose article on store architecture precedes this one. On another page will be found a cut of the interior of the Wrigley store. For many years previous to the erection of this new building G. F. Wrigley was on the road, while his brother, John Wrigley, conducted a grocery on Simcoe street, Toronto. This latter business is soon to be given up and the brothers will unite their efforts in building up trade in their new quarters.

Some Measurements and Details.

The erection of their store was commenced several months ago, the plans reproduced in Mr. Stanford's article being designed to give the maximum of economy and comfort within a somewhat limited space. The extreme width of the shop, from wall to wall, is 21 ft. 8 in., and while this is slightly narrower than the average it yet lends itself very readily to a certain class of interior treatment. For a space of 25 feet extending back from the front, the width of the shop is reduced by several feet to allow for an entrance and hallway to the upstairs dwelling.

The extreme length of the entire building is 87 feet, this being made up as follows: Length of store from window glass to end of side vestibule, 52 feet; length of store room, 20 feet; length of stable, 15 feet.

The walls throughout are of 14 inches thickness excepting the 20 foot space between the shop and the stable, the wall of which is nine inches thick.

The city being too slow to suit Mr. hind the shop provides an unusually liberal accommodation for the reception of all packing cases and boxed goods delivered from the Markham street entrance. Wide double doors permit delivery waggons to back up flush with the opening for the unloading of heavy goods, and these can be opened, sorted and apportioned through the store before the surplus is carried to the basement. The latter is reached by two sets of stairs, leading from the right-hand back corner of the shop, and the right-hand near corner of the storeroom respectively.

The sliding door marked on the plan at the far end of the shop gives access to the back stairway leading to the first floor. The hall and vestibule forming a rear entrance to shop and dwelling opens to storeroom and back stairway to dwelling. A door on the east side, opening into the body of the shop, is a convenience for customers living south of Bloor and east of Markham, and another noticeable feature is the extension of the window on the latter street so as to give a fairly comprehensive view of the top half of the store to people approaching from the east.

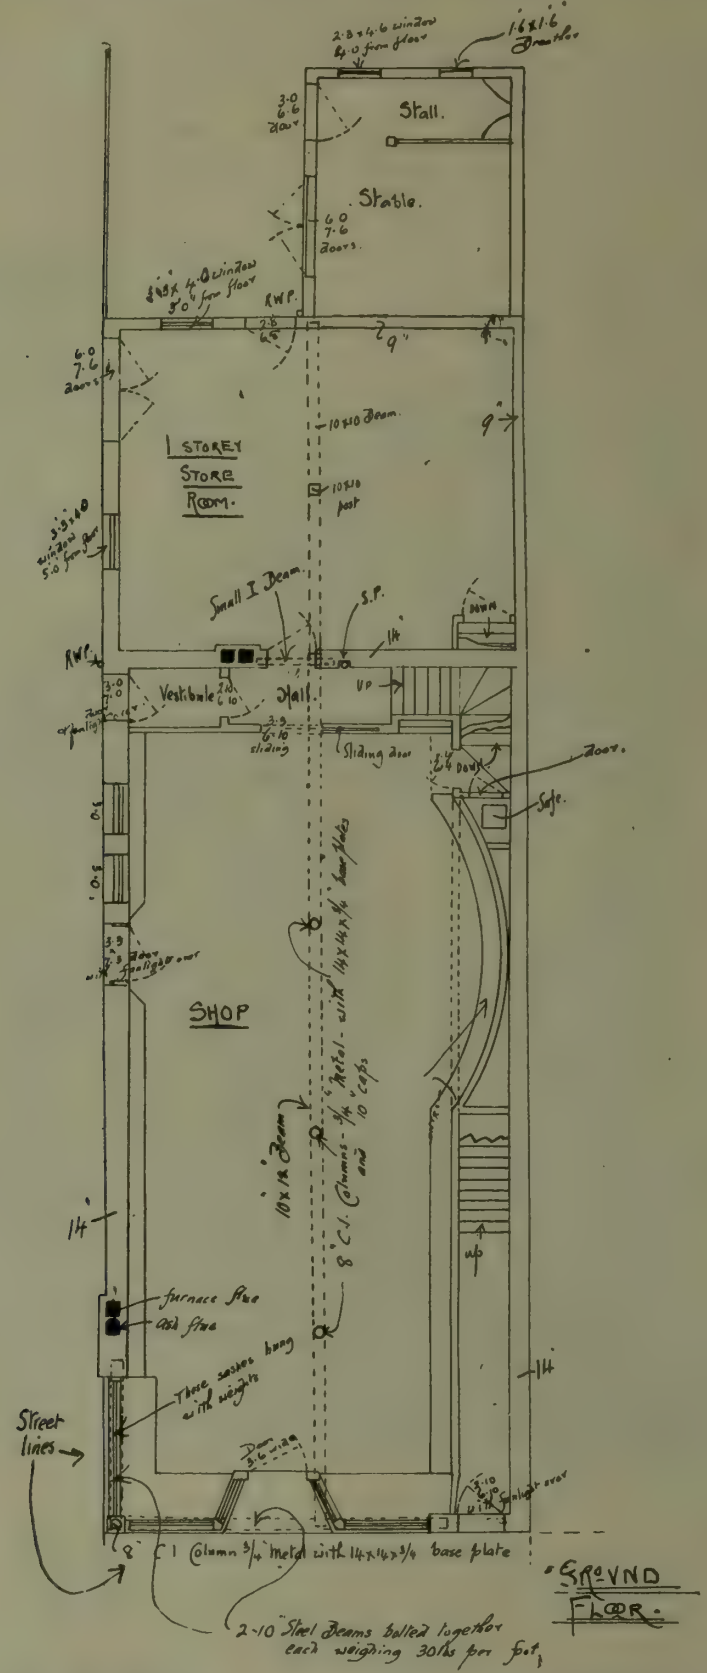
room, kitchen, bathroom and accessories, with a spacious balcony at the back covered with felt and gravel roofing. Mr. Stanford in his article has some remarks to make on the position of the



The First Storey.

On the first floor are the office, drawing-room, library, spare room, dining-kitchen, and by following his advice the domestic arrangements may be greatly facilitated.

The window in the spare room is 3 ft. x 4 ft., and those between the stairways each 2 ft. 3 in. by 4 ft. and four feet from the floor. It will be noticed that ample lighting and ventilation is provided in all rooms. In the event of the bathroom on this floor being turned into a pantry the linen room on the next floor would be made into a bathroom and a closet put in the cellar.

And the Second.

The second floor contains four bedrooms, a spare room, kitchen and bathroom, being practically a replica of the first, with the exception that here we have a trunk room adjoining the spare room, and a slight difference in the arrangement of the staircase. The window in the spare room is of the same dimensions as that on the first floor. The window opening onto the stairway is 2 ft. 3 in. x 4 ft., four feet from the floor. It will be noticed that the walls here are only nine inches thick as compared with 14 inches on the floor below.

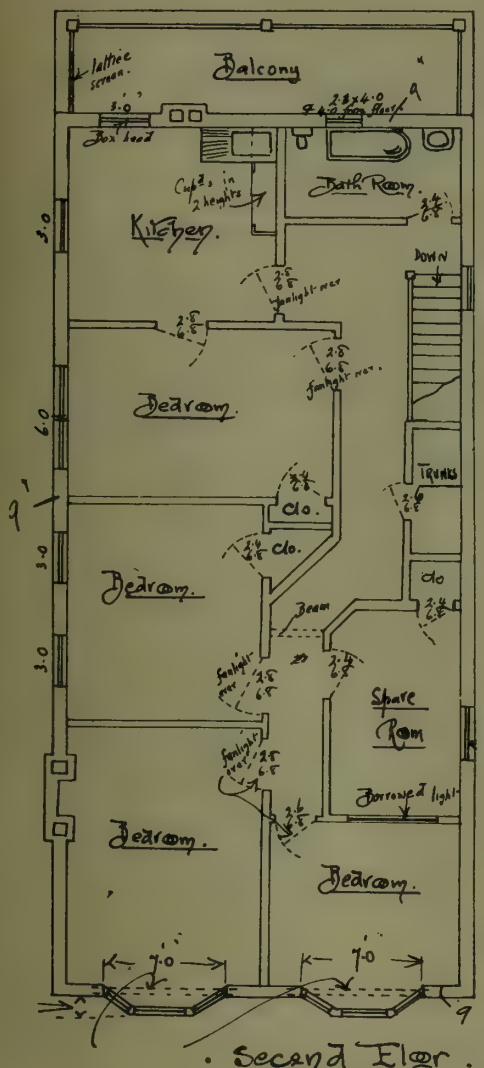
As indicated in the plan, the basement extends only under the store proper, back of that not having been excavated. It is, however, 52 by 24 feet, and affords ample room. Two coal bins are provided at the front and it has all the requirements set forth by Mr. Stanford in his article.



Second Floor.

Experience Teaches.

Mr. Wrigley, ignoring the pessimists who gratuitously assured him that the district did not yet demand up-to-date fixtures and arrangements such as he proposed tp instal, has had the courage and foresight to equip his store according to his own ideas, and the initial expense incurred is rapidly being justified by the results. Mr. Wrigley has an excellent location in a district which is fast becoming populated by families who are moving out of the heart of the city and settling further west and his already large trade is rapidly increasing.

The city being too slow to suit Mr. Wrigley, he took the initiative himself, and has asphalt pavement laid down all round the building, with the natural result of greatly improving its appearance, in addition to preventing the mud foot-bath which his customers would otherwise be obliged to undergo in sloppy weather before they could reach the store.

A Profitable Asset.

Confectionery deserves an important place in every grocery store in Mr. Wrigley's estimation, and two handsome silent salesmen on the left side of the store bear out this view in a practical manner. The confectionery department, in fact, comes in for an unusually large share of attention and is patronized by the parents no less than by their children.

Front Elevation.

Electrically-ground Coffee.

Two handsome computing scales of the latest pattern and a small balance scale for the confectionery department, make an imposing array on the counters, and another feature which is somewhat exceptional to find among the smaller stores is an electric coffee mill. The popular interest which this attracts is so great that Mr. Wrigley is frequently obliged to give a demonstration of its internal workings for an admiring circle of customers. There is no doubt that in appearance, simplicity and general efficiency it has the old-time wheel grinder beaten six different ways.

East Elevation.

Soap, Scents and Simplicity.

There is a neat little office at the far end of the store, and opposite it an extra counter for weighing and packing telephone orders. One of the largest patterns of Eureka refrigerators, with separate compartments for butter, cheese, lard and meats stands between the office and order counter, while at the top of the store, facing the confectionery department, a silent salesman with oval glass front displays the merits of several lines of soap and perfumery.

Simplicity is the key-note of all Mr. Wrigley's window dressing. His displays are conservative and you will never see his windows piled up with a heterogeneous mass composed of half-a-hundred varieties of goods. His windows are designed to give a good broad hint of what his store contains, and to induce passers-by to investigate further for themselves.

The Architect.

The plans for the building were designed by J. Hunt Stanford, of Toronto, and a great deal of admiration was expressed by those who saw the original drawings in this office at the care and attention to detail exercised in their preparation. Mr. Stanford's increasing clientele has necessitated his moving into larger offices at 61 College street and we are authorized to say that he will be pleased to answer either personally or by mail any questions in connection with store-architecture.

A Few Figures.

In conclusion, it will be of interest to quote Mr. Wrigley on the subject of cost:

The bare building, including heating	$7,500
Refrigerator, scales, coffee mill (electric)	350
Complete lighting fixtures with seven switches	46

The store contains 25 electric lights and three gas fixtures. Mr. Wrigley figures the annual cost of lighting at about $50. Some of the estimates given for lighting fixtures were as high as $60.

HOW I BROKE INTO THE MARKET

Green Country Lad's First Impressions of Toronto.

My dad, you know, runs the Cross Roads store at Fonsonby, six miles north of the hustling, bustling, sometimes dead, sometimes crazy, but always "get there" Guelph. He used to travel—he says traveling spoils a man—I guess that's why he now sells groceries. He sells everything and everybody now. He promised me if I stuck to shovelling sugar for four years till I learnt how, he would send me to the world's biggest and vainest city, Toronto, to buy goods, when I finished my training. Well, I loafed, hustled when I had to, and never really woke up till I struck Toronto. (Moral.—Send your clerks to Toronto occasionally.)

I sometimes went into Guelph, drove up with our team of one mule and an ox, and stopped at J. H. Simpson's Co.'s wholesale house for our weekly supply of goods. Say, that was great. Mr. Simpson used to take me into the office, smile, and ask me if I ever smoked? Of course, I used to say no. Mr. Simpson would ask how trade was. His son—the traveler—he used to be in the warehouse then—would chat away, too, and I would feel just a real, fine grocer. Well, at last the great day came, and in a ready-made suit, about three inches too short, and a coat built for father, I bought a ticket at Guelph's apology for a station and started.

I had a fine time going down ; smoked a traveler's cigar and got awfully sick; I arrived quite dazed, but happy ; a green country lad in the terribly wicked city of Toronto. On arriving, those green-suited smart alecks in the union station wanted to carry my grips, but I was not used to that and so preferred to carry my own. That seemed safer. I got out on Front street, and it looked as if the whole world was burnt. I took a car, and the conductor asked me where I wanted to get off. I said, "At The Canadian Grocer." He said, "Oh, you are a make-believe grocer. Are you to give an exhibition at the pure food show ?" I denied the soft impeachment and said I could shovel a barrel of Redpath's in just exactly twenty minutes, tieing and folding. He then asked me if I could tie this and threw me off the car, but I would not have minded if those Blue Ribbon tea girls hadn't laughed. I think those pretty Blue Ribbon girls are a deep-laid scheme. The merchant gets in the tea webb—the girls smile—he is then completely bewildered. The tea men say, "Let me send you a case," and the poor grocer just sighs, "Yes."

I went with fear and trembling into The Grocer office, and asked to see the advertising manager. I had once sent in a backwoods advertisement, I painted it on a beam and drew a picture of it, and—shades of uncle's ghost ! It was advertising tea at 23 cents. A man up north saw the ad. and thought it was a wholesale ad. for tea ; a forty-cent line for twenty-three cents. He sent in $23 for a 100-lb. chest. Papa gave me 5c. worth of all-week sucking balls for that sale.

Well, say, don't say a word—but I think that advertising editor is a bluff. I only saw an ordinary man. I could only think of him as sitting in a glass cage with all the typewriters around him, and he was lord of all.

Well, I saw all through Gowans, Kent Co.'s. Doesn't that fellow who writes the advertising rank away up among the world's big men ? He and J. W. Charles, of H. P. Eckardt & Co., are relgtives of Mr. Taft, secretary of the navy for Roosevelt. They are all men of parts, bright, brainy and with hearts like a barrel of sugar. Well, I saw them make cut glass, and it was a miracle. They just take a piece of glass and cut and polish it into a beautiful creation of crystal. But such dirty work !

What do you think, though? I bearded the lion in his den—H. P. Eckardt. I went right over—just across the street—because I had an order, and asked for the boss. Nothing else would do. My, but didn't I feel big. He hollered in a tremendous basso, "Come in." I trembled. I quaked. But in I went. He said, "Sit down." Of course I sat down, but would much rather have sat through the floor. He said, "What's your name, laddie ?" I answered, "Julius Christopher Reginald Percy Freshwater." He laughed at me and said I was all there anyway. Wonder what he meant ? He said, "Yes, I know your father. He's a fine man." He asked me what my ambition was, and I told him, "groceries." Then he said he would give me a job any time. My dad says he was only jollying, to please me, 'cause pa was a customer. Well, I'll make him eat "jolly pie" some day. I soon became quite at home, and then he didn't think quite so much of me. However, at twelve o'clock he asked me if I had a place to eat. I said, "Yes, I guess quick lunch for mine," but he said, "Come with me." He went over back streets and up a magnificent entrance into a toilet room, where "darkies" brushed and polished our shoes, and then showed us into the swellest grill-room you ever saw, I asked where we were, and he said, "The King Edward," Hurrah ! I did think I would have it on the fellows at Fonsonby.

The tenderest beefsteak you ever tasted was served, and Mr. Eckardt told me a grocery business was as good as any, and that a man who was a gentleman was a gentleman anywhere. That little talk has been an inspiration to me ever since. When it came to settling, I wanted to pay half, but he said he would not hear of it and would be insulted. But say, when I saw the amount of the bill I shut-up, and we went back to the warehouse.

Before ordering the goods pa told me to get, I had planned just how I should beat him down, to show the boss how smart I was ; but that fellow with glasses in Eckardt's just pulled it out of me like string and said, "Is that all ?" amd asked if he could put in two barrels of sugar to make up weight. I'm sure that man doesn't know just how he crushed my young spirit.

I went to other stores and said I was from Fonsonby—old Freshwater's son. They, of course, all shook hands. Finally growing tired of Warren Bros,., Salada Tea, Red Rose, Eby, Blain's and Kinnear's, I went to Davidson & Hay's. The travelers jollied me for fair—told me to go to the St. Clair theatre and see wonderful things abbreviated—another, I think the boss, said Shea's was good enough for me—funny, how bad these travelers are. Well, I went up to Shea's and bought a box seat, right next the stage. The band played, the people smiled, and out came the prettiest, daintiest little girl you ever saw. She danced and sang, and finally spotting me as rustic, started to sing a love song right at me. My susceptible, young heart jumped and quivered.

She continued to tease ; I could not stand it. I forgot the audience and forgot myself, forgot everything, but that the sweetest girl in all the world was making love to me. With one bound I was on the stage, in another my arm was around her waist. It didn't look quite so good at close quarters, like a painted doll, but still I felt her and I gave her one passionate embrace. She staggered back, crying "don't." I gasped—a blinding light in front, beyond a sea of faces, beside me a shrinking girl, and over all a thunder of applause and laughter. I then climbed back into the box.

The uproar continued and I got up and said if the lady demands an apology surely she will admit the attraction was irresistible. And if the audience demand it I will tell a tale of Fonsonby, near Guelph, to justify my conduct. Once upon a time a man in Fonsonby got sick. A doctor was called. He got worse. Another, and yet another, doctor was called, and, of course, he died. When he arrived at the gate, St. Peter said, "You come from Fonsonby, my lad ; well, I guess you'll have to go to hades. The gates clanged and Percy was in hell. He saw men playing tennis and other games ; iced sherry flips being passed around, and he said, "Surely this isn't hell." "Of course it is, you idiot," said one. He went on a little farther, through a beautiful grove, where birds were singing, flowers blooming and everything lovely. Then he saw a banquet that might have been spread in the King Edward, and men about smoking and drinking. Finally he asked a silver-haired old gentleman drinking whiskey, "Why this was mis-called hell ?" "This called hell, my boy ; you don't know what you are talking about. Don't you miss something you enjoyed in Fonsonby ?" "My goodness, you don't mean to say there are no ladies here ?" "That's just what I mean, my lad ; that's the hell of it." Well, say, the crowd laughed and clapped, and I felt pretty big for a time.

Next I sallied into Eaton's, but it seemed just like a circus without the fun, except that all the girls laughed at me. Say, they must sell at least fifty dollars' worth of stuff there in a day.

Once we had a demonstration in Fonsonby. Mr. Blackburn, the genial pusher for Mr. Patrick, sent a lady for Crossed Fish sardines. She was small, but she stirred up Fonsonby. Every unattached male resident was in love with her and she took many captives and sold much vidona and herrings. She is now in Detroit.

I was in Michie's. Now I know why Toronto business men are all fat and happy ; they are fed well.

I spent all my money, saw lots of things, and went home in a "Fit the Form" suit that made me as swell as Mr. Larkin, the tea king. I swept into Fonsonby, swept the floor, dusted the shelves, put white coats on the clerks, dressed up the window with peas, i for 25 cents, put a painted ad. on the cow shed, sent a man hustling for trade, smiled on the ladies, and in one week after, father took me into partnership. Hurrah for Toronto !

A MERCHANT WHO MAKES TWO PRICES AND GETS THEM.

S. Ballachey, of Paisley, is one of Ontario's most successful general storekeepers and one especially of his methods is interesting and instructive. But first to tell about a new move he made recently. A few months ago he purchased the block adjoining his business and has remodelled it into a very modern three-storey building with about fifty feet frontage. He has reorganized his business into five distinct departments and for each has secured an expert as manager. Each manager does his own buying and is responsible for his department.

Mr. Ballachey's office is a little distance back from the front door. Between the office and the door he has reserved a space 12 or 14 feet square furnished with chairs and benches and there anyone who has to wait can make themselves comfortable. A farmer's wife comes in with a basket of produce, hands her basket to a clerk and sits down while the eggs and butter are being counted and weighed. Mr. Ballachey is generally about to speak a pleasant word.

Now then the feature referred to at the start: Mr. Ballachey has two prices for all his goods, a cash price and a credit price. He makes the cash price worth while, too. For instance, take sugar just now, his cash price is $4.75 and his credit price is $5.25. He explains to his customers that he can't afford to carry them for six months or so for the cost prices of his goods. He sticks to his prices and gets them. Mr. Ballachey never bothers himself about what his opposition is doing and he never makes the mistake of following in the wake of any of his competitors by copying their methods. Mr. Ballachey is a merchant in his own right, with the independence to pursue his own course and the capacity to make it successful.

MOVING TO NEW QUARTERS.

Chase & Sanborn, the coffee importers, Montreal, are preparing to remove from their present quarters on St. Paul street, to new and larger quarters on St. Helen street. The new building is a fine, large brick structure, six storeys high. It is up-to-date in every respect and will be just what is needed by Chase & Sanborn, whose business is increasing rapidly. They will put in considerable new machinery, duplicating their present plant.

R. R. Drysdale has purchased the grocery business of R. L. Somerville, Lanark.

NEW HIGHWAYS OF DEVELOPMENT IN THE WEST

Many Hundreds of Miles Through New Country Under Contract—Brand New Towns at Regular Intervals.

The summer of 1907 promises to see the greatest activity in railway construction that Western Canada has ever known and the expenditure of the vast sums of money required to carry on the projected extensions will undoubtedly assure a prosperous year for the west and employment for all the labor that can be attracted to the country.

Work is being pushed ahead rapidly on the Grand Trunk Pacific lines, the Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific have large extensions projected and under contract and the coming summer will see active work on Jas. J. Hill's line from Winnipeg to the coast. In all some 5,800 miles of road are under contract for the various companies, made up as follows: Canadian Northern, 1,500 miles; Canadian Pacific, 1,400 miels; Great Northern, 1,000 miles and Grand Trunk Pacific, 1,900 miles. In addition, taught by the sad experience of the past winter, the railways are spending large sums for additional equipment of the lines already in operation.

Many New Towns.

This means much for the immediate development and prosperity of the west. In the older countries and in the older settled parts of Canada railways are built in order to connect towns already in existence, but in the west the railways when built open up new territory and are responsibe for the existence of many new towns. It is true that the Great Northern lines in Canada will run throw the settled portions of the west; the Great Northern is not a pioneer road and it is receiving no Government assistance. But while this is true of the Great Northern it is not the case with the Grand Trunk Pacific or the projected extensions of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern. These lines will open up new territory and any person familiar with the new main line of the Canadian Northern between Winnipeg and Edmonton knows what that means. On that line there are now many prosperous little towns that had no existence eighteen months ago. The road made accessible a rich agricultural country and settlers took up land along the line. The new towns were a necessary result. More than one hundred new towns will be founded during 1907 along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific between Winnipeg and Edmonton. This announcement has been made by the officials of the new transcontinental. It has been the policy of the C.P.R. to keep the towns about twelve miles apart but the G.T.P. management propose establishing stations and townsites at more than 100 points on the 790 miles of track between Winnipeg and Edmonton. This means a new town every seven miles.

West's Great Need.

The great need of the Canadian West is adequate transportation facilities. Given a big extension of the railway systems and adequate equipment for every mile of track in operation nothing can stop the speedy development of the country and the exploiting of its varied resources. Immigrants are pouring in this spring at the rate of more than 1,000 per day and the big problem is to get them to their destinations quickly and safely. The western market will absorb vast quantities of merchandise but the problem this winter and spring has been to effect deliveries of goods ordered. For that reason the great railway development promised for this year is welcomed by every business man interested in the west. The experience of the winter has taught him that the railways must improve their equipment if they are to provide satisfactory service and boards of trade are demanding that before the Governments advance any further assistance to the railways for the construction of new mileage, whether by way of subsidy or quarantee of bonds, they must insist upon the purchase of more motive power anw rolling stock for the mileage already in operation.

The railway magnates are among the shrewdest business men in Canada. The fact that they are making such large expenditures for the construction of additional mileage is conclusive evidence of their unbounded confidence in the future of the country.

TRADE WITH BRITISH GUIANA.

Demerara Man Discusses Possibilities of Greatly Increasing It.

A prominent business man of Demerara has written to the Department of Trade and Commerce regarding the possibilities of greatly increasing trade between British Guiana and Canada. He says in part:

"The recent visit of delegates from the Boards of Trade of Canada must eventually do immense good.

"There are enormous possibilities in British Guiana, a country about as large as Great Britain. I took special care to arrange an exhibit of New York and other goods for the inspection of delegates to show them where Canadian exports might be largely increased.

"When I was visiting Canada in 1901, Canadian millers had not then the plant to make the inferior kinds of cheap flour necessary for this part of the world. A heap of Canadian flour is blended in New York with inferior United States goods and is shipped down this way as the production of the latter country. Canadians imagine that it passes through New York and reaches the West Indies the same as it left them. If Canadian millers were able to cater fully for all the various qualities of flour required in the West Indies, the business would be well worth capturing from the United States."

MORE SCOTCH CURING.

A cable from London to-day states that Alex. Flett, a Scotch fish curer, after negotiations with the Government of Newfoundland, has decided to engage in herring curing there. He is sending a number of fishermen, coopers and fishergirls from Moray Firth.

OLIVE OIL: ITS SOURCE, MANUFACTURE AND MARKETS

AN INTERESTING DISCUSSION ON A LITTLE KNOWN ARTICLE.

Few people have any idea of the extent to which olive oil is used, of the extraordinary number of uses to which it is put, or of the vast industry of which it is the product. The olive is one of the leading fruits of the world, and is borne upon a tree which, for profitable longevity and general hardiness, must, in many instances at least, be conceded the arboreal palm.

Throughout the sub-tropical parts of the Old World the olive has been grown upon a commercial basis for many centuries, individual trees being known to be more than 1,000 years old. The trees begin to bear when eight years old, reaching their full period of productivity at about thirty.

The season for extracting the oil is very short, but during the ten weeks or so during which this work is in progress, employment is given to about 71,000 people in Italy alone. A remarkable stimulus has been given to the industry through the introduction of modern machinery, although in many districts the most primitive methods still obtain, the oil being extracted under conditions which, however old-fashioned and out of date they may appear to the modern manufacturer, nevertheless continue to show uniformly good results year by year. In 1903 there were 18,137 olive oil factories in operation in Italy, using in the aggregate 31,917 presses, and of this number only 2,412 employed power presses. The visitor to Italy who is fond of exploring out of the way corners may come across an old stone mill among the hills, tended by an old man and worked by an equally decrepit looking horse, both of them helping to contribute their small quota to swell the amount of one of the most valuable commodities of their country.

Modern Method of Extraction.

For the production of oil the ripe fruits are carefully gathered by hand, bruised as little as possible, and, preferably, crushed at once, otherwise they are partially dried in very thin layers through which air must circulate freely to avoid molding and fermenting, unsound fruit being prone to decay and impair the flavor and odor of the oil.

An old practice was to crush the fruit by means of heavy millstones in pits, but the oil thus extracted from the kernels has been found to injure both the flavor and the keeping quality of the oil obtained from the pulp. Modern crushers, therefore, do not break the stones. The crushed pulp is then pressed, very gradually, between linen sheets. A second pressing is made after the pulp has been mixed with cold water. Other pressings are sometimes given, each one resulting in a grade of oil inferior to the preceding. The two first grades are sometimes mixed.

Since the separation of the oil from the juice by gravity is hazardous on account of liability to ferment, the impurities are washed out quickly by special apparatus in which a current of cool water comes in contact with a small quantity of the juice, mixes with it, separates the larger particles of pulp, and allows the oil to rise through a tall column of water which further washes the oil globules as they rise to the surface.

After being allowed to stand for a time in a cool room this oil is racked off and sold as "new oil," or may be allowed to stand again for further clarification. The American market demands a clear oil, and for this reason much of the domestic oil has to be filtered, a process which, if often repeated, impairs the flavor and gives the oil a greasy appearance. It is essential that absolute cleanliness should be observed throughout the process, for olive oil is quick to absorb any taint that may be present, either in the utensils or in the air.

A Wide Sphere of Usefulness.

The finished oil is pale yellow, inodorous, and is used largely in cookery, pharmacy, for lubricating and illuminating purposes and for making Castile and other kinds of soap, the lower grades being used most frequently for the last purpose. Olive oil possesses, in addition, remarkable medicinal properties, forming, as it does, the basis of many liniments, and being used as an antidote in certain cases of poisoning.

The Centres of Production.

Italy, Greece and Spain are the three countries in which the greatest quantity of olive oil is produced. It forms, besides, the staple export of Corfu, in the Mediterranean, the crop of 1905 falling just short of creating a new record for that island. It is difficult to arrive at anything like a correct estimate of what this unusually large yield actually amounted to, since a moderately large proportion, say one-quarter or one-third, still remains in the hands of the growers for sale and final export, but a general idea of its proportions may be obtained from the statement that the value of the quantity shipped, approximately 14,000 tons, would total $1,450,000 first cost, or f.o.b., including the value of the casks and export duty of 22 per cent., $550,000 additional.

Italy Leads.

In Italy the production of olive oil steadily diminished from 1879 to 1901, but the large increase which commenced with that date and has since been sustained may be gathered from the following table, which shows the average quantities in tons :

Years.	Production.	Imports.	Exports.
1879-1883	305,100	5,670	75,220
1886-1890	228,300	4,280	54,870
1891-1895	222,900	3,760	52,410
1896-1900	160,200	11,110	47,080
1901-1904	241,400	12,900	44,960

Although it is a rising industry its development in Italy is slow, owing to the fact that the soil and climate in that country are not conducive to the production of the raw material. The principal centres of production are in the provinces of Guylie, Sicily, Campania, Calabria, Tuscany, Rome, Marche Umbria and Liguria. There is no doubt that a certain proportion of seed oil is used to adulterate the pure article and cases where olive oil has been adulterated with cotton-seed in the United States and then shipped back to Italy, are not unknown.

The Situation in Spain.

Owing to the failure of the olive crop of 1906, the value of the oil exported from Spain amounted to only $4,135,748, as compared with $8,650,002 during 1905, the respective quantities being 18,893 and 34,228 tons. The increased prices, both in olives and olive oil, atoned in part, for the 30 or 40 per cent. shortage in the crop.

In 1905 the sale of olive oil to the United States from Spain amounted to 7,598 barrels. In 1906, 75 barrels represented the total exports to American houses. Consul D. R. Birch, of Malaga, in the course of a review of the olive oil trade for that district, says : "Extremely dry weather during 1905 and most of last year brought the crop of 1905 to such small proportions that most of the oil pressed was put to home consumption, while the yield of 1906 was the smallest for twenty years. The month of January is usually the busiest for the olive oil exporter, but in the opening month of 1907 the trade was at an absolute standstill. High expectations are, however, entertained for next season's crop."

The Outlook in Greece.

The olive oil yield of the entire Peloponnesus for 1906 was 50 per cent. lower than for the preceding year, but in making this comparison due allowance must be made for the fact that the crop of 1905 was an exceptional one, and that the year 1906 was unfortunate in two respects : First, because the month of May, the period when the olive tree is usually in full blossom, was cold, blustering, and altogether unseasonable, and, secondly, because nature seems to have provided a method of her own to preserve the trees from exhaustion by almost invariably following a very prolific season with a much reduced crop of olives for the succeeding year.

In 1905 the wholesale price of olive oil was about 50 cents per gallon, in 1906 it was over 75 cents. The large quantity of stock left over from the preceding year, prevented the further rise in the cost which would undoubtedly have taken place had there been no such surplus.

Notwithstanding the prohibitive prices considerable quantities were shipped to foreign markets, principally to the United States, during the year 1906.

OLD MARE'S LAMENT.

Not Necessarily a Grocer's Delivery, But it May Be.

This article appeared in a Kingston paper and the pleasant humor of it is not unfamiliar to Canadian Grocer readers. It is worth while :

"I am only an old broken-down mare, full of aches and pains ; don't get enough to eat and drink, and have to work hard all day and sleep on a hard, dirty floor with enough straw or sawdust to make it uncomfortable. My driver has a heart as big as a cranberry. He uses a leather whip on me as the other kind break too easily. He whips me to make me go and the same instant swears at me and pulls me up. Of course he makes an ass of himself and is ignorant, and I have to suffer. A lot of this inhuman treatment to us poor dumb animals could be stopped if the boys in blue did their duty, but they walk in a groove and can't see over it. Their chief is too good-natured to make them do their duty and the city by-laws are dead letters. Our Magistrate Farrell is the right man in the right place, but the chief and his regiment don't give him enough to do. When I was a colt I was praised, petted, combed, groomed and well fed, and so it is with nearly every good horse, as they get old, they have to rough it. I feel thankful I have my tail left, so I can whisk the flies off. It is a cruel practice cutting off a horse's tail for style, and I hope Parliament will pass an act to put an end to it. I am told a new practice is in vogue in this enlightened age, viz., docking horses' heads and getting them stuffed for mantel ornaments, thus going from one extreme to another. Of course this is practised in high circles and must be overlooked.

"Another source of evil is pressed hay whereby the farmer is enabled to scrape up all the dirt on his farm and work it off. Who suffers ? The poor horse who has to get outside of it all. Another is bad, rough harness and wagons not greased properly. I heard the humane society was going to make an effort to organize and fight for us dumb animals, and as I was quietly nibbling my timothy last night, I thought if we had more St. Pauls in the pulpit, we would not be overlooked, and would get our rights. I wish we could form a union and get shorter hours and more hay and a holiday once in a while. Hundreds of my younger brethren are having a good time, but their turn will come. I was a high stepper, and was given apples and good things to eat, and had my nose rubbed and good things said to me, polished harness, and rubber-tired rig. Oh, yes.

"Well, I hope the society will get stronger and bring good results this year, and in every case of cruelty, I would suggest that a good, big, strong policeman use the lash or leather whip vigorously on the back of the offender. Hoping for good times to come, I will now go and try to get a drink at the fountain.—Yours truly, BAY [illegible]

EVERY GROCER CAN WRITE.

A popular fallacy, and one which we have had advanced to us often as an excuse why grocers do not send copy, is "I can't write." There never was a more mistaken idea. A man can write just as well as he can talk, and usually a good deal better. The chief difficulty in our opinion, which stands in the way of our receiving original matter, is "lack of nerve." A grocer gets it into his head that he's only a business man, that his English isn't grammatical anyway, that he's a grocer first and an author second, with a few other thoughts of a cimilar character, until he finally works himself up into being positively ashamed to let us have a look at any efforts he may have made. Just write to us as if it were a letter home. We'll do the rest.

PRIZE WINDOW DRESSING

Awards in the Canadian Grocer's April Competition—Four Cracking Good Windows.

A. Hagmeier, Hespeler, 1st.
Robt. M. Hood & Co., Nelson, B.C., 2nd.
Wallbridger & Clark, Belleville, 3rd.

These are the winners in The Canadian Grocer's April window dressing competition. For several reasons this arrangement of the awards is open to discussion. These windows are all so good and yet so diversified in plane, prepare and treatment that the judges had to go to a good deal of trouble to arrive at a decision. Not satisfied then they submitted the photos to three experts in one of the largest retail grocery stores in Canada, who were in no way personally interested, and the judgment of two of them confirmed the award.

Mr. Hagmeier's window was not awarded the palm because of its superior artistic value, but because it was an original conception, worked out in a way to give the best results. The artistic plan must appeal to everyone, but it is apparent that Mr. Hagmeier makes his window talk. It is an Easter window. Mr. Hagmeier makes his window say, "We sell flowers." He does, too. He has a general grocery store, but he makes a specialty of cut flowers, and therein he sets an example of profit-taking that might be followed by many grocers throughout the country to their great advantage. Flowers are easily obtainable by express from wholesale florists and growers at considerable distances. In many country places and small towns, such an undertaking would be considered a great boon by many residents.

Other Ideas.

But, to resume, Mr. Hagmeier makes a specialty also of confectionery, and along the front of the window and over an arch are displayed Easter confectionery novelties, which say plainly, "We sell confectionery."

In the centre of the window-floor is an unobtrusive, but sufficient display of commercial eggs, which says, "This is a grocery."

The window was dressed by L. G. Hagmeier, and another example of his work will be found in the confectionery department in this number. The framework for his displays he designs and makes himself.

Among the Rockies.

Robt. M. Hood's window, also for Easter, was dressed by D. C. Wilson, whose picture appears on another page. The critic's first exclamation when he looked at the photograph was, "He's got a whole grocery store in his window." Every one who saw the photo, however, was agreed that to show so much and preserve neatness and artistic value required very superior window dressing ability.

Mr. Wilson's detailed description of the window follows :—

"The window is divided in two by a glass partition. The left half during spring and summer months provided for a green grocery and fruit display ; the right half for a general grocery display.

"The idea of the Easter trim was carried out so that one division would not detract from the other; in fact, to make separate displays and serve a utility purpose as regards left half and at the same time harmonize the whole.

"Consequently the background is not in balance, but what it lacks in that particular was made up in utility.

"The left half showed a nice selection of olives, pickles, jams, preserves, marmalade and honey, the circle of preserves in centre topped with a silver fruit dish filled with oranges, apples, table raisins and bananas. In front of the shelf a row of wire baskets lined with green or white crepe, showing an assortment of fruit : apples, oranges and lemons.

The shelf had a palm in centr, also platters of lettuce spinach, rhubarb, celery and asparagus. This shelf served a utility purpose, as it could be reached from back, green stuff taken off, fresh goods taking its place. Some of our greens arrive during the day.

The Grocery Half.

"The right half of front showed the latest breakfast food (or fad) appetizers flanked with McLaren's jelly powders and extracts, and a few fancy boxes of chocolates. Behind a display of canned fish, lobsters, sardines, etc., semi-circular pyramid in centre broken to display silver fern dish with sword fern.

"In line with the fruit display, a row of Humpty-Dumpty egg crates, top row filled and pyramided ; background of Aylmer tomatoes, topped with olives in graduating sizes ; centre, Acacis palm ; side wall a large Bovril picture (en situ) to partly break view pyramids of Golden Gate coffee, topped with palm.

"Interspersed in both divisions were cut glass vases filled with choice hyacinths, narcissi, single and double daffodills.

"The arches were wound with green crepe and trails of Easter lilies. The top of the partition had fancy green crepe covering, on top trail of Easter lilies to front, down each side and along the front of window.

"Base of window was covered with white crepe. The decorative idea carried out was entirely for color effect, green and white predominating and the orange color brightening up and was actually successful enough to elicit the remark from the local papers, "A fine, artistic display.'

WINDOW COMPETITION—G. Hagmeier, Hespeler, First.

"The utility idea carried out was for a seasonable display and a selling window,"

Contrary to Theories.

Modern window dressing theories are opposed to too great intermingling of goods. If each division of this large window were sub-divided into two or perhaps three sections by mirrors, small lattice screens or otherwise, and a display of some particular line made in each the effectiveness of the window would be immensely increased. So said the experts.

A Fine Third.

One of the judges would have awarded the palm to the Wallbridge & Clarke window, and all were agreed that it was an excellent display, conveying a distinct idea of fruits and showed very effective treatment of the narrow space allotted to it. However, we are inclined to think a majority of our readers, could a vote be taken, would agree with the judges, Here is one criticism made. The pyramid of fig boxes should have been topped with glassed figs or some fig preparation and not by a different fruit, such as a pineapple.

The Canadian Grocer correspondent in Belleville says :—

"This is the same firm that won the fourth prize in the recent contest for honors held by the Bovril company. The firm's windows are dressed under the supervision of Arthur Wallbridge. This one is meant to impress upon the public 'spring needs,' and the work was productive of good results. It was certainly very tempting, and many sincere expressions to that effect were heard. The window consists of bananas, oranges, pineapples, dates, figs, lemons, white clover honey, preserved ginger, olives, marmalade, jams and jellies, preserved fruits, Maraschino cherries, Bar-le-Duc jelly, calves' foot jelly. These are all of the finest grades of goods and is it any wonder the window could not be passed without a word of admiration?"

Something Striking in Canned Goods.

The canned vegetable window of Dillon Bros., Halifax, dressed by C. B. Marsden, was not judged for a place within the money, since there were only three prizes, but everyone to whom the picture was shown was immediately impressed with it as an exceptionally effective display of canned goods. It certainly deserves special mention.

WINDOWS THAT CATCH BUYERS.

Picnic camp scenes are always in order as window exhibits during picnic weather. The great point to be borne in mind in making such exhibits is that the appeal is made not only to picnickers but the general public, the camp scene merely affording an opportunity for the exhibition of certain food products in a way to create an appetite for the goods and a desire to buy. We always prefer the exhibit that holds the buying stimulus. The window display that amazes, startles or charms the spectator, without making him say, "That looks tempting ! I'd like to have some right now !" is a display that we have little use for. It has its uses, no doubt, but we know of better exhibits. As every week in the year ought to tbe made an "eating week" for the grocer, so also should every exhibit in the window be a make-you-buy exhibit.—The Merchant and General Storekeeper.

SIX RULES FOR THE CLERK.

1. The first requisite is to look cheerful ; always greet customers with a pleasing smile.

2.. Don't ask, "Ate you waited on ?" Remark politely, "Something you wish, madam ?" or "Can I assist you, madam ?" Never address customers as follows : "Something you want, lady (or gentleman) ?" Always address a customer "madam" or "sir."

3. Don't ask a customer who has purchased one item, "Is that all ?" Such remarks have a tendency to make a purchaser feel cheap and to think that we are unappreciative. Address such customers : "Is there anything else you wish ?"

4. Don't allow any person to attract your attention (excepting when we are very busy) until the customer you are serving receives her package and change. Always give the customer a gracious smile, and "Thank you ; please call again." These attentions are expected by customers and are appreciated.

5. Explain to the best of your ability the merits of the goods, and at all times show your willingness to help the customer to decide on the article that will prove the most satisfactory. When a customer points to an article and asks, "What is that ?" don't reply in an abrupt manner, "Breakfast food," or "Biscuits." Be more explicit and say that it is Consumers' Biscuit, at the same time stating the price and other information pertaining to the item referred to.

6. Persistent application to your duties, cheerfulness, with a pleasing smile and willingness to cater to the wishes of all patrons, are the most essential elements to bring success to the salespeople and to insure an increasing clientele for the store.—Retail Grocers' Advocate.

BEST INVESTED HOURS ARE IN THE WINDOW

VIEWS ON THE VALUE OF DISPLAY.

By an Experienced Traveller.

(No other man is so advantageously situated as the observant and thoughtful commercial traveler for arriving at an informed opinion of the relative value of retailing methods. A representative of The Canadian Grocer, speaking with B. E. Miller, of the Red Rose Tea Ontario staff, the latter expressed some views on window-dressing. He was asked to put them in the form of an article for publication. He has done so after a good deal of urging, and the article, though short, is well worth while.—Editor.)

Goods well shown are half sold.

To the casual observer this statement appears rather meaningless and far-fetched, but if we stop and look around us we will see that it carries more weight than we would at first expect.

The largest and most successful retailers in both Canada and the United States devote a good deal of their time and thought as to ways and means of properly displaying their goods. Not only is this so, but they go still further and set aside a substantial cost appropriation to be used exclusively for fixtures, salaries, etc., in connection with the carrying out of their plans.

Possibly you will say, "This is all very well for the large city stores, but doesn't apply in my case." Let us see.

How many times have you purchased a hat, necktie, a pair of shoes, etc., from having seen them attractively displayed in some window as you were passing along the street?

Dillon Bros., Halifax—A Capital Canned Goods Display.

How many times have you bought goods that you would not otherwise have purchased because the salesman displayed them to good advantage as regards quality and price?

Could you imagine a traveler successfully introducing a new line of goods without having a proper line of samples to show the prospective buyer?

From these examples I think you will agree that what I have said applies not only to the large retailers, but to retailers in general.

The question at once arises as to what are the best means of displaying the goods?

There is a diversity of opinion as regards this, but it is pretty generally acknowledged that the "window display" is the best.

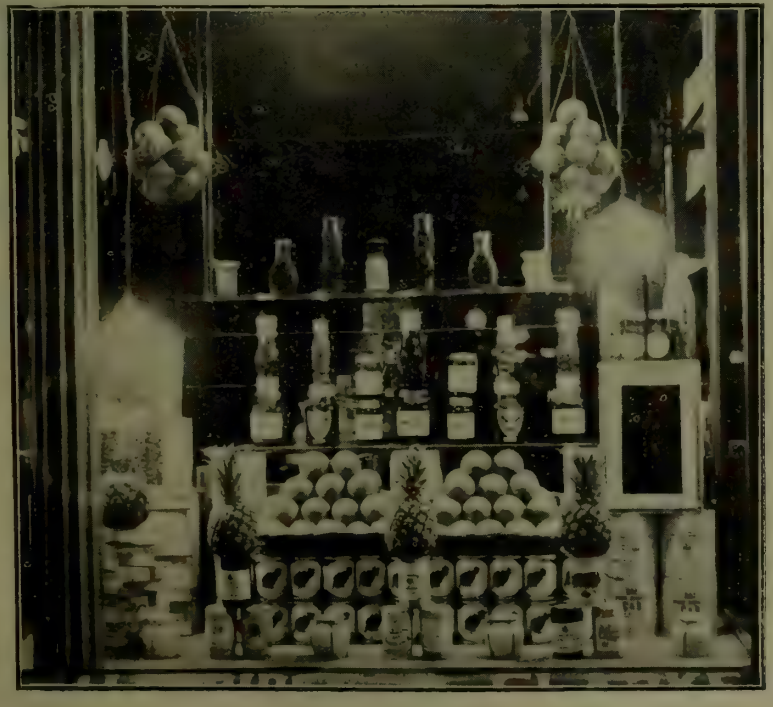
In fact the art of window-dressing has become a well-paid profession.

By showing your goods in the windows you not only reach your regular customers but the public in general, and will thus both increase your business with old customers and probably make many new ones.

The mistake is too often made of putting too much in the window. Better put a few articles in and arrange them tastefully. If it is possible, make your goods appeal to the appetite as well as the eye. This can be done by either card suggestions or association with other goods.

Windows should be dressed at least once a week (twice is better) or if you have two windows, dress alternately, say, one on Wednesday and one on Friday, as it always gives the store front a fresh and clean appearance.

If you have a clerk with a taste for window-dressing help him cultivate it and you will soon find that instead of his time being wasted, the hours spent in the window are the best invested hours of the week.



WINDOW COMPETITION—Wallbridge & Clarke, Belleville, Third.

BRACE OF BUSINESS-BRINGERS

A window display that attracted more than ordinary attention in Toronto lately is one installed by Wm. J. McFarland, on Queen St. East. Its chief claim to special recognition lay in the peculiar aptness of its appearance. We regret that we are unable to show a cut of the display, but the somewhat flat arrangement did not lend itself as readily to photography as it does to description.

The window was put in with the direct intention of stimulating the demand for certain brands of condensed milk, the idea being exceptionally well fitted to pull results because of the severity of the milk famine due to a difference between producers and city dealers which was then at its height. The background of the window was draped with black cloth, against which the white tins showed up to the best advantage. In the centre of the window was a "stake and rider" fence, enclosing a space of a few feet covered with green paper to represent a grass field. Within the fence browsed two very good imitation toy cows, and all round the outside were arranged little pyramids of condensed milk and cream, of two or three different brands.

The words, "Ready for the Milk Famine" were prominently displayed on a card set immediately behind and above the field, and Mr. McFarland told The Grocer that his sale of condensed milk was increased from five to six hundred per cent. solely through the attention which the display attracted. He sold milk to scores of people who stopped to pass some comment or to inquire the price, and who had never been in his store before. He sold so much that he had to draw upon the stock displayed in the window in order to supply the demand and when The Grocer last passed that way it looked as if there was going to be a condensed milk famine before the day was out.

About a month ago Mr. McFarland put in a pork and beans window which was declared by many travelers and otner competent judges to surpass anything they had seen in the city for months. The entire floor-space was thickly covered with white beans, except for a space enclosed by a wooden fence (identical with that which later did duty for the cows), within which several white china pigs disported themselves to the very tangible profit of their owner and the delight of every child in the neighborhood. A card with the statement "Well fed are those who eat Clark's pork and beans" was included in the display, and out of curiosity Mr. McFarland counted the number of people who in five minutes stopped to smile at the window or make some remark upon it. The tally was more than 50 in five minutes. Effective groupings of the cans was of course a prominent part of the display.

At the time this window was put in there was little or no demand for pork and beans, the season being practically over. The time consumed in its arrangement was not over two hours, and for many days after it was removed the demand which it created for the brand shown was well sustained in spite of the fact that the season for its consumption was virtually at an end.

The preparation of these two window displays was no easy matter. The greatest difficulty was experienced in finding toy cows and pigs suitable for the purpose. Mr. McFarland bicycled all over Toronto before he found anything that satisfied him. The trouble was more than justified by the results, but the latter were by no means exceptional and are at the command of anyone who will study what is undoubtedly one of the most important departments of the retail store.

ATTRACTIVE PROVISION WINDOW

For the past eleven years, Mr. Chas. Barber has been head clerk for J. & A. McHardy, wholesale and retail pork packers. During that time he made many warm and true friends, and learned the packing business and retail selling of pork from A to Z.

About ten months ago, Jos. O'Mara, of Palmerston, started a branch store on Quebec street, Guelph, wishing to have a share of the very profitable pork business done in that city. At first there was a tremendous rush, but soon it cooled off, and in the course of three months he had no less than three different managers. At last he secured the services of Charles Barber, who has since that time conducted the business. Mr. Barber did not start off with a big splash, but has quietly and continually worked his way into the favor iof the public. They have at present as clean and neat a pork store as you would find anywhere, not excepting Toronto, and supply the O.A.C. college, Macdonald Hall, and other large institutions.

The illustration is a photo of their window. It may give grocers who desire to run a provision counter an idea as to how to dress an attractive cooked-meat window. Hams are displayed on platters, decked with parsley, and evergreens. Mr. Barber uses a fine large Eureka refrigerator, marble counters, computing butchers' scales, and the trolley system of hanging hams and bacon. The walls are done in white tiling. In fact, everything looks clean and appetizing. Mr. Barber married shortly before taking over the store's management, and in his eleven years of apprenticeship saved and invested his money to good advantage.

A MAPLE PRODUCTS' SHOW.

Albert H. Nigers, clerk for H. T. Barker, Stratford, has sent to The Canadian Grocer, a pen-and-ink sketch of a maple product's window, and it is here reproduced. He says : "This window has been the means of booming the sale of maple syrup and maple sugar for us." His description of the details is as follows :

Maple Products Show—H. T. Barker's Window, Stratford

"Trees of maple branches, with cross-pieces nailed and then fastened to floor with two nails.

"Taps were made with cardboard centres, that are used in large spools of twine.

"Ground, white sheet batting, to represent snow, troughs of wooden boats used for lard. Fire underneath cauldron was of small twigs thrown carelessly over red crepe paper. Background curtain of Turkish red."

When in doubt change the window trim. You can't miss it by doing that.

THREE GOOD WINDOW DRESSERS AND THEIR WORK

The Successful Competitors in the Grocers' Xmas Window-Dressing Contest.

Good resolutions, like good pie-crusts, are easier to break than to make, and when many months ago we formed an inward resolve to publish, at an early date, the photographs of the winners of our Christmas window-dressing competition, together was as much of their past lives as seemed fit for publication, we honestly intended to live up to it. The delay but adds to the attractiveness of this special number of The Grocer.

To those who are more or less initiated into the mysteries of its composition, mysteries which are far less impenetrable than many would have us believe, there is something irresistibly attractive about a well-dressed window. Old-fashioned grocers, men who have been merchants for so long that they are little better than machines, and rusty ones at that, are still occasionally met with. These are the men who, having failed to move with the spirit of the times, consistently refuse to adopt modern methods in their window-dressing or any other department of their store, viewing it almost in the light of a crime to swerve a handsbreadth from the rut in which they live. "What was good enough for our fathers is good enough for us," is their suicidal motto, and so they potter along, self-satisfied, their own worst enemy and a useful warning to the younger generation.

Opportunity for the Ambitious.

Window-dressing, to be successful, must be studied. It is not necessarily a gift, though it is undeniable that some men seem to possess a special aptitude for it. Anyone, however, can make himself proficent in it who is willing to learn and will make opportunities for himself. Nowadays the wise merchant keeps his weather eye open for any sign of window-dressing ability among his clerks, and a man who is ambitious may be reasonably sure of a square deal from his employers. "Herein ought to be the pleasure of the work," writes Mr. Wilson, winner of the 3rd prize, "doing your best for your employer and gaining experience for yourself."

H. O. KIRKHAM, VICTORIA, B.C.

The First in a Large Field.

H. O. Kirkham, the 1st prize winner, is very modest about his achievements in window-display, and the success he has scored along these lines. By dint of ceaseless effort and enquiry, however, we have managed to dig out a fairly comprehensive life history, and we must rely upon the photograph, which we are told, is a speaking-likeness, to furnish our readers with any particulars which we may inadvertently omit.

Mr. Kirkham, then, was born in the Old Country, in Shropshire, 29 years ago, and at the tender age of ten came with his parents to Canada, and liked it well enough as he grew older to make it his permanent home. For ten years he pursued a farm life in Saltcoats, Assiniboia (now Saskatchewan), moving thence at the end of that time to Yorkton, in the same province. A year later saw him fairly launched in business life in the general store conducted at Yorkton by Jas. L. Magrath. Here he spent two years, and in 1900 moved to Victoria, B.C., where he has followed the grocery business ever since. For the last four years he has worked for Dixi H. Ross & Co., and has held the position of chief clerk with that firm since 1905.

Mr. Kirkham has the best wishes of The Grocer and everyone connected with it for his continued success, and if the window with which he carried off the first prize in the Christmas competition represents a fair sample of all his efforts in this line, there is no doubt that he is doing his share in raising the science of window-dressing to the level of a fine art.

A Close Second.

George Rogers, whose window captured the second prize, and who is incidentally the proprietor of one of the best-equipped stores of its size in Toronto, told us that it was more by good fortune than by design that he entered his window for the competition at all. The arrangement, he said, did not appeal to him as anything out of the ordinary, though it attracted considerable attention from passers-by. The keen perception of a friend, however, saw in the display more than ordinary merit, and Mr. Rogers was induced to have it photographed and entered in The Grocer competition. The result more than justified the good judgment of his friend, and in addition introduced us to a window-dresser of quality whom we are proud to number among our prize-winners.

Mr. Rogers, who has been a resident of Toronto for more than 20 years, was born at Lambton Mills, not so long ago that he has forgotten the date, but long enough to make him somewhat diffident about authorizing the exact figures for publication. The mere fact that he was born, however, is sufficiently specific for the purposes of this sketch.

Before he started in business for himself Mr. Rogers was connected with one store for 14 years, through five successive changes of management, "From everyone of whom," he declares, "I learnt something new." J. R. Hill was the proprietor when George Rogers started, and he was succeeded by Good Bros., and they in turn by three or four others, "So many," says Mr. Rogers, "that I have lost track of the exact number."

For five years after he had severed his connection with the last incumbents (if one may so term them) Mr. Rogers rented a store at 810 College St., where he conducted a flourishing grocery business "On a strictly cash basis," he says, "for as much cash as I could get." The modification is a subtle one, but Mr. Rogers evidently made it pay.

Last year he built his present fine store at 830 College St. His counters, fixtures, desk and shelving are all of solid oak. He has installed every modern convenience that has been invented since the flood and stands to-day an excellent example of what energy, combined with intelligence and stick-to-it-iveness can accomplish for a man who, from the outset, has made up his mind to succeed. Mr. Rogers' turnover for the first year in his new home amounted to $29,000, "And this," he tells us with characteristic opinion, "is just a hint of what I am going to make it by the end of 1907."

The Third Man Home.

D. C. Wilson, the winner of the third prize, while lacking the experience of his more successful competitors, displays a thorough knowledge of the principles of window-dressing and the different methods of their successful application. Mr. Wilson has only been seven years in Canada, having spent all his early life in Scotland, where he was born. By profession a school teacher, his connection with the grocery business extends only over the last four years, which he has spent with Robt. M. Hood & Co., at Nelson, B.C.

In the course of a very interesting letter, he says:

"No one who puts any thought into window dressing should find it any special difficulty. Rather should it be a work of pleasure. There are two rules to which I always adhere and attention to which I think makes window dressing easy and saves considerable time.

"First, always do the work after the store is closed. Day window dressing is a waste of time and the result generally a poor display.

"Second, have an idea and design thought out as suitable as possible to those goods you are going to display.

"One special line of goods makes the best display. As much as possible make your display appropriate to the season of the year. Display particularly those goods that people buy most at certain times. Never overcrowd; if you don't allow the goods in your windows to be seen it is waste of time and material to put them there at all.

"Always put in fresh goods, bright packages with clean labels, and never let your window get stale. Vary style of dressing as much as possible. Remember the window is a reflex of the store, and the first impression of the interior is often obtained from the window display. I do not believe in a closed-in window. Let people see right into the store, they are sure to see something inside to interest them; the window is not the only oyster in the soup.

"I am a firm believer in trimming the back or ledge behind the background of the window display so that customers can also inspect from the inside and at close range the same goods shown in the window proper.

"Always put your best effort into the work and try to make each display better than the last.

"Keep in view the fact that a window is in for several days, and make it a selling one and not merely a filler of space.

"The more effort one makes the more experience one acquires, and by thus applying one's self to window dressing the more one learns of interior decoration, or vice versa.

"Herein ought to be the pleasure of the work, doing your best for your employer and gaining experience for yourself.

"In conclusion, allow me to say that your articles on window dressing and store decorations, etc., ought to be read and appreciated by every clerk, and must have a very beneficial effect in that line all over Canada."

A WINDOW SAYING.

There is a sign in the window of a grocery in Fifty-third street, New York, not far west of Broadway, that is attracting attention. The sign reads this way:

"If you cannot enjoy your breakfast, why not try some of our invalid eggs from the farm?"

SOME SIMPLE RULES FOR GOOD WINDOW DRESSING

The Window is the Store Headlight.

The grocer who has a pronounced natural talent for window dressing will find the ways and means to make a pretty presentable window display, but the ordinary grocer, if he is to succeed in this branch of his work, must go out of his way to dig up information. First, however, he must be convinced that it is worth while. That the majority of grocers set a mere passing value upon their windows as an aid to retailing, the windows themselves proclaim. Just here, however, it is assumed that the importance of window dressing in a grocery store is admitted.

N. C. R. Window Display Suggestions is the name of a brochure recently issued by the National Cash Register Co. The last page contains seven suggestions for effective displays, with this fore-

Tea Room, Hudson's Bay Co's Store, Calgary.

This room was recently opened, by the company as a tea and rest room for the convenience of their customers, and has since been very well patronized.

It is situated on the second floor in front of the china section, and the windows afford a fine view of the principal business street. It is nicely furnished, and each table can be separated from the others by a dainty Japanese screen. In one corner of the room is a writing table and writing materials. There is also a telephone in connection.

Tetley's tea and Christie's biscuits are served free in this room every afternoon from three to six. The tea is served in dainty china cups, and the large number that have enjoyed a cup of tea, and the many complimentary remarks that have been heard in regards to the dainty manner in which it has been served, have demonstrated that the company's efforts in this direction have been appreciated.

word : "In order to make your window display accomplish the results you expect of it, it will pay you to consider carefully the following suggestions :"

"PLAN IT. It is impossible to make a good window display unless you give careful thought and attention to the matter and plan the entire display before you start to arrange it. You would not think of placing an "ad." in a paper without giving it careful thought You should not think of allowing your store front to show less care in preparation."

The present writer had cause not long ago to observe carefully the window dressing of a grocery clerk, who had had no special training, but was greatly interested in this part of his work. His interest bespoke considerable natural ability and it was his practice to dress his windows without any planning beforehand. He was able to draw some prizes, too. This is not an argument against planning windows on the start, for the writer suggested to the clerk that he should plan his work ahead, and he adopted the hint with good results; but it suggests that there are not many rules about window dressing that can be laid down absolutely.

"STUDY EFFECT. You can teach yourself how to make profitable displays in your store windows and store fronts by taking careful note of the effect each change makes and the amount of interest each arouses. Watch your crowd and see what it likes."

But supposing your changes make no effect, how are you going to learn to make profitable displays ? It cannot but be an excellent plan to observe closely the effect of your window dressing and if you are making a real effort to dress your windows, there will be some effect evident ; but window dressing cannot be studied to the best advantage exclusively at home. The grocer should go after that kind of education. The most convenient teachers are trade papers and other men's windows, but there are specialists in this line and it is worth any ambitious grocer's while to get into touch with a source of exact and specific information. This applies especially to young men and clerks.

"CHANGE DISPLAY OFTEN. Variety in window display is necessary, if your window is to continue to attract attention. The same display used too long ceases to interest."

This is one rule to which there is no exception. Every grocery window should be trimmed once a week at least. It may be you want to continue to display the same line of goods. For instance, Michie & Co., Toronto, have been displaying maple syrup and sugar for two or three weeks, but one week is the longest any trim is allowed to remain.

"USE SOMETHING UNUSUAL. It is the unusual and extraordinary that always draws attention. If you can succeed in working up something that is out of the ordinary line you will succeed in attracting the persons whom you wish to interest in your goods,"

That does not necessarily follow. Something sufficiently out of the ordinary would attract every man, woman and child on the street, and perhaps add little to your trade. Far be it from the writer to disparage uniqueness in display ; but it is a sound principle in grocery window display that it must make its appeal as a foodstuff ; that is, when it is groceries, and not sundries, that are being displayed. The effectiveness of a grocery window will depend upon its appeal to the observers as a foodstuff, and not as a novelty. There are general principles underlying the art of display as a whole, but when it comes to getting results, every class of goods becomes a specialty from the window dressing point of view, and the purposes of the goods must be considered. The grocery window dresser should never get away from the fact that he is displaying foodstuffs, except when he isn't displaying foodstuffs.

"MAKE IT SIMPLE. Something plain, not complicated, is sure to be more effective than a great mass of stuff without a definite plan. It requires study to attain simplicity, and you can afford to spend a lot of time trying to make your display as simple as possible."

Simplicity is easily enough obtained, but simplicity with effectiveness is the mark of distinction worth going after. The rule of simplicity in window dressing is not without its exceptions. "A great mass of stuff" may be very effective and artistic, but "without a definite plan," never. In answer to the criticism by the writer that there was too much stuff in a window, the dresser replied that the window was so deep he had to build up a background. On general principles, though, simplicity is a fine aim to work to.

"SHOW YOUR PERSONALITY. Your window display can be made to reflect your own personality even more strongly than an advertisement in a paper or any other kind of advertising. Window displays show the sincerity or insincerity, the honesty or dishonesty of the goods for sale."

This paragraph or a similar one is good reading for a window dresser every little while.

"KEEP IT CLEAN. One of the most important points in effective window display is cleanliness. Nothing about a store repels trade more than a carelessly arranged or soiled window display. You cannot afford to have anything except clean goods and clean windows in the front of your store."

This is the golden rule of window dressing. It is the one rule to which there cannot be, upon any pretext, any sort of exception. It applies not only to the window, but to the store, the store-room, and the clerks. Grocers sometimes seem to forget they are handling foodstuffs. Would it not be a good line for a grocer to have printed some mottoes :

"YOU ARE HANDLING THINGS TO EAT."

and tack them up on the inside of the counter and other places where he himself and the clerks would often see them and the public would not ?

THE JAP'S COLLECTION LETTER.

Shugio, an ambitious young Japanese salesman employed by an importer of Oriental goods in New York, has asked so often for a chance to do clerical work in the office that last week he was told he might write letters to three persons on the firm's books to ask them if they would make some payment on their accounts.

"Go easy with them," cautioned the importer. "They're all good customers, but just a bit slow."

Two days later the importer was surprised to receive checks in full for all three accounts. One check from a well-known woman was accompanied by a sharp note, and the head of the firm hastened to find the copy of Shugio's dunning letter. It read :

"Dear Mrs. ——— : If you do not do us the extreme honor of paying all the dollars and all the cents of this accounting, which so long you have owed to our business of importing, we shall, to our regret, begin to do something that will cause you the utmost astonishment."—New York Sun.

THE REAL THING.

Uncle Josh, fresh from Upcreek, had been inspecting the family icebox.

"Henry," he said, "you told me you was gettin' artificial ice. The feller that sells it to you is foolin' you. I've looked at it, and teched it, and if it ain't real ice, by gum, I never saw any."

MAPLE PRODUCTS A NATIONAL INDUSTRY

Their Preparation, Scientific and Otherwise, with a Sermon on Purity.

Of the world's output of maple syrup and sugar, Canada supplies over three-sevenths, and but for the fact that the resources at her command are in excess of her present possibilities of realizing on them, she would be able to increase the production of that commodity five or six times.

The supply of maple sugar and syrup is confined strictly to North America, and the greater part to more or less limited areas in New England, the middle and central-western States, and Canada. In the latter country the manufacture of maple sugar and syrup has assumed a relatively high importance compared with the production in the United States, the average annual output approximating 17,804,825 pounds. The money value of that in 1901 was placed at $1,780,482. Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia contribute the bulk of this total, in the following proportions:—Quebec, 13,564,819 pounds; Ontario, 3,912,640; New Brunswick, 207,450; Nova Scotia, 112,496, and other provinces, 7,520. The average value works out at nearly 10 cents a pound.

Primitive and Destructive.

The first methods employed in the manufacture of maple sugar and syrup were somewhat primitive compared to the modern and upto-date methods which have since been introduced, and the article was dark in color and unattractive. Moreover, tapping the trees with an axe, which was the usual method adopted at that time for obtaining the sap, proved somewhat detrimental to the preservation of the forests, and the whole modus operandi, as a fact, was wasteful in the extreme.

The sap was caught in troughs, hewn out of the solid log, thence carried in pails to the boiling-place, and reduced to syrup in potash kettles, which were any specimens still in existence, would be a curiosity at the present more enlightened time. Compared with the cleanly, sysmatic and time-saving methods which the modern manufactures now employed, these rough-and-ready ways of our ancestors seem extraordinarily primitive and unprofitable. But it is not altogether outside the bounds of possibility that a few years hence our children will be laughing at what we now consider modern, even as we ridicule the efforts of our fathers.

The cost of equipping a sugar bush with a modern outfit is to-day a matter of considerable trouble and expense. A sugar-house must be built and supplied with sap-holders, evaporators, skimmers, syrup cans and other appliances, while the necessary materials for gathering the sap comprise buckets, spouts, pails and gathering tank, to say nothing of a pair of horses or yoke of oxen harnessed to a wooden-shod sled, to draw the gatherink tank around when collecting the sap.

The trees are tapped in February or March, the sap collected in buckets attached to the tree through a spout inserted just within the sap wood and then poured into the gathering tank through a double strainer fastened to the cover. The sap is strained three or four times during the course of handling to eliminate all impurities and foreign matter.. The boiling in the sugar-house is done as soon as sufficient sap has been gathered to keep the evaporator in operation. The sap as it comes from the tree contains but a small percentage of sugar. As the process of boiling goes on and the water evaporates, that percentage gradually increases, first, to the point where the sap becomes standard syrup; second, to the point where it reduces the sap to the consistency required for soft or tub sugar, and finally to the point where it reaches the consistency of hard or cake sugar.

The exact points at which the sap becomes syrup, tub sugar or hard sugar are dtermined by an instrument called the saccharometa, and by the thermometer. The former is used exclusively for syrup. The latter for syrup, tub sugar and hard sugar.

Canning Maple Syrup.

Opinions as to whether maple syrup should be canned hot or cold to obtain the best results and the most economical methods to adopt in each case, differ widely among the best sugar makers in Canada. The chief advantage of canning the syrup cold lies in the fact that a greater net weight is obtained by doing so. A gallon can filled with hot syrup, boiled at a temperature of 219 degrees, will not weigh over 12 1-2 pounds, whereas the same can filled with cold syrup will weigh 13 pounds 2 ounces net. If the syrup is canned hot at high temperature, it will shrink as it cools and allow a vacuum to form between the top of the syrup and the top of the can. This is to be avoided, for two reasons:—First, the quality of the syrup is liable to be impaired through fermentation, a crystallization setting in, and the purchaser will feel that he has been defrauded in not getting a full gallon of syrup.

A taint of rosin or acid is occasionally noticed in maple syrup, but this does not necessarily cast any reflection upon its purity It arises from the insufficient cleansing of the syrup cans before they are filled. They should be thoroughly rinsed with boiling water to get rid of all unpleasant flavors of the materials used in soldering.

A combination of malic acid and lime, called nitre, or "sugar sand," is found in all maple sap. The quantity varies, but generally increases as the season advances. The nitre accumulates at the bottom of the settling can, but is not drawn off with the clear syrup, or allowed to go into any syrup cans intended for market by the manufacturer who wishes to make a reputation for the purity of his products.

Purity—First, Last and All the Time.

The demand, being many times in excess of the natural production, has led to the "manufacture" of an article of commerce in which the pure maple product pays a very inconsequental part. Some authorities assert that sugar refiners make much more sugar and syrup, labelling it "maple," than the entire natural production; that the refuse sugar of the real maple enters into the artificial combination of glucose, cane or beet sugar, and chemicals—to a very large degree creating a ready market for black American and Canadian sugars, and the "late runs" of the maple sugar-producing sections of both countries.

The very best maple sugar syrup must be produced to satisfy the consumer. It must be of a delicate, clean maple flavor, perfect in texture and of a high grade. The increased demand during the last few years for such an article gives every assurance that the public is ready to pay a higher price to obtain it, provided they can do so under a guarantee of its absolute purity.

There is no doubt as to the superiority of the pure maple goods over mixtures of maple syrup and sugar with other sugars and ingredients, but the latter are sometimes so attractively put up, and the difference apparently so slight, both in the labelling and in the contents, that the ordinary consumer who purchases it, unless quite accustomed to the nice delicate maple flavor of the pure maple goods, cannot detect the presence of any "artificial flavor" The sale of these adulterated goods, if their character is not clearly indicated on the cans or packages, hinders the trade in pure goods, discourages the producer of the latter, and at the same time defrauds the consumer by tempting him to purchase a misrepresented article For the protection of the merchant and jobber against handling maple goods fraudulently marked, the Adulteration of Foods Act provides a "Form of Warranty," to be signed and forwarded with each shipment of syrup or sugar by the producer or manufacturer who actually cans and labels the goods, so that in case an officer of the Inland Revenue Department purchases a can of syrup or cake of sugar for analysis, and finds the same to be adulterated, the merchant or jobber can hand to this officer the "Form of Warranty" signed by the manufacturer, and he, the merchant, is immediately released from all responsibility In case the merchant does not hold this "Form of Warranty," he is liable to the fine imposed should his goods be found to be adulterated.

Output Can Be Doubled.

In an address delivered before the Pomological Society of the Fruit-growers Association of Quebec in December, 1906, Mr. Goddard, a prominent member, said:

"In the year 1900 there were manufactured 17,000,000 pounds of syrup and sugar with not more than 10 per cent. of the maples worked. To-day I estimate there is about 15 per cent. tapped with a much larger output and if stringent laws are enacted and rigidly enforced to prevent the adulteration of the same, I predict that in ten years, the output will be nearly doubled. It seems a pity that more so called maple syrup and sugar is manufactured in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, than is made by all the farmers of Canada combined, but what steps are to be taken to prevent this state of affairs? It is only within the last two years that the presence of granulated sugar could be detected, when mixed with maple, and the credit of this discovery is due to our neighbors to the south of us who are our leaders in this industry and who have placed very strict laws on their statute books regarding the adulteration of maple sugar and syrup

Should we not form an association of the sugar makers of Canada and ask our government to pass a law as strict as that in force in Ohio, on this industry, thereby securing it for the farmers of Canada and giving to the lovers of maple goods a guarantee, that whenever the word maple is found on a package of sweets, it is genuine."

THE PECAN NUT.

Increasing in Favor—It Grows Where Cotton Will—Related to the Walnut.

It is astonishing how few people there are who know what a pecan nut is, and still more surprising to realize that there are very few who recognize differences in quality or varieties, and who really know that there is nearly as much difference in the flavor of pecans as there is in the flavor of different varieties of apples. The wild seedlings may be thick shelled, bitter and astringent, whereas the cultivated forms are thin shelled, rich and delicate in flavor and texture. For many years the markets of the east have received and have consumed considerable quantities of the seedling nuts of Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas and other regions where the pecan is indigenous. These nuts range from good to very indifferent and poor. They all present the same polished brown exterior in the grocer's window, but vary greatly in the quality of their meaty contents.

The United States is a good deal of a nut eating country. Something over $5,000,000 worth of nuts are imported annually On the other hand they only export about $30,000 worth. This export quantity is largely made up of English walnuts grown on the Pacific coast, and perhaps a few pecans from the south. It is interesting to note that as the pecan has become known in the east its consumption has increased, and with increasing consumption have come also higher prices. Less than ten years ago ordinary nuts could be bought for five or six cents a pound. These nuts, which were then used by nurserymen for growing seedling stock now bring from eight to twelve cents a pound. There is a still greater advance in the price of the really edible varieties. Where formerly they were sold for ten cents, they now bring twenty and thirty cents, while the propagated varieties sell up to fifty and sixty cents, when a private and personal trade is established. There is no question at all that the pecan is one af the coming nuts, and is bound to be a leader among fruits of the future.

As a fruit it possesses the important quality of being non-perishable within reasonable limits. Cold storage is not a factor, and transportation facilities are of relatively small importance.

This tree, which belongs to the walnut family, and is known technically by the name of Caryaolivaeformis, or, more lately, Nicoria pecan, has quite a wide distribution in the United States. Naturally, it is distributed more abundantly on the rich, alluvial bottoms of streams than on the higher lands. The pecan runs as far north as Southern Iowa, and as far west as the Colorado River, in Texas, extending southerly to Central Georgia. Roughly speaking, we may say that it occupies practically the same area as the cotton plant, although it can be grown farther north.

THE GROCER AND HIS HOUR OF DISCONTENT

An eulogy pronounced by C. W. Coumbe of the Tea and Coffee Trade Journal.

Perhaps the greatest source of discontent with the retail grocer is the monotony and humdrum that in some stores accompanies the daily routine. But discontent once entering the retailer's heart is a cancerous enemy whose growth is not only steady, but usually proves fatal.

"Love for one's business" is the maxim preached as the mainspring of success by the successful. Failing in ambition, the merchant must shake off the lassitude that accompanies the first symptoms of despondency. The cure for the malady is at hand and lies not only within the retailer's reach, but is really within the realm of his solemn duties.

Let him open his ears to the comments on successful rivals. Let him put on his hat and coat and visit the lively stores of those who are achieving that success he is longingly but impotently dreaming of. Nothing is so stimulating, so contagious, as success. A visit to the busy stores of successful grocers will revive the sinking soul of any despondent member of the trade with its tonic.

He will first note the contrast, he will next compare methods, he will then absorb new ideas. And he will leave his competitor's threshold with resolves and plans that will twist his despondent vision into channels so full of enterprise and hope that his store will soon blossom forth the brightest and liveliest of his section.

Stimulus, an incentive, also is required to pin his life's work to his trade. "Only a grocer" entering the mind, soon brings "but a waste of time" to lag his steps. An ideal is needful to bring a man's activities up to top-notch. The Philistine says : "We can't eat a meal without interviewing our grocer. You can omit the preacher, waive the lawyer, but you'll have to send for the doctor, unless you deal with the right grocer."

What greater mission on earth than that of the honest grocer ? The minister from his pulpit propounds, the writer sets forth in printed words, but the self-respecting grocer practises those humanitarian rules that raise the health and vigor of his neighbors, so that their lives are pure and their work enjoyed. Truly, a position so honorable would be hard to find in the professional ranks. Deeds, not words, are his part in life—the dealing out of that which produces and sustains human health. Physicians and teachers are praters, the druggist a useless member in our community when the grocer—the broad-minded, ambitious grocer—knows, carries out and respects the maxims that are inherent in the life of the purveyor of our daily food and drink.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR STORE INTERIORS

More and more every year the grocers throughout Canada are giving attention to the improvement of the appearance and arrangement of their store interiors. This development comes naturally with the growth and increasing wealth of the country. There are now firms making a specialty of this work. One of these, the Walker Bin Co., was asked for an illustration of what they would submit as a suggested model for an average grocery. They courteously responded, and the accompanying cut is the result. The object aimed at is the maximum of utility and convenience in a minimum of space, without the appearance of overcrowding.

The wall cases throughout are 54 inches high, and are surmounted by shelving 42 inches high, making the height of case over all, 8 feet, being a convenient height to be reached without the aid of a ladder. The counters are of standard height, 37 inches, with top 28 inches wide.

The main wall case immediately behind the counters is fitted with barrel capacity bins for cereals, etc., tea and coffee bins, with capacity of half a chest of tea, and in the centre a nest of twenty spice bins, with bevel plate mirror fronts. Following the main wall case and running back to the refrigerator is a section of open wall case and shelving to correspond with the main wall case. On the opposite side of the store is a section of wall case with three rows of medium-sized full glass display bins for all lines of smaller bulk goods and for fancy biscuits. Following this is a section of wall case and shelving enclosed with sliding panel doors in the base and sliding glass doors above. The main counters are equipped with two rows of full glass display bins in front and in the rear shelf space for goods that sell on the "brand" and do not require to be displayed. The small cross counter toward the rear of the store in front of the refrigerator is for the handling of butter, cooked meats, etc.

It will be noted that while the shelving is low in order to secure convenience in the handling of stock, ample provision is made for shelf goods in the open wall case and shelving, and in the rear of the counters, in addition to the regular shelving above the wall cases.

The specifications of sections shown in the cut may be modified in the height and bin equipment of wall cases, of which there are three standard heights, viz., 37, 42 and 54 inches, with shelving of required height above; and bins of different sizes may be grouped to provide the greatest convenience for the particular business to be served. With the exception of spice bins, which have bevel mirror fronts, all of the bins are fitted with glass display fronts, thus providing for clean and attractive display.

Another quite different proposition are the illustrations over the page, showing the interior of R. H. Stewart's store, 599 Sherbourne street, Toronto. This is undoubtedly one of the handsomest grocery fixtures in Canada, and while not submitted as appropriate for the average grocery, it shows what the grocer in Canada is doing. These fittings were installed by Jones Bros., Toronto.

WHY MERCHANTS FAIL

Many things to do and Some to Avoid in the Retail Grocery Business.

By Albert Armstrong in "Modern Methods"

Under the caption, "Why Merchants Fail," George Brett recently gave in the Chicago Tribune a list of reasons why merchants fail. The reasons were obtained from one of the largest wholesale dealers in Chicago. They are:

Insufficient knowledge of the real value of merchandise.

No inborn trading instinct.

Extravagance, i. e., no natural gift of economy.

Reckless price cutting.

Poor advertising.

Lack of neatness, order, and attractive display.

Inattentive, incompetent help.

Failure to include all fixed charges in figuring the costs, such as freight, dray expenses, etc.

To the reasons mentioned above must be added the failure of many retailers to turn over their stock quickly.

Nearly all of the big wholesalers in Chicago admitted that modern conditions demand a quicker turnover of stock. One sales manager stated his views as follows:

"It stands to common sense that if a woman goes into a country store and sees some goods that have just arrived neat, fresh, fashionable, and tempting, she will be unable to resist buying them if she has the necessary money to make a purchase. It pays a storekeeper to buy frequently new goods in small quantities—the oftener the better.

New Goods Tempt Customers.

"The clerks get tired of looking at shop-worn goods, which have been in the establishment many months, not to mention the feelings of the customer. It doesn't pay to buy a stock of goods which cannot be sold readily. It's far better to make a small profit three times in six months than one large profit in that time. But of course if a man ties up all his money in a big purchase of goods which goes slowly at a large profit he is not in a position to do this."

The small retailer can take a leaf out of the ad of the big State St. stores to advantage. Everlastingly the big stores tempt the appetite of the people with goods of the latest style. When goods get a little shop-worn or a trifle out of date there is nothing surer than that the knife is unsparingly used to cut prices to a point which will force the undesirable stock out of the store. People who doubt the genuineness of the big sales don't realize the fact that there are reasons for making bargain prices—not fictitious trumpery reasons, but honest, logical reasons.

Fixing the Margin of Profit.

Wholesalers are of opinion that the majority of small storekeepers do not know how to "merchandise." By "merchandising," of course, is meant the fixing of prices at a level which will cover all expenses and charges and leave a fair margin of profit for the merchant.

The sales manager for a big jobbing house stated that forty out of a hundred retailers forget to figure in the selling price of an article a percentage which will cover the loss they made when they sell the portion of the goods which becomes out of date or shop-worn.

HOME RUNS ON ADVERTISING.

Hit hard.

Love taps for babies.

Don't muse—enthuse.

Tell the truth—and tell it hard.

Don't be mysterious—you're not ashamed of your goods.

Plan your campaign—choose your mediums—grit your teeth, and get into the game.

The advertising of most retailers, it is admitted, is at least 100 per cent. better than it was a few years ago. The main fault with the country advertiser is that his publicity is apt to be unsystematic.

One of the best known wholesale clothing firms in the country, who maintain a special advertising service for the retailer, expressed their views as follows:

Advertising Must Be Systematic.

"From the standpoint of publicity the reason why so many retail clothiers do not do more business is because they have no prearranged plans for putting out their advertising. It is too often a hand too mouth game.

"It stands to common sense, that if a retailer outlines a campaign his efforts will be much more likely to bear fruit, because they have been matured by careful study and close thought as to the best course of action. It is foolish to rush into print on a decision based on the impulse of a moment.

"When business is good in season, a great many retailers figure they do not need to advertise. When trade is dull they say, 'Nobody will buy, anyway, so what's the use of advertising?' A great many of them have one or two big, flaring announcements during the season and then forget all about publicity.

"Want of steady, judicious advertising often causes retailers to have a much larger stock of goods on hands than is necessary. Frequently they make a large loss through selling 'late season' stock at a forced sale."

From one-half to 5 per cent. is the usual percentage of money expended by country retail stores for publicity. Generally, however, it ranges from 2 to 3 per cent. with the majority.

Methods of State Street Store.

The amount of science and system infused into the publicity of a large State St. store in Chicago may be gauged from the following statement made by the head of their advertising department:

"We aim to reduce advertising to an exact science. Every morning I have laid on my desk a report of the sales of each department for the preceding day. This indicates just what results have accrued from the advertising put out. The report in question also gives the sales for three years back of corresponding days for the same month.

"I know exactly what amount of money it costs to sell certain lines. A man is employed to do nothing else but figure up the space it costs to advertise distinctive lines. And when goods are costing more than a certain percentage to sell there's a row about it. It's evident there's something wrong. We never reckon to spend more than 4 per cent. to sell any staple goods through publicity.

"I am advised when goods have been purchased, when they arrive, and their cost. I get exact reports on the amount spent in salaries, in 'dead help,' rent, etc. I know the stocks of different goods on hand, whether or not they are getting out of date; also reports on what c.o.d.s are returned are furnished me. All this is done that I may work with the clearest light possible."

Ad is Motive Power to Business.

It will be seen from the foregoing that advertising is reckoned as a kind of motive power essential to drive the machine of business, but an unnecessary amount of steam is not turned on. No large up-to-date Chicago retailer dreams of doing without advertising, but uses it in a systematic way. He harnesses it to practical problems. He does not expect it to do any "Aladdin-like" feats, which is not true of many small retailers.

In the final analysis as to why most retailers fail, the universal opinion of the big wholesalers of Chicago is that the retailer does not know how to buy.

This opinion was confirmed by a man who had had twenty years of experience in studying the causes of failure among retailers. Request was made that the name of his firm be withheld. If it were given it would be recognized as a concern known in the uttermost parts of the earth as an authority on firm's ratings and causes of failures. The statement made was:

"In twenty years of experience with my firm I have had occasion to study the different routes of failure which the unfortunate retailer often travels. Frequently hard pressed by competition in his own district his perplexities are not lessened by the seductive wiles practiced by the astute mail order merchant to get business.

Lack Skill in Buying.

"I know there are many books on selling. I have wondered why there are not more on buying. In my experience I have noticed that among retailers more failures have been caused through want of skill in buying than through any other reason.

"Generally the dealer overstocks himself. Again, he frequently pays good prices for goods of inferior quality. This is due to the lack of moral courage on the part of the retailer to withstand the onslaught of the traveling man and be able to say "No" more often.

"When a retailer engages in conversation with the salesman he wants to have all his wits about him. The retailer should remember that often his own interests do not correspond with those of the salesman, and he should be chary about being rushed into placing an order without due consideration as to how long it will take him to dispose of the goods, whether they are well worth the money, and what profit he will get out of the transaction.

Grocers Buy Large Bills.

"In the grocery line especially I have known for a fact that many failures have been due to the retailer buying a lot of canned goods which were slow sellers—though bought at a low figure. At a forced sale these goods realized next to nothing.

"The retailer should fight the mail order man by stealing his thunder and also offer leaders. He should use clever advertising, even if it does cost a little to buy the use of good advertising brains. There is one vital truth the storekeeper always should remember—a store is made attractive to the general public by the number of bargains to be found in it. Especially is this true of the feminine element. No up-to-date merchant expects to make a good profit on everything he sells. Occasionally selling below cost is the price he pays for getting new trade and making firm friends."

The following point will bear emphasis:

"You can't sell goods unless you get people into your store. How is the retailer going to get a crowd into his store unless he makes offers which will be interesting?"

NEW MERCANTILE AGENCY.

A new mercantile and collecting agency has commenced business in Montreal under the name of the Beardwood Agency, with headquarters at 314 New York Life Building. The company is under the management of Kenneth J. Beardwood, a gentleman of some years' experience in the collection department of one of the leargest mercantile agencies in the world. The firm have secured representation throughout the Dominion and United States of reputable attorneys who make a specialty of collections, and their system is designed to ensure satisfaction, whilst the rates are most reasonable, consistent with good service. They invite enquiries from merchants who are anxious to have their troublesome accounts attended to in a prompt and efficient manner.

WESTERN COFFEE KING'S VISIT

James Watson, of the Blue Ribbon, Ltd., Winnipeg, was in Toronto last week looking up old friends and incidentally talking coffee. What Jim Watson doesn't know about coffee isn't worth worrying about. A lifetime spent in the coffee business with his father in Toronto and as a prominent coffee and spice man, known from Newfoundland to Victoria, B.C., his experience has been of great value to the Blue Ribbon, Ltd. Since leaving for the west seven years ago he has devoted his time to the coffee and spice end of his company and, from all reports, with good success. During his Toronto visit Mr. Watson paid a visit to The Grocer offices.

St. Clair Balfour, of Balfour, Smye & Co., Ltd., Hamilton, writing from Brandon a few days ago, reports good trade, despite the fact that two-thirds of the wheat is still in farmers' hands. April 29th he went through a belated snowstorm.

HALF CENTURY IN GROCERIES.

W. C. Anderson's, the oldest retail grocery house in the trade in Halifax, is now settled in the new premises, No. 37 George Street, and the store is thoroughly up-to-date in every respect. Anderson has been a household name in Halifax for a half a century and stands for what is good in the grocery line.

The new premises are commodious, the fittings are bright and serviceable, and the arrangements include all the latest in their lines. The bulk goods are all kept in patent pivot drawers, practically air-tight, and keeping the goods free from dust, flies, etc. These pivot drawers are all of polished oak as are all the shelving and fittings. There is a cabinet of polished oak with brass fittings and plate glass fronts for spices, and new counters, also of oak, and in the front of the counters are glass fronted bins for biscuits, etc.

In the rear of the store stands a handsome oak refrigerator, with plate glass front, in which eggs, butter, etc., are kept, and the refrigerator is stocked every morning with fresh goods. On the counter is one of the latest and most improved computing scales, which weighs to the fraction of an ounce and computes the cost of the article weighed. The shelves are laden with the finest lines of English, American and Canadian bottled pickles, sauces, dressings, etc. A new and improved coffee mill has been fitted up in the store. No ground coffee is kept in stock, but orders are filled by daily grinding, only the best beans being used.

The firm makes a feature of special blends of tea in lead packets. The fruit and vegetable department is stocked daily and complete lines of fresh goods are always obtainable. With an entirely fresh stock and in their new electric lighted, steam heated premises, this old reliable firm is prepared to do business on up-to-date principles.

SUCCESSFUL ADVERTISING.

The manufacturer of Wilson's Fly Pads has secured such splendid results from his advertisements during the last three years that he intends increasing his expenditure over 70 per cent. this season, and will use about six hundred and eighty Canadian newspapers.

STORES WITHOUT COUNTERS

Two Grocers, One Canadian One American Who Have Tried the Experiment With Success — What They Say.

It is well within the memory of man that science has introduced the horseless carriage, the wireless telegraph, odorless cheese and tasteless food. None of these were considered possible until someone invented them, but having now become part and parcel of our daily life they are not looked upon as in any way remarkable. We are gradually becoming educated to the fact that it is not good form to stare at innovations any more than it is good manners to stare at people, and perhaps this is in a great measure accountable for the apparently languid interest exhibited by the grocery world over the introduction of counterless stores.

COUNTERLESS STORES—Establishment of A. A. Thornton, Sherbrooke.

So far as we know to the contrary, the idea of abolishing counters is to the credit of A. A. Thornton, of Sherbrooke, Que., who about three years ago found that his growing business would shortly oblige him to employ more clerks. Mr. Thornton, being of an economical turn of mind, cast about for some way out of the difficulty by which he might cater satisfactorily to his increased clientele without incurring any extra expense.

We give the story of how he accomplished this in his own words:

He says: "About three years ago I found that the work in the store was getting the upper hand of the help that I had, and I did not feel like taking on more. One day while showing a lady customer some biscuits from the boxes which were piled on the end of the counter, the idea came to me that I might devise a scheme whereby the biscuits would sell themselves. That is to say, I drew a plan whereby the counters would be done away with and that I would be in a better position to show my goods, and make the cases and drawers the salesmen.

"I had a number of closed drawers made with a glass front in each. Behind this glass I had a piece of board inserted so the different biscuits contained in the drawers would be shown up against the glass. In this way my customers can select for themselves without having to be waited on, and without the bother and loss of time under the old system of pulling down the pile of biscuit boxes, and probably only strike the kind that was wanted at the bottom of the pile. Above this row of biscuit drawers I had shelves put up for canned goods, and all the lines that are carried can be seen at a glance. The customers can see the name and style of the goods at close range. This does away with the handling of the cans and littering the counter with tins when customers call for canned goods and are not sure just what brand they want. On the other side of the store I have a row of drawers similar to the buscuit ones, but they are used for sugar, etc. Above these drawers, as on the other side, are shown all the lighter cased goods. The shelves are so arranged with these goods that when one article is withdrawn another takes its place from behind. The doing away with the counters, therefore, not only gives me much more room, but twice as much work can be accomplished, in that a clerk can go round the store with an order book in his hand and take down whatever the customer wants without handling the goods. By this system a fairly good clerk can do the work of two.

"Another great feature about this system is that there is no accumulation of papers or other rubbish that gathers in the course of the work in a store, for there is no counter to throw them under. The store is always tidy. My experience is that the scheme of having the goods so exposed that all can look at them at close quarters makes the biscuit drawers and shelves take the part of salesmen, and in fact the whole store is a silent salesman."

Couldn't Show Him Anything Better.

G. W. Daniel, of Vandalia, Missouri, is another progressive grocer whose views on the subject of store arrangement coincide very nearly with those of Mr. Thornton. The Canadian Grocer wrote to Mr. Daniel for some particulars of his methods. Mr. Daniel forwarded a photograph of his store interior and wrote:

"The stairstep shelving is the only kind, in my estimation, for a first-class grocery. Everything is in sight; handy and easily kept clean; one man can do the work of two in the old way; no counters to run around; surplus stock is kept on the canopy top and can be taken down from the floor without the use of stairs or ladder, although I have a little stairway leading up to the canopy top from the rear end.

"While this is only a small town of 1,800 people, she boasts of having the best grocery store in the state, and we have challenged any other state to beat it. We also claim that Vandalia is one of the best business towns in the state. Should any of your people want to stock up with fixtures of this kind, by writing G. W. McNaught & Sons, Glidden, Iowa, they will be able to get them at reasonable prices."

The photographs of these two interiors show very plainly the points emphasized in the letters. The extra room, the increased cleanliness and the economical handling of stock cannot fail to appeal to the progressive retailer. Considerable credit is due Mr. Thornton and Mr. Daniel for having had the courage to strike out a new line for themselves, and we should be glad to publish the experiences of any grocers who have already adopted, or may be induced to adopt, the methods or arrangement, or rather elimination, outlined above.

TEA AND TEA TASTING.

The tea of India differs somewhat in color from Ceylon, it being a deep black and the latter a dark brown. India teas are stronger than Ceylon and other congous—due, it is said, to soil fertilization and the fact that the juice that is expressed from them in the fermentation process is put back. They have a rich flavor and are highly valued here for blending purposes. The best are the Darjeelings and Assams, both mountain teas. Opinions differ as to which is the better of the two, though the first brings the higher price.

The Ceylon is grown on unfertilized soil, the volcanic origin of which is held to account for its peculiar lemony flavor. Its heavy bodied liquor is thick, rich looking and dark, and has a fragrant boquet. This tea cannot always be judged by the appearance of the leaves, for a flowery—"tippy" in the technique of the trade—tea may be inferior to one in which there are little or no tips, say the experts.

It may interest the reader to know how the said experts test teas. Imagine a table, with a round top, which rotates. For a space of three or four inches from its extreme periphery this top is depressed a fraction from its general plane, and on this outer margin the thin white cups are ranged, each backed by the little can containing the sample of tea to be tested. In the centre of the table stands a tiny apothecary's scale, in one scoop of which reposes a silver "five-cent piece" or an equivalent weight. Over a gas stove near by, is a tea kettle singing its old fireside song. But for the businesslike stools around the table, and the more businesslike men seated on them, gravely alternating the hasty conveying of spoonfuls of the steaming, aromatic beverage to their mouths, with even hastier ejections of them, into the huge brazen receptacles provided for the purpose, after a moment of apparent meditation, one might easily mistake the average tea-room for one of the cosy "tea parlors." Leaning over the cup until his face is almost buried in the hot, spicy vapor arising from it, the "taster" first lifts the infused leaves on his spoon, and, after allowing the liquor to run off, submits them to the test of his trained olfactory nerves; then he sips (?) the liquor—as hereinbefore described.

In London, the largest tea market in the world, the preparation for and manner of testing are a trifle more elaborate, though, in essentials, the same. The tea is brewed in a small, covered cup, made especially for the purpose, and, after being allowed to draw for the required length of time, is strained off into another cup, the leaves being poured into the cover of the first, which is then placed on the table beside that containing the infusion. This would seem to result in a more reliable test, since overdrawing is avoided, and all the teas under examination would be viewed for the same interval of time; the American mode is quicker, and the saving of time is always a first consideration with the American business man. While on the subject of tea "tasting" it may not be out of place to remark that the experience of the trade is a refutation of the charge that "'the persistent use of tea wrecks the system"; for both in London and in New York there are many strong, energetic and active, yet elderly, men that have spent the better part of their lives in tasting tea, and who declare that they have experienced no ill-effects therefrom. Indeed, the average "tea taster" can show as steady a hand as ever fingered a trigger.

COFFEE TRADE IN CANADA

Plea for a good article—Consumption in the Dominion Increasing rapidly.

By the Manager of a Large Coffee House

The retail grocer of to-day has come face to face with a problem, and a serious one, of which his predecessor twenty or even ten years ago had happily no knowledge. It consists of the fact that he is forced to handle a great many lines, which used to show good profits, but which now are sold on very narrow margins. This change has been brought about by extensive and persistent advertising on the part of the manufacturers of many staple lines, such as tea, cocoa, baking powder, etc. Their efforts have created a demand for certain specified brands at certain fixed retail prices. These the grocer is obliged to stock whether he thinks them the best of their kind, or even desirable, since his customers ask for them by name and are apt to go elsewhere if he cannot supply them. This "creating the demand" was at first a great boon to the retailers, as it increased his sales and made a market for new lines. From this condition the grocer benefited directly and immediately.

As time goes on, however, new conditions arise, and now all the advantages gained by the above methods are being threatened by a new factor, which is peculiar to this decade, and is becoming more serious every day. The entrance of the department store into the grocery field has been a severe blow. Their bargains in staple and well-known package goods have reduced the selling price of a great many articles from ten to twenty per cent. This they are able to do by using their advantage of large buying for cash, which will in many cases procure for them special terms. Thus they are able to undersell their smaller competitor, who must meet the new price or lose his business.

This is serious enough, but there is added to it another tendency of almost equal import. Many manufacturers, having created a demand for their brands, become independent of the good will of the grocer. The next step is to charge the latter a price that leaves him little or no net profit. He is obliged to stock and sell the lines that have the call from the public and thus he is at the manufacturer's mercy.

The retailer is thus placed in a position that is anything but satisfactory, both from the point of view of profits and prestige. By selling package goods he has sacrificed all claims to individuality, since his competitors are able to procure and sell exactly the same goods as himself. To save himself, he must turn to some lines which do not lend themselves to packages and advertising. These he must study, push at every opportunity, and thus build up a special and personal trade. It is only by this means that he can combat the department store and mail order evil.

Coffee is an article for which the good grocer can build up a permanent and profitable connection. No single line shows such handsome and consistent profits, and no line responds so readily to intelligent and careful handling. From its very nature it does not admit of being packed in small tins under a proprietory label. True, there is a considerable trade done in coffee packed in this manner, but for results it cannot compare with the fresh roasted and newly ground bean, either in strength or flavor.

There is a saying in the United States that a grocer is known by the coffee he keeps. A reputation for good coffee is the most valuable asset a grocery house can possess. It will bring trade from the most remote and unexpected quarters, not only for coffee, but for other goods, as well. Vice versa, a name for poor coffee will drive even natural trade away. How many people—and the best people from the grocer's standpoint—buy their daily needs from the nearest corner grocery, but send down town to some well-known place for their coffee.

Windows of A. A. Thornton's Store, Sherbrooke.

There is a store in Toronto that has for a great many years paid very special attention to coffee. They bought fine lines, paid high prices, and charged accordingly. In addition, they spent a lot of time and brains on getting to know the business. They speedily gained an enviable reputation for quality and to-day they have on their books several thousand names, which they describe as coffee accounts. These are customers who buy coffee and fancy groceries from them, but who use the "family" grocer for their daily needs. In other words, they have the cream of the trade from the point of view of profit. Their less up-to-date competitor is left to do the business that shows all the hard work and very little return.

There is no doubt that the coffee trade in Canada is growing very fast. In 1901 the imports amounted to 3,750,000 lbs.; last year they had risen to 7,500,000 lbs., or nearly double in five years. Of course, this is a very small showing—only about a pound and a quarter per person—but it is really only a beginning. Ten years ago the amount imported did not average more than half a pound per capita. In the U.S., the amount is 12 lbs. per capita, and is constantly increasing. When it is stated that the imports into the U.S. this year will amount to over 900,000,000 lbs. some idea of the possibilities of the business may be gathered.

The great hindrance to a rapid advance of the use of coffee in Canada is the old complaint that over here you cannot get a decent cup of coffee. This is really a case of "giving a dog a bad name" when one applies it to present-day conditions. Twenty years ago the charge had a solid foundation, because coffee was little used and nearly always badly made. But of late years there has been a very decided improvement, and conditions here are now every bit as good as on the other side of the line. Our roasting plants are every bit as well equipped, and the coffee statistics show that the very finest grades are being imported by Canadian houses, and last, but not least, our housekeepers are learning the correct methods of preparing this most stimulating, healthful and grateful beverage. As a result, good coffee is now becoming the rule, instead of the exception and the old reproach on our culinary skill is rapidly losing all foundation.

For the future everything points to a rapid and steady increase in consumption. The American invasion of our west is a potent factor. The increase in the wealth of the average family is another. Many people to whom coffee used to be a treat for Sundays and holidays, can now afford to regard it as a daily necessity. The establishment of direct transportation with the countries where it is grown is putting our dealers in better touch with the primary markets. From now on the coffee trade should make rapid strides and another ten years should see us firmly established as a coffee-drinking country second to none.

GRADING OF COFFEE.

New York Method Generally Adopted—Nine Grades—Equivalents.

U. S. Consul-General George E. Anderson, of Rio de Janeiro, reports that the associations of coffee men in Brazil have formally adopted the New York Coffee Exchange classifications of the berry for all their purposes, the Associacao Commercial of Santos recently adding its final indorsement. Mr. Anderson says :

While there are some very serious objections to the New York method of classification, there seem to be more serious objections to other methods. The Santos coffee men gave considerable time and attention to investigating the matter and finally came to the conclusion, according to the report of the committee having the matter in charge, that while they would like to adopt some other method, they were unable to do so. Then, too, a controlling factor is in that the New York method is actually in vogue in the largest consuming market in the world. The committee of the Santos association took occasion in its report to formally outline the rules of classification thus adopted and prepared a table showing the equivalents of the several grades and their more common defects.

While this table involves more or less technical trade knowledge, of importance and interest only to coffee jobbers, it is possible that it may be of value to coffee retailers in connection with their checking up of coffee purchases. There are nine grades of coffee recognized by these coffee authorities, as follows :

Nearest Equivalents of Imperfect Beans

3 shells (conchas) equal to 1 black bean.

5 green beans equal to 1 black bean.

5 broken beans equal to 1 black bean.

2 scorched beans equal to I black bean.

5 soft or badly threshed beans equal to 1 black bean.

1 large stone equal to 2 to 3 black beans.

1 medium-sized stone equal to 1 black bean.

2 to 3 small stones equal to 1 black bean.

1 large twig equal to 2 to 3 black beans.

1 medium-sized twig equal to 1 black bean.

2 to 3 small twigs equal to 1 black bean.

1 large husk equal to 1 black bean.

2 to 3 small husks equal to 1 black bean.

1 pod (coco) equal to 1 black bean.

2 sailors (Marinheiros) equal to 2 black beans.

With respect to the lower grades of coffee indicated as depending considerably upon appearance for value it may be well to note that the new pure food Act in the United States is likely to have a notable effect in preventing the "painting" of coffee for sale as the green bean. The vast mass of the poor grades will probably continue to go to the roasters as heretofore without treatment, but the cheaper grades of the green bean may be somewhat different in appearance in the future. The New York classification of coffee has been in use in some of the more important European markets almost exclusively and is, of course, well understood and recognized by practically all markets at the present time.

Entries for the coffee crop season up to March 8 for all Brazil amounted to 15,389,486 bags, as compared with 8,777,003 the year before. On this basis the entire crop is estimated at 18,711,094 bags.

Type.	Quantity of imperfect beans per ½-pound tins.	Extra margin allowed.
1	0	No imperfect beans (green, broken, etc.).
2	6	About 6 imperfect beans (green, broken, etc.).
3	13	About 25 imperfect beans (green, broken, etc.).
4	29-30	About 40 imperfect beans (green, broken, etc.).
5	57-58	About 50 imperfect beans (green, broken, etc.).
6	115-118	About 70 imperfect beans (green, broken, etc.).
7	200
8	450	In these low qualities classification is influenced by appearance.

GROWING RICH IN A CORNER GROCERY

But the Man Behind the Counter is a Dynamo and Store a Model —W. H. Fielding, Guelph.

By R. J. E. McCrea

Doing a big business at big expense down town is a very nice and profitable thing, but doing a big business in a corner store at small expense is what makes a man ready to retire in twelve years.

W. H. Fielding, of the Park grocery, Elora road, Guelph, is the proprietor of the dinkiest, busiest little corner in Guelph.

Once Mr. Fielding had a store opposite his own, which he desired to rent. He advertised it as the best business corner in Guelph, apply, etc., to W. H. Fielding. Well, I guess half of Guelph was after it.

Wes. Fielding learned the grocery business and learnt it as few men have the vim and ability to learn it, with the old firm of Fielding & McLaren. The firm changed to Scott & Millman, and for seven years he shoveled sugar, swept floors, hustled and learned all he could.

At that time W. H. Bowers was running a grocery at the corner of Elora road and London road, but it wasn't running very fast, in fact, Mr. Bowers was very glad to let it stop altogether, when Mr. Fielding took it over and set the wheels in motion again. Mr. Fielding jumped right into the game and sent out a hustler for trade. He didn't advertise. He believed in selling his goods for fair prices, and giving specials on Saturday, as chocolates and oranges, and in his case it certainly has seemed to pay. He started right in to handle everything from a toothpick to a spool of cotton, but everything had to have a C. & B. quality.

He at one time ran a branch store, and although doing a good business, found, as others have found, that it is almost impossible to get a good man to run it. He sold out the branch, but transferred over half of his trade back to the old stand.

Shortly after that he got the refitting idea, and gave Jones Bros., of Toronto, a mighty profitable little order, which transformed his place of business into one of the most up-to-date in Guelph.

The fronts of his counters are all fitted up with glass-fronted bins, displaying many things which could not otherwise be shown. His shelves are all dust-proof—glass covered. Women like clean things. He uses the Toledo computing scale. One of the latest fixtures is a large oyster cabinet or safe, with compartments for standard and select oysters kept on, not in, ice. The Bowser oil tanks are installed, and as Mr. Fielding only handles American oil, selling a shade cheaper, he is saved the expense of two tanks.

The building across the street is used for storage, thus enabling big purchases. Just a word to the wise—some of you travelers didn't know what a little gold mine you were missing. I used to see Fred. Syme, smile in hand, trotting up every Monday and returning with an order a yard long—added to his smile. I hope Fred. won't be mad at my giving it away—but then, think, he has the ground floor—and say, doesn't Mr. Zwiker, of McCormack fame, hustle up there.

W. H. Fielding's Store, Guelph—An Interior View.

Mr. Fielding uses a Scotch device in his window for displaying well a big quantity of candied, called the elevated tray system. The window floor is raised six inches by a confectionery sign, and a row of elevated trays show up the entire stock. A swinging tray adds to the effectiveness.

The Grocer wishes Mr. Fielding much prosperity in the coming year, and this little article wouldn't be complete without a reference to Mrs. Fielding. Two years ago Mr. Fielding was carried off to the hospital, dangerously ill. Mrs. Fielding came out, took hold, and with the able assistance of O. Hastings, ran things to the king's taste. Mr. Fielding has to admit that when his wife does help she beats him.

One thing I, as a brother grocer and competitor, would like to add, Mr. Fielding always fights fair. No back-biting. If he agrees on a price, he sticks to it. When I was running a competitive grocery only one block away, the two of us together brought about early closing. From 9 to 6.30 is a leap in the right direction, and am glad it has never changed.

PROGRESSIVENESS IN QUEBEC.

Elzear Turcotte, Des Fosses and Grant Sts., Quebec, is in the front rank of progressive grocers in Canada. He lately purchased several buildings adjoining his property, and having adapted them to his purposes, has the largest grocery and liquor store in Quebec and one of the largest in Canada. The recent enlargements have increased the size of the store three times and the available floor space now amounts to 14,000 square feet.

But enlarging his store is only the beginning of his latest enterprise. The store proper is being entirely refitted with solid oak fixtures, by the Walker Bin Co., shelving, bins, counters, wall cases and silent salesmen. When completed, about the first of June, it will be one of the handsomest grocery interiors on the continent. Before completing his arrangements with the Walker Bin Co., Mr. Turcotte spent a couple of days in New York just looking around.

Mr. Turcotte is one of the most progressive advertisers in the retail grocery trade. Ordinarily he employs 20 clerks, but in busy seasons that number increases to 25 or 30.

SHOULD TRAVELLING SALESMEN KEEP AN EXPENSE ACCOUNT?

By Fred Bradford Ellsworth, in Iron Age.

There are some firms whose knowledge of handling a salesman is so vague and lacking in good, sound business judgment that it is beyond my comprehension how they can possibly be successful at all. The only plausible excuse to offer is that these people have unfortunately never had experience selling goods on the road and do not understand the life of a salesman.

For the benefit of such who are unable to bring within the range of their vision the necessary expenses of a salesman I shall attempt to enumerate them and also make suggestions that will be of benefit.

The first item of expense is railroad fare. The majority of firms allow their salesmen full fare. If the salesman invests in mileage books, and many have half a dozen or more, necessitating an outlay of several hundred dollars of their own money, they reap the benefit of rebates. On the other hand, many firms emphasize the fact that mileage books are to be purchased and used whenever possible from an economical standpoint and all rebates returned to the company. In the course of a year these rebates amount to considerable money.

Where a salesman covers the entire country, or starts from the east and travels through to the Pacific Coast, it is impossible to use mileage books economically. Round trip tickets can be procured, good for several months, for much less money.

Hotel Bills.

Hotels throughout the country differ but slightly in rates, for almost every city of importance has within the last few years built new hotels, and one is about as good as another.

Good, comfortable rooms in any modern up-to-date hotel cost from $2 per day up, and with bath from 50 cents to $1 extra. With few exceptions, hotels are run on the European plan, and meals will average $1 apiece. Breakfast and luncheon may not always cost $1 each, but no dinner at night can be had for that price, and $3 per day for a man with a normal appetite is indeed economical living. Occasionally accommodations can be procured for less money than here cited. At the same time there are some cities where these figures are inadequate.

Treatment of Customers.

The treatment of customers is a question I have often heard discussed by employers and salesmen. The average salesman who is well known in his territory when he starts out in the morning generally fills his pockets with good cigars. Most everybody smokes nowadays and talking business while the fragrant aroma of a choice Havana permeates the atmosphere at times, causes a feeling of good fellowship and often from a business standpoint has a beneficial effect.

The unredeeming part of it is shown more often than not by the new and inexperienced salesman, who gives away cigars indiscriminately, with the impression that it will help to ingratiate him into the good graces of those with whom he comes in contact. Frequently it has a detrimental effect, and does not give a good impression at all.

It is customary for a salesman to invite a buyer to lunch with him occasionally, provided he knows him well enough, or to dine with him at night and spend the evening at the theatre, or in amusement that is congenial to the guest. A salesman should never do this because he anticipates an order, but because when he enjoys the patronage of a house he is as a rule, on friendly terms with the buyer. This is a pleasant and courteous manner of showing his appreciation of their pleasant business relations.

Bus and baggage, laundry, pressing clothes, telegrams, postage, typewriting and car fare are other incidental expenses. They are apparently of minor importance; still they amount to considerable money in a short time and are all necessities to a salesman.

Tipping.

The next item of expense, and an increasing one, is that of tipping. This practice originated in Europe, became the vogue in this country, and then practically an unwritten law. It is now carried to such an extent that it is a disgrace to those who allow it. Railroads, hotels and cafes expect patrons to pay their employes' wages. For a salesman above all others to ignore this practice would result in his being subjected to such annoyance, discomfort, insult and humiliation that he simply could not endure it.

NOTE BOOK HEADINGS.

Compelling a salesman to keep an itemized expense account is a question that has been discussed hundreds of times by employers and salesmen. Its advisability or inadvisibility is, I think, a matter of opinion. There are many firms who do not believe in asking their men to render an itemized account. They are furnished so much money when they start on a trip and the difference between that and what they return, is their expense. Any man who pretends to know anything about business should know pretty nearly what it costs to travel on the road. The majority have had that experience. If they have not and employ salesmen, it would be an economy in the end to hire an experienced manager.

Too Much Red Tape.

I know of a firm recently who lost one of the best salesmen in the country, all on account of an expense book and red tape. The man was a high-priced salesman whose services they had solicited. He agreed to cover a certain territory, and if to his liking, was to sign a three-year contract. When he was ready to start the cashier handed him an expense book, with every conceivable item of expense enumerated, with instructions that at the end of each week upon receipt of his book a check for the next week's expenses would be forthcoming.

Then they handed him a form sheet upon which he was to give the name of each person called on daily, and if he did not sell, why not, and a lot of other unnecessary red tape.

The salesman was nonplussed, and at the same time insulted, and, going to the heads of the house, said: "Gentlemen, you hired me to sell goods. That is my profession, and I have been doing it successfully for ten years. I am not a book-keeper or an accountant, or I should have applied for that position. If you have no confidence in my integrity, why did you seek my services? I shall be pleased ta look after your interests to the best of my ability, communicating such information as is of importance, but as for rendering an itimized expense account and a report such as your cashier insists upon, I shall never do it." The firm was obdurate, and the next day the man signed a contract with another concern at $5,000 a year, with the privilege of extending the contract to five years with an increase in salary.

Favor Keeping Account.

Personally speaking, I am in favor of a salesman keeping an expense account and I think from a business standpoint it is for the best interests of a firm. I do not say this to cast any reflection on the honesty of a salesman. Most of them are honest and reliable. There may be some who are honest perhaps through caution and perhaps because well paid. Occasionally there are salesmen whose eyesight is so poor that they are unable to discriminate between their own money and that of the firm. This class is invariably poorly paid and have to make both ends meet some way or other.

An expense book is a good reference for a firm to have. It shows just what the cost is of covering different territories. It is also handy in making out a route list and shows pretty nearly the time taken to cover it. It also shows the money spent on the trade, which at times, according to conditions, it may be expedient to increase or economize, all depending on the nature of the business.

NEW COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' ASSOCIATION.

A new Commercial Travelers' Association, composed of city travelers only, has been formed in Montreal. The association, as it stands at present, comprises commercial travelers of every business, and has been formed for mutual protection. It is quite independent of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

At the inaugural meeting B. Charbonneau was elected president; Alphonse Moisan, first vice-president; H. Pinet, second vice-president; I. Jacob, secretary; Will G. Wise, assistant secretary, and J. A. Cartier, treasurer. Apart from these gentlemen, the board of directors consists of: A. Dessane, H. H. Hardy, J. L. Filteau, Alex. Michaud, Eugene Hamel, Eugene Chevrier, J. A. Dery and J. E. Hurtubise. The auditors are: E. Falardeau and P. V. Guay.

The membership at the beginning of May had reached 250, and at a general meeting to be held May 14th, it is expected to greatly increase.

The rooms at present are at 149 Berri St.

TRAVELLERS AND THEIR WAYS

Observations of a Clerk.

I am not a boss yet, and I do not do any buying, but from my place behind the counter I am greatly interested in watching the travelers as they come and go. A very successful traveler once said: "Always shake hands with the delivery boy, he may some day own the store." That is true enough, and most of the travelers seem to act on that rule. Of course, some travelers totally ignore the man behind the counter, thinking it wise, but they make a serious mistake, as the men behind the counter have more influence on the boss than the traveler ever imagines. I know our boss often asks our opinion on goods he intends buying. Then, there is the chap who is too fresh. He makes so much talk and laughter that the boss feels annoyed and cuts him. One traveler I know wasted so much of the bookkeeper's time talking to her that the boss told him he didn't like his firm, didn't like him, and didn't want him in the store at all. It may go all right in the city, but I know our boss doesn't like to be talked to at the other end of a smoking cigar. Some fellows come in, make a sale, and then talk so long after that the boss wishes he hadn't given him the order. It seems to me that the man who comes in quietly, shakes hands smoothly with the boss, just as smoothly gets the boss's order, and just as smoothly smiles himself away, is the man who deserves the orders.

It always pays the boss to be friendly with the travelers. As a class they are a very influential body and can do a man many good and many ill turns. When I see some of the big jolly fellows come into the store, betimes when I am feeling blue on a Monday morning, it just makes me brighten up and feel as if the grocery business is not so bad after all. They appear to affect the boss in the same way, as the smiling jolly men of the grip are the men who seem to take the orders.

H. Gilbert Nobbs, Canadian manager for Holbrook's, Ltd., is at present out west on a three months' tour in the interests of his firm. Holbrook's sauce and pickles have an established reputation throughout Canada, and Mr. Nobbs' trip will go a long way towards heightening this reputation and strengthening it.

PORCELAIN ITS ORIGIN AND KINDS

Chinese the Discoverers and Greatest Artists—Soft and Hard Porcelain.

The Chinese, in the heyday of their productivity attained ceramic results not yet surpassed. The origin of porcelain as distinguished from earthenware is a product of Chinese genius, but its beginnings are wrapped in the forgetfulness of ages. Myott, Son & Co., Toronto, in a very daintily published sketch of the history of French porcelain, say: "It is generally agreed that porcelain was first made in China about 200 B.C. It attained its highest perfection in the fifteenth century, then began to decline, but again came brilliantly to the front in the seventeenth century, ending, however, in complete decadence during the last half of the eighteenth century."

Another writer says no proof has been established of the existence of porcelain in China to the Tang dynasty, 618-987 A.D., "a period fitly called the Augustin Age of Chinese Art."

Flesh and Bone of Porcelain.

In composition, true porcelain consists of two natural felspathic substances—a non-fusible clay (called by the Chinese, kaolin) combined with a fusible stone (called petuntse), the latter melting in the kiln to a glassy material, which holds the former in suspension and gives the porcelain its translucent and vitreous character. The one is the bones, the other the flesh of the porcelain body. Over this body is a skin of glaze formed of pure petuntse, sometimes softened with a little lime. This is the nature of true porcelain wherever made, in China or Dresden, in France or Japan.

It is admitted by the best European and American potters that the highest compliment that can be paid to their productions is to compare them favorably with the porcelain of the finest Chinese period, which may be said to extend from about 1660 to 1800 A.D., and to which may be referred almost all the choicest specimens in European collections.

A Few Master Potters.

The unrivalled excellence of this period was due not only to the skill and genius of a few master potters and the skill of their workmen, but very largely to the extraordinary care expended on the preparation of the materials. Time and labor were of no account; the clays were perfectly levigated, or ground to a fine, impalpable powder, and refined—and only the best materials were used. The result is that the experienced hand can recognize the porcelain of this time by the paste alone. Pass the finger over the raw foot-rim of a K'ang-hsi blue and white bowl where the paste is free from glaze; the surface is perfectly smooth and almost unctuous, and no gritty particle arrests the touch. The potting, too, is perfection; the shape is true to a hair's breadth, and the milky white surface betrays no flaw or blemish. The pure limpid glaze is hardly noticed; one might say the piece had been lifted "dripping from a bath of clear water."

The period above referred to, in which the fabrication of Chinese porcelain attained its greatest brilliancy, practically covered the reigns of three emperors —K'ang-hsi, Yung-cheng and Ch'ien-lung—whose combined reigns amounted to 133 years (1662-1795 A.D.). The celebrated Lang-yao glazes belong to the early part of this period. Constant attempts have been made to reproduce them, but though their brilliant hues have been almost equalled, there are peculiarities in the original Lang-yao that defy imitation.

Another Portion of the China and Glassware Department of J. A. McCrea & Son, Guelph.

Elements of French Porcelain.

In the brochure above referred to, Myott, Son & Co. thus describe the making of porcelain:

It is a common belief that all pottery is made of clay, but the truth is that table ware fashioned from clay alone is never beautiful nor durable—never harmonizes with the fine character of modern house and table furnishings. Porcelain is composed in part of clay, but also of other elements which impart to it the distinguishing characteristics of density, translucence, and the clear ringing quality by which it may always be identified. Porcelain has a beautiful, white, homogeneous body, is quite impervious to water and is not affected by frost.

Soft and Hard.

We may say in general that porcelain is divided into two groups, one called Pate-Tendre, the soft or artificial porcelain, and the other Pate-Dure—hard or Kaolinic porcelain.

The soft porcelain is again divided into two classes: The one—A-Fritte or Pate-Tendre Francaise is composed of sand and lime, which fuse and melt at a moderately high temperature, forming a body resembling glass, the vitrifica- china which was made at Sevres during tion of which is incomplete This is the the reign of Louis XV. It was of a rich, milky appearance, and from this delicate body were made many beautiful pieces in rich color effects, now of inestimable value.

English soft porcelain is composed of clay, sand, and phosphate of lime. The latter ingredient being prepared from calcined bones, has given the name "Bone China" to this particular porcelain. It is produced in England, Germany, and in the United States.

The soft porcelains are often extremely beautiful and have perhaps but one objectionable feature. The glaze, containing lead for its basis, is soft and yielding, so that all of the so-called soft porcelains become defaced in ordinary use by scratching and cutting with the knife.

Hard Porcelain.

Hard porcelain is produced by a much more difficult and scientific mixture of elements. The principle of these is Kaolin, a white, plastic, infusible clay. The other component parts are feldspar, a white mineral fusible only at high temperature, and quartz or flint which by itself is neither plastic nor fusible. When perfectly compounded, the hard porcelain is covered with a brilliant vitrified glaze of quartz and feldspar, so hard that a diamond will scarcely cut it; and it can never be marred or cut in ordinary use.

The famous Sevres China, formerly a soft porcelain, is now made by this process. Chinese porcelain, examples of which have been purchased at fabulous prices by collectors and museums, also belong to this group.

NEW IN GLASS AND CHINA

Of late every wholesale dealer in china with whom the representative of The Canadian Grocer has talked, when asked for the features of the trade in Canada has mentioned first the increased demand for fine china. "There is scarcely a home in the country," said one, "where there is not to be found one or more pieces of French china." This bespeaks the increasing wealth and the general prosperity of the country. It suggests also that every china store can get some of this finer and more profitable trade.

Ceramics, like every other art, is constantly aiming at something new. One of these is the so-called Norse pottery, reproductions of the bronze utensils recovered from the graves and haunts of the ancient Norsemen. The cleaned, smooth bronze surfaces are represented by a dull metallic glaze, while the sunken lines of the etched decorations, all the corners and crevices are green, to imitate the verdigris. Many of the pieces bear etched old Norse inscriptions. Much of this ware is very attractive in outline, and the color combination is unique. Besides jardinieres and vases, there are a great many useful articles in the ware, candlesticks, ash trays, flower bowls, tobacco sets, biscuit jars, etc.

Flat toys, made of board, is a recent fad in toydom, and the idea has been applied to earthenware and flat china figures for mantel or wall decoration, are to be had in great variety.

A much more expensive method of ornamentation is by pictures on tiles. These are made in Holland and are of any size from an inch and a half square up. Large pictures are made of tiles six inches or more square. Most of them are reproductions of masterpieces and framed, they are very effective decorations. They are sold at so much per tile, but the price varies greatly according to the subject of the painting and the size of tile. About a cent a square inch would be about the limit on the low side. These tiles are used also for working into wall panels and for decorating mantles.

Another novelty in this market is hand-made Venetian glass, such as tourists pay big prices for in the old land. These come in vases of very unique design and one wonders however they could be moulded by hand while the glass was molten. An article that would bring $2.50 in New York, sells, wholesale, in Canada at 50c.

There is a line of decorative ware called marble china. Its features are the classic simplicity and beauty of its outlines and its odd coloring, faint and soft. It is made in Austria.

Royal Copenhagen is a very expensive product of the potters' art. The delicate colorings are underneath the glaze, and in the sudsidized national institution where it is produced, two pieces are never made alike. Small vases will sell at $35 to $40, and figure pieces are equally expensive. Other manufacturers in Denmark are now making imitations of the Royal Copenhagen. It is made of the same material by the same methods and some of it is distinguishable from the genuine only by the price.

Gold glass, glass decorated with gold, is very popular this year, and there are new designs. For instance, a cake or bonbon dish, with the tall stem or handle above, instead of under the dish.

Pewter, at prices that rival silverware, is growing in popularity.

MANAGING THE CROCKERY DEPARTMENT.

By a Manager.

Women, when they deal with a grocery, feel duty bound to buy most of their food stuffs there. It is not so about china. A woman feels free to buy china wherever fancy pleases and price attracts her, and the grocer who carries china as a side line frequently adds many sales of groceries that he otherwise would not have made. As soon as a woman shows an inclination to buy it is well to clinch the bargain by wrapping the article up.

Girls or women are better at handling china; that is in the adjusting and arranging of it, as their deft fingers have greater precision and nicety. To make a big sale, however, an experienced man is always best.

To make the crockery department boom it is necessary at least once a week to hold a special sale in order to push off, at greatly reduced prices, articles that are hanging fire. Women come to these sales and often buy more than they intended to, tempted by the beauty and display.

Good buying is important in running a crockery department, but more important still is a good big profit—and an attractive display. China, as everyone knows, will stand a large margin of profit, and if the goods are ticketed, no matter how large the profit, women seem to fancy they are bargains.

Black baize makes a very attractive background for fine china, and where mirrors can be afforded they materially help the display. I do not believe in two prices in anything, and when people find that one price is the price and you stick to it, it very much simplifies business.

In selling china grocers can handle it to considerable advantage on a separate counter or table, or on a row of shelves on one side of the store, but to make money out of it, it is better to have it a separate department and to place the management in competent hands. Any grocer, without previous experience, by dealing with a reliable wholesale house, can easily add this very profitable line to his business. The wholesaler, if the merchant proves an apt pupil, will quickly teach him the business.

SOME HINTS ON THE RETAILING OF BULK TEAS

By Cyril L. Marshall.

Candidly, if I were buying tea for my own use and buying it from a retail grocer who was unknown to me, I should buy a package of one of the extensively advertised brands of Ceylon tea. And why? Simply because in doing so I should be fairly certain of what I was getting, and fairly certain, too, that the tea would be fresh.

Twenty years ago tea packed in lead packages was almost, if not quite, unknown on the Canadian market, and was regarded by the grocer as the most profitable line he handled. Perhaps because the grocer put his personal profit before value, the package man was able to insert the thin end of the wedge, a wedge he has been driving farther and further home year after year, until today many small grocers make no attempt to sell other than package teas.

Canadians are distinctly a tea-drinking people; not only this, but are critical and discriminating in the choice of the tea they drink, and it is only natural that those who take the beverage three times a day should demand good value and even value. Even value; bear this in mind, and you will realize why package tea has taken such a hold on the market, you will understand, too, why your customers consistently refuse to buy bulk teas.

> God gave leisure to use with care,
> Can you afford to bum?
> Work, then play, it's the easy way,
> Hump, and your trade will hum.

Lack of Knowledge.

I do not think I shall be contradicted when I say that at least fifty per cent. of the retail grocers know little or nothing about teas, their treatment or value, and that those who have some technical knowledge of blending find it a very dangerous acquirement, Of course, I do not mean to say that there are not many grocers, who even to-day, do a large and profitable business in bulk teas blended by themselves, but these are men who have a large turnover, and generally speaking, ample capital. It is here that the big retailer has the advantage over the smaller one. A well-balanced blend of black tea, to suit the taste of most Canadian tea drinkers, is usually a mixture of at least four or five different teas blended in definite proportions. To make such a blend, therefore, necessitates buying four or five half-chests or chests of different grades or descriptions of tea—that is, if original packages as imported from the gardens are purchased—which means a considerable outlay of money.

Now, whilst no fixed rule can be laid down as to when a Ceylon or Indian tea begins to deteriorate in quality, it depending largely on the make and firing of the leaf, no tea should be a year old before going into consumption—that is, a year from the time of manufacture until the time of drinking, although it is true some exceptional teas show no depreciation in flavor, or otherwise, within the year, others lose flavor much sooner, and for this reason any merchant who has not a turnover of 250 pounds of one grade within six months should on no account lay in a stock for blending purposes in excess of this amount.

Buying for Style.

I think we all would like to know more about tea than we do know, and unquestionably many retailers have no technical knowledge of blending, and consequently, fall back on the very dangerous practice of buying teas for style. Dangerous, I say, because unless a man has had years of training in the business, style is a pitfall and a delusion. It is, unfortunately, too true that the wholesale tea salesman has encouraged this practice of buying for style, simply because it is often the means of his making larger profits, and saves time and trouble. Hence, we have the absurdity of the retailer buying a tea of the best style obtainable at say 17 or 18 cents per pound, or whatever his limit is, to sell at 25 cents, utterly regardless of its drawing or drinking quality. On this basis he one month buys a low grown Ceylon, the next month an Indian, and then wonders that his customers insist upon getting package tea, which, as a rule, is blended with precision and varies in drinking quality and flavor little, if any, year in and year out. Or to go from bad to worse, he may be offered a snap (?)—a cut in the price of half a cent a pound, provided he buys a quantity, and thus overloads with stock, the result being that in time he finds that he has a lot of old tea on hand, unpalatable and almost unsalable. It is then that many a grocer falls into another trap. The persuasive salesman induces him to buy fresh tea to blend with the old stuff. If you have any trade for bulk tea and want to hold it, far better to throw the old and almost worthless stock in the garbage heap. Old tea will make fresh tea poor—fresh tea will improve old tea hardly one iota.

Bulk Teas Blended.

That there is a remedy for this state of affairs I am convinced. In my own experience I know of many wholesale houses who sell bulk teas blended, of excellent value, and which keep the same even drinking quality year after year. My advice, therefore, to anyone, whether he has a knowledge of blending or not, who wishes to cultivate a trade for bulk teas, to compete with the less profitable package, would be to buy blends from some reliable wholesale house, unless, of course, he is in possession of ample capital to buy the necessary quantities when doing a large turnover and having a wide experience of blending. When buying a bulk blend, the all-important point is to select a tea which will suit your customers' taste. If there is a large demand in your trade for any one brand or package tea, take this as a standard and endeavor to get a blend of a similar character, but of superior quality. By adopting this plan tea can be purchased in small quantities, thus insuring your always having fresh stock. Whenever a purchase is made, compare it with the last lot in stock, and decline to accept anything which is not a close match for it in the cup.

FOUR DON'TS.

Don't Rush—Just Organize.
Don't Can Your Ideas—Use Them fresh.
Don't be Mussy—Cleanliness is next to Success.
Don't Discourage your employes.
Every clerk has a right to the chance to be a grocer.

In writing the above I have no axes to grind. I am not in the tea business, package or bulk. I am, however, interested in the grocery business and the welfare of the retail grocer, and believe that the smaller grocer can work out the tea problem as I have tried to outline it.

There are many large retailers who sell little or no package teas and have a large and profitable business in bulk tea, generally speaking, of their own blending. If similar blends, which at the retail price are as good or better value than package teas and show a better profit, can be purchased in small quantities (a half-chest at a time) then there is no reason why any grocer cannot develop a trade for them. It must be remembered, however, that all bulk teas must be carefully handled, be kept in an air-tight canister, and away from anything likely to contaminate them, otherwise the sealed lead package will appeal more strongly than ever to your customers.

HOW TO CONDUCT A SPECIAL SALE.

PLAN OUTLINED BY A FIRM WHO HAVE MADE A SUCCESS OF IT.

It is a common practice among leading merchants to hold annual or semi-annual special sales. The average merchant, like the average man everywhere, shrinks from undertaking the unusual, and so there has grown up a class of sales companies who make a business of conducting sales for merchants who lack the initiative or enterprise to conduct their own. A commercial traveler in conversation with the editor of The Canadian Grocer the other day roundly condemned the methods of these sales companies.

He took exception first to the auction atmosphere they give a business, which is always suggestive of final dissolution and decay. For instance, same sale companies placard the whole front of the store with flaring posters or temporary signs and every little while a "barker" with a megaphone goes forth to announce the slaughter of prices.

Another objection was that the sales company brought in a selling force who, with their employers, were birds of passage and no way interested in the cultivation of those arts and graces of salesmanship which win and hold customers.

His most serious objection was to the practice of reducing prices unnecessarily and, with a view merely of swelling the total of sales, running off the staple lines, often new fresh stock that should not have appeared at all in the list of reductions. That is done because the usual terms are a commission on the aggregate sales.

Objects of a Sale.

There are three main objects to be aimed at in an annual sale and none of them should be lost sight of. They are, to stimulate business at a dull season, to freshen up the stock by getting rid of shop-worn, unseasonable and slow moving lines, and to get new customers. The hired sales-maker will stimulate trade for the time being, but he will probably leave the stock, as a whole, in worse shape than he found it by running off new and staple lines with the rest, and he certainly will not secure new or permanent customers.

The Canadian Grocer representative made enquiry for a firm that conducted their own sales with marked success. Among the firms most highly spoken of were R. Scott & Co., of Mount Forest. Courteously replying to a letter requesting a short article descriptive of their methods, R. Scott & Co. wrote:

"It is a rather difficult undertaking to draft a method for conducting an annual sale that will be applicable to all cases because, of necessity, every store must formulate its plans to suit its circumstances."

Know the Stock.

The first consideration, however, for anyone about to arrange a special sale is the actual condition of the stock. That is not to be guessed at. The entire stock should be carefully gone over to find out what lines most need attention. If a sale is held immediately after stock-taking, during the lull that follows the Christmas trading, this preliminary work is confined to a careful survey of the stock sheets for sale purposes.

SERMONS IN SENTENCES.

Energy begets trade.
A dirty apron is a poor "ad."
There's more profit in quality than quantity.
You are handling things to eat—clean up.
Ideas, like eggs, spoil when kept too long—use them, or get fresh ones.

A sale of only goods that were shop-worn or out of date would be after the manner of a pill without the sugar coating, and it is necessary to sweeten a sale with some staple lines at attractive reductions. Here very careful planning is necessary. Having found out what goods he desires to clear, he must exercise his best judgment in determining what staples are to be sacrificed. To overdo here will be to strip himself to a very considerable extent of the advantages hoped for, if not to quite turn the sale to a loss. This, then, is most important, and is a part of any sale plan that should be very carefully thought out and adhered to.

Now, then, as to the reduction in prices. It does not follow that because a merchant is conducting a sale he should lose money on any line put on the bargain counter. On every line he should get over and above the invoice price a profit sufficient to cover the cost of doing business, that is, in fact, the actual cost. Unless a merchant knows what his cost of doing business is, determining the actual cost as distinguished from the wholesale price must be mere guess-work, which is always a very unsound basis of trading. It must be remembered that a sale does not, at least should not, mean giving away goods. Some profit must be sacrificed, but it should be only net profit.

Line of Advertising.

No sale, however carefully planned or prepared for, could succeed without advertising and unless it be done carefully and thoroughly the results of the sale will fall far short of possibility. One plan has been to prepare a neat circular containing a complete list of the special values offered. All that can be told about these goods should be told and the former price and the sale price should be stated in bold figures.

The method of distributing these circulars is about as important as any other detail of the sale plan. Of course they could be mailed, or a boy could be sent out, but it is far more advantageous for the merchant to deliver them personally, taking them into the home of every customer and every resident of the neighborhood he would like to have for a customer. The personal visit is appreciated; it enforces the idea that something must be doing, something worth while, and it gives an opportunity for saying a word or two about some of the special values of the sale. This may look like going to a great deal of trouble and expense but it is not doing too much if success is worth while. A couple of days driving will do it. The circulars should be delivered at least a week before the sale opens.

The success of a sale need not be a matter of chance. It can be assured by a little well directed effort.

SAGE LEAVES.

All men are born equal but they very soon outgrow it.

It's fairly easy to get into public life—the difficulty is to stop there.

TORONTO GROCERS AT VERMONT CONVENTION

Meeting for Organization of State Association of the National Association of Retail Grocers—Resolutions Passed—An Enjoyable Banquet to Visitors.

F. C. Higgins, a leader among Toronto grocers, M. Moyer and E. M. Trowern, all prominent in the Retail Merchants' Association, attended the convention of Vermont grocers, held in Burlington recently for the organization of a state association in affiliation with the National Retail Grocers' Association. Mr. Higgins has kindly furnished us with a brief account of their trip as follows:

"A very pressing and kind invitation having been received by our association to be represented at the recent retail merchants' convention, held in Burlington, Vermont, it was decided by the grocers' section of our association to accept the invitation and show our appreciation by sending three delegates; Mr. Moyer, Mr. Trowern and myself being selected for this honor.

"As the dates of the convention were Tuesday and Wednesday, the 23rd and 24th of April, we decided (as our route lay by way of Montreal) to leave in time to see the food show in that city and fraternize with our fellow merchants there.

"After spending the night in a room on the seventh floor of one of Montreal's hostelries, which, after the recent fires, did not add to peaceful slumbers, we took the train in the morning for Burlington, arriving there about noon. We were met at the station by the mayor, Gov. Proctor, Congressman D. T. Foster, Senator W. T. Paton, Organizer Winters and other official dignitaries, and escorted to the hotel. After satisfying the wants of the inner man, we wended our way to the convention hall, which was tastily decorated with flags and bunting, right in the centre over the platform being a large Union Jack. Needless to say we appreciated the compliment, and with such an atmosphere of good-will and friendliness pervading the whole convention we felt at home at once.

"The meeting was opened by the mayor, who, in a few well chosen remarks, welcomed the delegates to Burlington. Organizer Winters then read the official call for the convention and the meeting got down to business and elected a chairman. Short addresses were made by quite a number of the delegates on the need of organization, these being backed up by National Secretary John Green, of Cleveland, in one of the ablest addresses it has ever been my pleasure to hear. This was followed by a talk on the Pure Food Law by Dr. H. D. Holton, secretary of the Vermont State Board of Health, from which I gathered that Canada has quite a distance to travel yet in the direction of better pure food laws. The appointment of committees was then taken up, after which it was decided to adjourn in order that the visiting delegates might attend the banquet given in their honor by the merchants of Burlington.

"The banquet was a most successful and pleasant affair—good speakers, good music and good food, and, of course, good hours.

What the Convention Accomplished.

"Next day the convention was called to order at 10 o'clock. Perhaps the best summing up of the work is shown by the resolutions passed:

"1. That this association be known as the Retail Merchants' Association of Vermont.

"2. Advocating the need and the equal rights of manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer.

"3. The amendment of the National Bankruptcy Law, or its repeal.

"4. In favor of regulated credit and fair competition.

"5. Opposition to all premium schemes, trading stamps and similar attempts to get something for nothing.

"6. Opposition to all attempts at parcel post legislation in favor of catalogue houses.

"7. Favoring the Dixon bill, giving the retail merchant the right to attach the wages of civil service employes for the necessaries of life.

"8. Favoring the closer union of the farmer and merchant in the interest of Vermont and of keeping trade at home.

"The result to us as visitors has been: 1st, an awakened and quickened interest in the work at home; 2nd, a deepened conviction that the unity of all retailers in one association, working on lines similar to our own, is the plan that has been proved by wide experience to hold out the greatest hope of success for the attainment of the aims and objects we have at heart; 3rd, a desire to see our coming convention at Hamilton, on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th of July, the greatest and best ever held in the interests of retailers."

"WHITE GOODS" IN GROCERIES.

A grocer on the upper East Side, New York, has adopted the plan practised by the large dry goods houses. He has his windows decorated in white and a sign in the centre reads: "Our Great Annual White Sale: Sugar, 16 cents for 3½ lbs., Flour 15 cents a bag, Starch 10 cents a pkg.," followed by a long list of "white" goods marked down for this event.

FROM GROCER CORRESPONDENTS

BELLEVILLE.

The grocers of this city, both retail and wholesale, are highly elated at the way spring trade is progressing, and most of the leading grocers predict a very busy and profitable season. They stated that last Saturday was the best day they have had in some months and some had to refuse delivery orders at six o'clock. The demand for the better class of goods is becoming more prevalent and this is always welcomed as a sign of prosperity.

A carload of Jumbo bananas arrived in the city Tuesday of this week from the firm of White & Co., Toronto, and was in charge of John S. McVean. He had no trouble in disposing of the whole carload in a short time.

Jack Grey, the popular traveler for the Surprise Soap Co., was in the city last week and presented all the grocers and their clerks with Surprise aprons, for which they were truly grateful. This firm deserves credit for their up-to-date advertising methods.

John Hodge, the veteran traveler for coffees and spices, Toronto, was a welcome caller on the trade, and so was John Everett, of Christie, Brown & Co.

That this city is on the verge of a business boom never exceeded in its history is amply indicated on all sides by the many extensive building operations under way and the increased value and turning over of real estate, combined with a marked confidence by the people in the city's future.

At the meeting of the cheese board on Saturday last over 1,000 boxes sold at 12½ cents, a remarkably high price for this time of year, and as a result the farmers are all happy.

Mr. Thomas Good, for nearly forty years clerk in Wesley Bullen's grocery store and then in his liquor store, has removed to Toronto with his family and will reside with his son, Charles Good, who is connected with a large grocery store there.

Visitors to a city, and especially commercial travelers, as a rule seem to judge of its progress by the amount of building they see going on. This is generally a safe criterion. As is well known, Belleville, last summer, had quite a "building boom" in the way of the erection of private residences. It was a question whether the boom would continue this summer, but the concensus of opinion among the various architects, contractors and builders is that, whilst there may not be as many private residences as last year, there will be building operations of much magnitude going on. There is no denying the fact that houses are in great demand, and an evidence of this is apparent in the fact that there are in the city no vacant houses of any dimensions, and houses provided with modern improvements cannot be secured.

During the past few months rents have advanced materially, in some cases 75 per cent., owing to the demand for properly equipped premises. The reason for this is that the population of the city has been considerably increased owing to the fact that the rolling mills and other industries have imported many skilled men for their staffs and many retired farmers have recently come to the city to take up their residence.

Work has already commenced on the reconstruction of the Hotel Quinte, and this will mean a summer's job for all classes of mechanics. This hotel will be the finest between Toronto and Montreal, and its destruction by fire was a serious blow to the traveling public.

At least two of the city banking institutions will virtually have new premises, the Merchants Bank and the Standard Bank.

When the Merchants Bank has taken possession of their new premises the work of remodeling the old building for the public library will be commenced, tenders for which were let some time ago.

BROCKVILLE.

The traveling public in general will, no doubt, be pleased to learn of the reopening of the old St. Lawrence Hall, at Brockville, on the 15th of this month by Mr. Lawrence Muldoon, late manager of the Hotel Strathcona, and an all-round good fellow, who will look after the wants of all who give him a call. Larry, as he is known, intends to bring the reputation of this house to its old standpoint by giving careful attention to the cuisine and by furnishing the best that can be bought in wines and liquors. We predict for him a successful business and trust the old patrons of the hotel will give him their support. Messrs. Ed. Dwyer and Ben. McGregor, former wine clerks at Strathcona, will also be with Mr. Muldoon when he opens up.

Another meeting was held last evening by the retail merchants in the town hall to further the Dominion Day celebration. A good strong canvassing committee had been appointed at a previous meeting, and reported last night that they were meeting with great success in getting subscriptions, a large sum already being subscribed. They will report again on Wednesday, the 15th inst.

CHATHAM.

There is strong probability that, as foreshadowed in last week's correspondence, the city council will shortly take steps to make a test of the local transient traders' by-law by appealing from one of the magistrate's decisions.

With a view to protecting the city in the matter of taxes and safeguarding the merchants, all heavy taxpayers, from unfair competition, any non-resident coming to the city to set up business and who is not the purchaser of an existing stock in trade, is liable to a license fee of $100. If he remains a full year, the amount is refunded or applied on taxes. The by-law is aimed largely at parties bringing in bankrupt stocks and disposing of them at cut prices. A recent information against John McLeod, a young man setting up in the gents' furnishing line, was dismissed by the magistrate. The crown attorney thought the decision was not good law, and advised the council to appeal.

At a special meeting held on the 10th, the crown attorney's letter came up, and the magistrate came in for some bouquets from members of the council. There was a considerable undercurrent of sympathy for McLeod, many considering the case against him as rather a technical one, but it was pointed out that the magistrate had shown a marked disinclination to enforce the by-laws in cases of this nature. His course in connection with the by-law against peddlers was described as similar, and Mayor Stone and Ald. Potter both instanced cases in which, according to their contention, the magistrate had declined to enforce the by-law.

"The merchants are pretty well worked up over the matter," said Ald. Potter. "They have come to the conclusion that the by-laws are no protection, and that the magistrate will give them no protection."

The matter was referred to the civic finance committee, to consult with the city solicitor and appeal the case if deemed advisable. While the McLeod case may not be appealed, the feeling among local merchants is strongly in favor of bringing the matter to an issue. The question has been a burning one for some time past, all branches of business being more or less affected. In connection with tea agents, Mayor Stone stated that some of these had given him as a reference to the firms with whom they were employed; and had afterward sworn in the police court that they were owners of the goods they handled and were selling on their own behalf.

Confectioners Organize.

Following on the organization of the grocers' section of the Retail Merchants' Association, the confectioners and bakers have organized their section. The work of organization was carried out at a meeting held on Thursday, the 9th, in the Board of Trade chambers. There was practically a full attendance and any amount of interest was displayed. Ex-Ald. E. A. Mounteer, who acted as chairman of the meeting, was elected president of the section, and Edwin E. Wing was chosen secretary. A number of topics of interest were informally discussed during the course of the evening. It was decided to meet monthly, the meeting night being fixed for the first Tuesday in each month.

E. J. Buzzard, of Blenheim, will conduct the general store at Erieau during the coming summer.

W. B. Lounsbury, of Wheatley, has recently opened a grocery in connection with his meat business.

W. S. Eberle is the proprietor of a new grocery recently started at Highgate.

The Dresden Creamery commenced operations May 6th.

Harry A. Andrew's fine new delivery rig made its first appearance here last week.

The Ridgetown Canning Co. have purchased a site from Zenas Watson, of that town. The site contains three acres, the price being $600, of which the town contributes $375. Building operations will be commenced at once.

J. A. Ruddick, chief of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commission; G. H. Barr, of the Dairy Commissioner's staff, and A. McNeill, chief of the fruit division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, are holding a series of meetings throughout the county, with a view to interest the public in general, and the farmers in particular, in fruit cultivation, dairying and cold storage.

GUELPH.

Nineteen mills on the dollar is the rate of Guelph's taxation this year. Such was the final result of the planning of Mayor Newstead, Ald. McCrea and the members of the finance committee, and the consideration of their report by the other members of the council. It was another midnight session and practically the whole time was devoted to the consideration of the finance committee's report, striking the rate of taxation.

The report, as finally drafted by the committee, fixed the rate at 18½ mills; yesterday morning they had it up to 20 mills, but subsequently they discovered sources of assets that had not been taken into account, and by the time the report was ready for the council, the rate had been cut to 18½ mills, through the close calculation and careful pruning of Mayor Newstead, and Finance Chairman McCrea, who were animated by a desire to establish a heretofore unattainable record.

Ald. Thorpe upset these calculations, however; he wanted $1,000 to go on with the city hall improvements, and after a hard struggle he got it.

The main items, which authorized the assumption that an 18½ mill rate would be sufficient, were an increase of about $3,000 in the estimates of the receipts from the waterworks commission, and an increase of about $4,000 from the Guelph Junction railway board. These assumptions may or may not be backed up by results. In all probability they will. But if they do not, the extra half mill above the original report should meet all deficiencies. A garbage by-law and a pedlars' license by-law were also considered.

FRANK D. COCKBURN
Of Comfort Soap whom Jim the Grocer at Kingston remembers pleasantly for his able co-operation at the Grocers' Summer Outing

A Forward Step.

Our city council has taken a step forward in municipal affairs by ordering all projecting signs off Wyndham street. Many merchants objected, but all are now unanimous in voting it a striking improvement on Wyndham street. Geo. Williams was unfortunate enough to break one of his plate glass windows in removing his sign.

The clerks' executive are petitioning the merchants for a half-holiday during July and August, and nearly everyone, both employer and employe, seems to appreciate these pleasant changes.

The farmers are complaining of a very backward season. Fall wheat looks anything but well. However, we hope these pleasant days and a little warm rain will improve matters.

Some gentleman belonging to a diamond ring is marking up the plate glass windows. $25 is offered for his capture and conviction..

Our Retail Association is adopting the Dominion association's system of debt collecting and finding it very satisfactory.

Automobiles are appearing more plentifully every day. First thing we know a grocer will have one.

The council is considering paving the principal streets. Then it will be time for the grocers to start the automobile delivery.

INGERSOLL.

One of Ingersoll's leading merchants has publicly expressed the opinion that it would be very beneficial to the town if the tributary territory could be materially increased as a market centre.

The Ingersoll market is known the length and breadth of the land. It is usually well attended, with a plentiful supply of seasonable products, but any move that would increase the volume of trade in the town would be in keeping with twentieth century progress and should be worthy of consideration. If greater accommodation in the way of a new market building was afforded the market patronage would undoubtedly be increased. The same merchant has thrown out a hint to the Board of Trade and the council in this connection, and from the retailers at least, any movement which would attract trade from a larger radius than at the present time would have enthusiastic endorsation. By reason of its admirable location, situated as it is in the heart of one of the best agricultural districts in Canada, and being the home of the cheese industry, few, id any other, towns of similar size, can show such a steady and substantial volume of business year in and year out. With no unrest in labor circles, with all the industries running to their full capacity, and some of them overtime, Ingersoll is in a happy and prosperous condition, and it has long since become the established policy of her progressive citizens to achieve greater advancement whenever an opportunity presents itself.

Ingersoll now has a dual telephone service. The Ingersoll Telephone Co. recently opened their office on King street west, with between three and four hundred subscribers. They have a large number of subscribers in the rural districts and their phones will be a great convenience to the residents of both town and country.

Bruce Phillips has accepted a position with H. W. Healy, as manager of his grocery store. Mr. Phillips is an enterprising young man, who has had wide experience in the grocery business, and under his guiding hand Mr. Healy's interests will be well looked after.

Present indications point to Ingersoll securing a grant of $10,000 from Andrew Carnegie for the establishment of a public library. The matter was first taken up by the Board of Trade, and was subsequently brought to the notice of the council in the form of a resolution strongly favoring the movement. The council appointed a special committee to deal with the project, which reported at the meeting on Monday last to the effect that the mayor be authorized to make application to Mr. Carnegie for the grant. After some discussion, the report was referred back to the committee for further information. The general feeling seems to be that the matter will receive favorable consideration at the next meeting of the council.

Despite the unseasonable weather and the fact that the farmers are taking advantage of every fine day to rush their spring work to completion, there was a large representation from the countryside at Saturday's market. The market building presented a scene of unusual activity, while the offerings were plentiful, with the prices in many instances showing an increase. The price of eggs showed a decided upward tendency, 18 cents per dozen being the ruling figure. A few pairs of chickens were offered, which met with ready sale at from 50 to 65 cents each. Twelve loads of potatoes were also offered, the major portion of the sales being made at $1 per bag.

Probably on account of the cold weather, the weekly half-holiday during the "hot" months appears to have been overlooked. With heavy wearing apparel still in evidence, no one has given much thought to outdoor recreation. Heretofore the weekly half-holiday has been very popular and the movement will likely be taken up again in due time A baseball team has been organized to represent Ingersoll in the Western Ontario Amateur Baseball League, and this season will likely be another instance of history repeating itself. Nearly everyone in Ingersoll admires a good game of baseball, and it would not be surprising if a move is made to have a half-holiday during the major portion of the ball season. This was the rule for a couple of seasons, but it remains for someone to take the initiative again.

As the result of a transfer which took place a few days ago Ingersoll has only one liquor shop at the present time. John Christopher, who has been in business here for a long period, sold out to A. F. Sage, who immediately transferred the stock to his shop.

It is expected that a monster Orange celebration will be held here on the 12th of July. The matter has been under consideration and at their last meeting the committee reported that they would go on with the movement, provided the business men and citizens generally gave them sufficient encouragement.

A Morello, fruit dealer, has shown commendable enterprise by leasing the store formerly occupied by John Christopher. He will conduct two stores in future.

M. E. Scott, who formerly conducted a flour and feed store on King street west, has returned from a four months' sojourn in Louisiana and Texas. He was very much impressed with the climate of these two states, as well as the business opportunities and he may return to one of them to reside.

More than ordinary interest has been aroused as to the form of Reeve Buchanan's proposed by-law to regulate the handling of bread. At the last meeting of the council Mr. Buchanan stated that since he had given notice of his by-law, he had learned that there were some features which would make it very difficult to live up to. He said he wished to withdraw from the position he had taken in regard to having the bread wrapped or placed in paper bags. It was, however, his intention to endeavor to amend the by-law so as to bring about some very important and desirable changes in the mothods of handling the bread consumed in Ingersoll. The by-law fathered by Mr. Buchanan regulating the delivery of coal was given its final reading.

Tuesday of last week was the thirty-fifth anniversary of the big fire which destroyed the business district of Ingersoll, an event which is still fresh in the memory of many.

KINGSTON.

Spring is here, I have "caws", to know,
Was the loud, shrill cry of many a crow,
And the robin sang the same old song,
"Tweedle-dum, tweedle-dee" the whole day long.
But Jack Frost said, "Just wait a wee,
And we shall see what we shall see."
Then he froze up the valleys, the plains, and the hills,
And all vegetation in sight,
The lakes, pools, and puddles, the murmuring rills,
He congealed them all in the night.
So Jack is disliked down in Kingston this spring,
He's sent up the prices in wheat;
And we're all feeling blue on account of the "do,"
For it's hard on the fellows that eat.

Jim the Grocer spent all last week in Montreal taking in the sights. The weather was cold and the wind was high and papers of all kind disappeared in the sky. The dust would blind you, and many a man to oaths gave vent in English and French, wherever you went. Yes, even the horse show was affected by the weather. There was a big horse sale at Foster's, and all kinds were trotted up and down the enclosure where the buyers looked over a fence and sought for spavins, ring-bones, etc., and noted the gait. There were trotters and pacers and heavy-draught horses, blacks, greys, chestnuts and bays, and they sold from $45 to $150. Some got snaps and some got bit; some were pleased and some were sulky, but such is life.

Well, Jim went over to the fruit commission house and bought some Valencias, Mexicans and navels, new tomatoes and cabbage. Gillis, Caldwell's popular traveler, said to Jim, "Would you like to drive down to the fruit sheds and see the big liners?" Jim jumped on the big wagon and went, and say, Brother Grocers! if you have never been more than a mile from your store, don't act the fool any more, but take a trip, and you will find the store when you get back, and your clerks will look after it better than if you are hanging around. Just try it and see. Well, the fruit shed was 700 feet long and about 100 feet wide, and the iron roof on it was put on in a day and a half. That's the way things are done there. The shed contained over 30,000 boxes of Sorrento oranges, and Jim was introduced to Gaetano Gatto Messina, president of the famous brand of lemons, Statue of the Republic, and one of the largest shippers in Spain. He is pleased with Canada and likes the people better than those he came in contact with in New York, and intends in future to give preference to Canada.

We next visited the steamship Bellona, with its cargo of 29,108 cases Sorrentos, and 4,440 cases Valencias. The Fremona is due in a day or so with a cargo of 45,360 cases lemons and 6,000 cases oranges.

Next Jim went up the elevator in the handsome Coristine building to have a talk with Kenneth Munro about Jacobs biscuits, but Ken was away on a trip. The genial young man looking after his affairs in his absence opened up his room and spent a few minutes showing how nice and complete Jacobs' mahogany biscuit stands were. Marble top and holding twelve tins. They cost about $24, and are made in Ireland.

Next Jim made his way to William street and talked butter, eggs and cheese. Prices were easier on butter, but eggs and cheese were firm. Jim took the Bleury street car and got up into the upper section. He called on Mr. Foster, retail grocer. Jim said, "You have a nice store and fresh-looking stock and you seem to be busy and your customers seem to be of the better class." "Yes," he said, "and I owe it to the fact that I give no coupons, no Christmas boxes and no discounts. I give people a good service and the best value I can get for them. I can't understand why grocers educate their customers to look for presents. They certainly know that in doing so they have to resort to low-grade goods or light weight. Yes, it's a mistake."

Jim's time was limited, but he called on Mr. Brown, of the Thos. Good Coffee Co., of Boston, who reported business good.

Jim ran across Mr. Gould, grocer, of Port Hope, who was on a trip just for a change and to look around.

Next Jim called on Mr. Robt. Shaw, manager of the Charleston 5, 10 and 15 Cent Store Co., St. Catharines and St. Lawrence Main. Mr. Shaw at one time conducted a large cash grocery with his brother in Cornwall, and for many years was clerk in Bryson & Graham's, at Ottawa. He reports increasing business every year.

On the return trip westward, Jim ran across Mr. Balfour, of the Imperial Extract Co., of Toronto, He is having a satisfactory trip and increasing orders for Shirriff's jelly powders and extracts. He got off at Prescott. Harold Martin was alone on the train. He ran a grocery in Kingston at one time, and is a son of A. R. Martin, also of Kingston, grocer of years ago, but now holding a lucrative position in the west. Harold is traveler now for the Robertson Bros., dealers in high-class china and glassware.

Will Crothers, traveler for the Crothers Biscuit & Confectionery Co., here, got tired living alone. He took one of Kingston's fairest daughters into partnership for life. He moves into the fine residence, corner Union and Wellington streets. He certainly is wise who marries, and we all hope Will's future will be as sweet as the samples he carries. His better half, of course, will be guided by her own sweet Will.

James Crawford secured the contract to supply the soldiers' camp here. He will be kept busy putting up rations for the hungry boys who drill. James Redden & Co. got the contract for the Petawawa camp, and they know how to fill the bill. The boys in red and blue will get good things to eat and drink.

The Misses O'Brien, formerly of Renfrew, have leased the store, corner Division and Earl, in the handsome Graham block, recently put up. Alderman Graham was for many years a grocer. He is now one of our largest contractors and has put up over a hundred buildings in the last ten years. He is a hustler, owing to his early training behind the counter.

LONDON.

The question of their annual picnic is one which more than any other is just now disturbing the members of the Retail Grocers' Association. The matter was discussed at a meeting of the association on Wednesday evening last and by the executive this afternoon. It seems that certain grocers have been for some years holding a picnic to Niagara Falls, calling it the grocers' picnic. The railway company has been allowing these men a rake-off on each ticket sold, and there have been some small rebates on the attractions at the Falls, so that altogether there has been quite a bit of graft for someone in these annual affairs. When the association met on Wednesday night it was learned that a certain grocer who is not a member of the association, had in January last signed a contract with the Michigan Central Railway Company for a grocers' excursion to the Falls on a certain day during the coming summer, and that this individual, with three members of the association, would advertise a grocers' excursion, no matter what place or date the association decided on. But there is no money in this for the association, and the members, naturally enough, do not feel like being parties to any picnic plan which means profit for others and none for themselves. The four individuals referred to have been approached by representatives of the association, but they show no inclination to join in and make one affair of it, and present indications are that there will be two grocers' picnics in different directions.

The Comfort Soap Race, which our Kingston Correspondent has several times referred to.

Price-cutting as applied to sugars, has been stopped in this city for a time at least. The continued advance in wholesale prices has had the effect of bringing the cutters to their senses and to realize the fallacy of selling at or below cost, and when the matter was brought up at the meeting of the association last week, the two chief offenders agreed to quit their foolishness. Canned goods, however, will continue to be sold at cut prices.

One of the finest retail stores in London is that of Messrs. Ryan & Russell, Richmond Street, south of King. It is bright—rendered additionally so by prism lights, which throw the daylight right to the back of the store. The arrangement of showcases, the office, canned and bottled goods, is evidence that there is someone of taste connected with the establishment. The firm have a way of keeping their stock fresh, to which fact must be attributed their big trade, for the business of Ryan & Russell is among the largest in the city.

A grievance of small shippers was aired at a meeting of the shippers' committee of the Board of Trade on Friday night. These men who as a rule do not ship in car lots, complain that through the transhipment of goods it is next to impossible to trace shipments once they leave London. It is quite common for shipments to be six weeks in making the trip from London to Calgary. The whole matter is to be taken up with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company without delay.

It is rumored that the McCormick Manufacturing Company have decided to seek a large site in the east end of the city, and that the large building now occupied by the company on the south-east corner of Dundas and Wellington Streets will be turned into a block of stores. The report that the company have been approached by the T. Eaton Company, of Toronto, with the object of establishing a Lonhon branch in the company's present premises, is discredited.

The retail grocers have approached the city council with a view to having no licenses whatever granted to fruit or peanut men selling on the streets. The city solicitor has advised the aldermen that the council has power to regulate the areas within which these vendors can ply their calling; they cannot prohibit the trade. However, the grocers will discuss the subject with the license committee at its next meeting. As an instance of what they suffer at the hands of these men, the grocers tell of a case where a banana man took up his stand in front of a grocery store and sold while there no less than two cartloads of fruit to passers-by. All the while a bunch of bananas hung in the grocer's window unnoticed. If they cannot have the peddlers barred out altogether, the grocers ask that they be kept from in front of stores, whether in the business districts or the suburbs. The grocers pay heavy taxes and rents, keep help and horses, and they find it impossible to compete with men who have no expenses to speak of.

MONTREAL.

Montreal Retail Grocers' Association has decided to hold its annual picnic at Alexandria this year, in conjunction with that of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association. The date is June 26.

This decision was arrived at last Friday evening, when the regular monthly meeting was held in the association rooms, St. Catherine Street East. June 26 is St. Jean Baptiste Day, a great feast occasion with the French Canadians, and it was thought that this would be a most fitting way to celebrate the holiday. Besides this there was the opportunity of enjoying a day's outing with their Ottawa confreres. The citizens of Alexandria are ready to do their share in making the day a successful and enjoyable one, so that it is likely there will be some pleasure in store for those who attend.

Instead of appointing several committees to arrange details of the excursion, the association members decided to leave to the executive officers all this work. Therefore those who will be responsible are: President, H. Laniel; vice-presidents, E. P. Guillemette and J. A. Dore; Treasurer, H. Laniel; Secretary A. Sarazin, and General Secretary, J. A. Beaudry.

Friday morning a delegation comprising the officers and some seventy-five members of the association waited on the Premier of Quebec, Hon. Mr. Turgeon, and the treasurer of the province, Hon. Mr. Tessier, regarding the increase in liquor licenses. Under the new arrangements, grocers having a liquor license must pay, instead of $200 or $400, as last year, $300 or $450, as the case might be. The ministers stated that there would be a meeting of the Cabinet shortly, when they thought some arrangement would be reached which would be satisfactory to all concerned.

PETERBORO.

T. Kinnear & Co. are working up such a large business in this locality that it has been found necessary to put on another traveler. N. F. Corrin, formerly with R. A. Dutton, fish, fruit and grocery merchant, has accepted a position on the road with this wholesale house. Mr. Corrin is well known in this city and is very popular. He has made a successful salesman behind the counter and should do equally well on the road.

A Progressive Firm.

S. A. Oke, fish and fruit dealer, who carries on the largest exclusive fish and fruit business in the city, has secured a lease of large premises along the G. T.R. track, which will be used as a wholesale storehouse. For some time past Mr. Oke has done a wholesale business, but the past couple of years has seen such a development that he cannot possibly handle it from the retail store. The new premises are situated at the corner of Simcoe and Bethune streets, and a railway siding runs right into the building. The premises are very large and well built, having been used years ago as a grain elevator. One great feature about the building is that there is a ripening room in the basement large enough to hold 300 bunches of bananas at one time. Then the foundations are so thick that frost cannot possibly penetrate in the winter. The firm at the present time is handling a carload of bananas a week and the business is just getting nicely started.

Associated with Mr. S. A. Oke is his brother, Mr. Walter Oke, who spent eleven years in the wholesale fruit houses in Toronto. He is therefore a first-class man, and the boys are making a big success.

Besides the city trade, which is by no means small, Oke Bros. cover a very large outside country, including such places as Cannington, Lakefield, Havelock, Omemee, Lindsay, Norwood, Bobcaygeon, Millbrook, Campbellford, and several other places. A little later in the season there will be the very heavy business from the summer residents and tourists up around the Kawartha lakes, Chemong park and Rice lake. All the summer resorts help very largely in increasing the total of Oke Bros.' business. The new storehouse will enable them to handle their fruit and fish more easily and more quickly this year than ever before.

Mr. E. F. Mason is at present very busy putting a new system in force in his three big grocery stores. In the past the two down-town stores were conducted together, but since the third store was added, and since the business done by all three places has increased so rapidly during the past couple of years that the head of the company decided to put them on their own feet and make each one responsible for itself.

The city's new fire hall was formally opened on Tuesday evening last. The new fire alarm system has been installed and the new fire engine was tested. The fire hall is one of the most modern in the province and it is a credit to the city. In it are stabled six horses, a combination hose and chemical wagon, a fire engine, and a modern hook and ladder truck, with a 54-foot aerial ladder. The merchants now expect that their insurance will be reduced, according to the promise of the Fire Underwriters' Association some time ago.

The executive of the Retail Merchants' Association met on Monday night for the purpose of completing arrangements for the proposed banquet. The date will be about the 30th of May, although it will not be definitely decided until the committee hears from the different speakers. Another meeting will be held next Monday night.

The Peterboro Board of Trade met Tuesday night and discussed "Canadian Banks, Foreign Investments." Excellent papers were read by D. Hughes-Charles, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and A. P. Pousette. The board also discussed railway switching rates. There were a large number present.

A New Invention.

The Excelsior fruit cleaner is a new machine, which is being manufactured here by R. B. McGill. This invention was formerly made in Peoria, Ill., and then in Mount Pleasant, Ont. But now Mr. McGill will handle them. The woodwork is made by the Peterboro Canoe Company, and the iron work by the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co. The machine is for cleaning all kinds of dried fruits and it is being put in by many wholesale and large retail grocers. It is one of the best machines on the market and is giving satisfaction wherever used.

ST. CATHARINES.

Albert Phipps, who purchased the property and grocery business from John Ross, on Queenston street some years ago, finding that his premises were too confined for his increasing trade, removed his stock, temporarily, to an adjoining building and removed the old store building, on the site of which he erected a large and commodious two-storey brick building. The ground floor is the store part into which he has transferred his stock. The upper portion he occupies as a dwelling. Mr. Phipps, since he branched out in the grocery business, has succeeded by his strict attention to business and he has gained the confidence and good will of the people at large.

The journeymen carpenters and their employers, not being able to satisfactorily adjust their differences, relating to the amount to be paid for labor, ceased work about ten days ago. The carpenters had been receiving 27½ cents per hour, and had demanded an increase to 35 cents. After repeated meetings, two contracting carpenters came to terms. The other builders, after further conferences, consented to give 32½ cents, which the carpenters refused to accept, and there was a breaking off of all attempts to settle the difference. Some of the journeymen carpenters have gone to Niagara Falls, where they are getting 40 cents an hour. Thus far this strike has not interrupted the other trades unions, the members all being kept busy, though it is disappointing to owners to have their building operations delayed.

James B. Dolan, one of St. Catharines' promoters and business men, has secured the premises on the south bank of the hydraulic race—water being the motive power—formerly owned and operated by the McKinnon Dash and Metal Works Company, which he will convert into a woolen factory, for which he has ordered machinery of the most improved and modern pattern. Mr. Dolan expects to employ one hundred skilled workers in the mill.

Howard McNulty has re-entered business, having purchased the pop and soda water manufactory on Ontario street opened by Riordan & Company, of Niagara Falls, Ont.

STRATFORD.

The retail grocery trade reports a very satisfactory state of business right along and all merchants are looking forward to a brisk spring trade. The stores are donning their true spring appearance and everything looks bright and cheery. The atmosphere is cool and refreshing and the fresh green goods and well displayed produce entice the housewife to buy.

A much respected citizen has lately been removed in the person of the late Sheriff Hossie, who died on May 4. Mr. Thos. Magwood, one of our city fathers, has been appointed to fill the vacancy, and Mr. McInnes will be the new alderman.

The grocers here are very much pleased with The Canadian Grocer, and pronounce it the best publication that comes into their store. One grocer remarked, "It is a splendid publication, a fund of information, and I would not do without it."

The market on Saturday last was largely attended by both buyers and sellers, but the price of produce remains about the same, although there was an advance in butter of one cent. Fresh garden products are in much demand. Maple syrup still remains at the same figure, 35c. per quart.

Grocers, Take Notice!

The first branch of the Retail Merchants to make a move toward early closing is the druggists. At present the drug stores do not close at any particular hour and, of course, this is a great hardship on the clerks. Commencing last Monday, (May 13), however, conditions were somewhat changed, the druggists having agreed to close at nine o'clock each evening. This is a splendid move and should not be any inconvenience to customers, as they can do their business quite as well before that hour, and it is a great boon to the clerk. It is to be hoped that the new ruling or agreement will be carried out by the several druggists in the city, as it is generally known it does not do for one man to keep open and the other to close. The half-holiday movement will be the next important question, and is already the talk among the clerks.

Delivery by Auto.

By July 1, if all goes well, Stratford will have the auto delivery system in full swing. A company has been formed, known as the Rapid Delivery Company. This company has entered into contracts with the leading merchants of the city to have their goods delivered by auto cars. The company propose putting three auto cars on the road and they will make four trips every day, at the hours of 9 and 11 a.m., and 3 and 5 p.m., with an extra trip Saturday evening at 9 o'clock; also extra trips on days preceding holidays. The merchants will find this a great convenience in many ways, and they will not need so many horses. This new company also purpose buying several horses and rigs from the merchants and these will be used on the roads over which the auto cars would not be able to go. The company will also purchase three auto bus cars for general passenger use. These will be put on regular routes throughout the city and will also be hired to outing and pleasure parties. The company will purchase all the auto cars from the Kurtz-McLean Co., Stratford.

Half-holiday Means Whole-souled Work

Regarding the half-holiday for clerks and storekeepers, it is a good thing and should be helped along. Stratford is a city of extensive industries, and there is scarcely one of them that does not close on Saturday afternoons, and while a merchant could not shut up shop on Saturday, still there is no reason why Wednesday or Thursday afternoon should not be taken. We have a Retail Merchants' Association here, and if its members agree to the half-holiday closing they will retain the same amount of business, and the insignificant increase that might go to some small store would not be worth considering. Give the clerk and the merchant time for recreation and rest, and the former will come down to work in the morning bright and refreshed and feeling like work, while the merchant will arrive with a glad smile and will thoroughly enjoy life, and the result is the better for both employe and employer. What we want are better salesmen, and everything that we can do toward bettering the condition of our salespeople should be done. The half-holiday will help along the good work. No one would sustain any loss by the weekly half-holiday, and those most interested would derive much benefit.

There is a slight change for the good among our grocers in regard to the cutting of prices. It is hoped that before long an agreement will be reached.

It is a recognized fact that one of the best advertisements that a grocer can have is a neat and attractive waggon. In this respect Stratford is right up to the mark. Several of our merchants have got very handsome and gaudy delivery rigs this spring.

Board of Trade Meeting.

The annual meeting of Stratford's Board of Trade was held on Friday night last, when a number of the leading citizens were present. The retiring president, Ald. C. McIlhargey, presided, and was supported by Secretary Steele. The main business was the election of officers. The following are the ones elected :—

President—W. J. Mooney.

Vice-President—I. W. Steinhoff.

Secy.-Treas.—Jas. Steele.

Council—Geo. McLagan, Wm. Preston, Wm. Maynard, J. D. McCrimmon, D. M. Ferguson, W. A. Moore, J. J. Mason, W. J. Ferguson, R. T. Orr, C. McIlhargey, Jos. Orr, W. S. Dingman.

An important resolution was passed, which asked for an additional collection from the letter boxes of the city at 11 a.m., and also that the post office be open all day on holidays. The treasurer's report showed receipts during the past year had amounted to $652.21, and a cash balance on hand of $210.31.

The Board of Trade has been alive to the interests of the city. During the past year it was instrumental in securing two new industries—the Kemp Manufacturing Co., and the Kurtz-McLean Co. A by-law was also passed guaranteeing a loan to the J. A. Cline Manufacturing Co., which will enable it to very materially extend its business.

WOODSTOCK.

On Saturday morning flour was advanced ten cents per hundred pounds in price by all the local dealers in that article. For some time it has been selling at $2.05, but now $2.15 has to be paid. Dealers say there is every probability of a further advance before very long.

A local dealer told your correspondent to-day that he expected the retail price of sugar would be advanced shortly, and consumers may expect to pay more per hundred pounds and receive fewer pounds for a dollar. He said that in the past few weeks the price to wholesalers had been advanced slightly, but not enough to warrant an increase in retailing; but that if any further advance were made to them then consumers would have to pay more.

A number of dealers have commented, in speaking to me, on the very excellent issues of The Grocer which are being put out now. There are not a few subscribers in this city, which goes to show that Woodstock's grocers are, in the main, progressive and up-to-date in their methods. Nothing keeps a merchant so thoroughly posted as the careful reading of a good trade publication, dealing with his particular branch of trade.

Two travelers, one for a big Toronto jewelry house and the other for a wholesale grocery firm got their grips changed while at a Woostock hotel the other ay. The jeweler had in his grip over five hundred dollars' worth of jewelry. He put it down next the grocer's. The latter left the hotel first and by mistake took the grip with all the valuables in it with him. Shortly after, the jeweler discovered the error which had been made, and spent a few anxious minutes until he traced up the grocery man and secured his own property.

It is the generally conceded opinion that the fall wheat crop in the Oxford district has not been injured to any appreciable extent by the very backward spring, and the cold weather which has prevailed for many weeks when all should have been sunshine. A reliable authority says that some fields of wheat are as fine as he ever saw, many others are quite up to the average, a few are below it, and a few have been plowed up, though the fields which are included in the latter class are scarce. A considerable quantity of wheat is grown in this vicinity, but in most cases it is not the staple crop. For all that, its condition every spring is the subject of a great deal of anxiety, both in the rural and urban districts. The old truism, that prosperous farmers make a prosperous city, holds particularly true here, for Woodstock does an immense trade with the farmers of the county.

Seeding is practicaly finished in the vicinity, and an exceptionally large acreage of spring crops is now waiting favorable weather to spring into life and growth and gladden the farmers' hearts. The first pineapples of the season are being shown at the local fruit stores.

STOCKKEEPING ILLUSTRATED.

This is the interior of Scroggie Bros.' store, Guelph. It is a store of neatness and hustle. The advertising done is not heavy, but the goods sold are good and the price reasonable. Mr. Groom, their head clerk, is a finished stockkeeper and the finish of his work is apparent at a glance. Both Messrs. Scroggie read and enjoy The Canadian Grocer, and, in their opinion, it is one of the best helps to sell groceries.

Grocers' Sundries

Large English manufacturing firm about to open extensive advertising operations throughout Alberta and British Columbia wish to communicate with a reliable house in Calgary and also Vancouver, having connection with retail grocers throughout each province. Box 147, Canadian Grocer, Toronto.

ORGANIZATION IN THE ATLANTIC PROVINCE

(By The Canadian Grocer's Special Correspondent.)

Halifax, N.S., May 13th.

Opinion seems to be divided in Halifax on the question of organization. While some few dealers look with favor on the proposition, the great majority are opposed to it. Those in favor of it say that the trade might benefit by being organized, as often matters could be more effectively brought to a head by the united forces. Those opposed to it seem to think organization may have a possible tendency to restrict trade, as the public have heard so much of late about combines. Those dealers prefer free trade in business, and consider that competition is better for business all round.

To have perfect organization, they say, all matters must be followed up closely and meetings held to consider the various questions that come up. Then all are not of the same opinion, and a difference of views leads to lengthy arguments, and, as a result, much valuable time is wasted, as busy men cannot spare many hours from their business.

Trade is Good.

The grocery trade in the province is in a healthy condition and the travelers are sending in good orders. Prices are firm on all lines, and collections are fully up to the average for the season of the year.

W. J. Hopgood & Son, grocers, Spring Garden Road, have temporarily removed their business to the stand formerly occupied by T. Major & Sons, on the corner of Queen street, while the firm's premises are being renovated. The store is now in the hands of the contractors, and it is the intention of Hopgood & Son to expend $4,000 in alterations. When the work is completed the shop will be one of the finest retail grocery setablishments in the city.

It is reported that Dunn & Co., Ltd., pork packers, of Toronto, have purchased a site in Sydney, and will shortly build a branch of their establishment in the Iron City of the east.

Oats Will Advance.

Advices from Charlottetown state that the prospects are bright for a sharp advance on oats after the opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence. At present, however, P. E. Islanders are above an export basis. Stocks are light and mainly in a few hands. Hay is getting scarce in the county and if the cold weather continues some of the stock intended for export will be required locally.

Potatoes, at present, are booming in price, but the arrival in Halifax of a cargo intended for the West India market, which has now petered out, and the expected arrival of 15,000 bushels from Scotland, will have considerable effect on the market. There are not many potatoes on the island, so the farmers will not suffer any from the changed conditions.

The steamer Kathinka from the West Indies landed here last week 4,570 bags of sugar, 2,000 bags for city dealers and the balance for the refinery.

To Retire from Business.

Thomas Mitchell, who for the past 25 years has conducted a large retail fruit and confectionery store on George street, will retire from business on December 31st of this year. Mr. Mitchell has conducted business in the same stand for nearly 30 years, and his ice cream parlor was unexcelled in the city. He carried high class goods only, and his trade was very extensive. Mr. Mitchell has leased his premises to William Patrick, of Montreal, who will carry on a gents' furnishing business. The shop is on George street, one of the principal thoroughfares of the city.

Produce is Scarce.

From some quarters there is a general complaint regarding the scarcity of farm produce, particularly eggs, butter, poultry, beef, and also fresh pork. Notwithstanding the immense quantities of produce imported into this province, there appears to be a shortage. The prices obtained are high, the consumer in these parts having to pay more than those of the west. While eggs are plentiful in some quarters, they are scarce in others. There is the usual shortage in butter at this season of the year. The demand is good and the high price still prevails. The consumer thinks that it is about time that some relief was afforded the butter market.

A business man on a recent visit to Sydney was somewhat surprised to learn that a grocer of that city had been obliged to buy eggs and butter at points in Quebec and Ontario. Discussing the subject he said he learned from those who professed to know, that most of the articles of food for consumption were sold in Sydney at a much higher figure than they would be if raised in the vicinity. That, he thought, was only reasonable, as the consumer in all cases paid the charges of the long freight haul. The people of Cape Breton, he thought, were neglecting their own interests if they did not inaugurate some policy for cultivating the vacant farms and improving those already under cultivation by the employment of modern methods. There was no question of a market. If agents of outside stock, vegetables, butter and egg concerns can make a handsome profit here, he did not see any difficulty in the way of local farmers.

Appointments at Government Farms.

The Nova Scotia Government announces the following appointments:—

Prof. Melville Cumming, Principal of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College, to be Secretary of Agriculture, in place of Brook W. Chipman, deceased.

Frederick L. Fuller, of Truro, to be Superintendent of Agricultural Societies.

Stanley Logan, of Amherst Point, the well known breeder of Holstein cattle and Shropshire sheep, to be Superintendent of the Agricultural College Farm at Truro.

These appointments are considered to be excellent in every respect. Mr. Cumming has already proven his sterling worth as head of the Agricultural College, and has placed that institution on a high level of popular approbation. Mr. Fuller has managed the farm for a number of years as only a practical man can. The appointment now given him will open a wider field of usefulness, and the Government is certainly fortunate in selecting such a man as Mr. Logan to manage the farm. Mr. Logan's proven ability in his own private affairs is the best recommendation that could be given him for such a position.

The Halifax Board of Trade has appointed E. A. Saunders secretary, in place of A. T. Weldon, who resigned to become general sales agent of the Port Hood Coal Co. The new secretary is a Halifax man, having been born and educated there. He has been in the employ of R. G. Dun & Co. for upwards of twenty years, and has traveled all over Nova Scotia and in Newfoundland during that time in the interests of his firm. There is hardly a business man in that territory with whom he is not acquainted, and he is one of the brightest young business men in the city.

Leon Tanguay, of Montreal, whose experience as a successful dealer and manufacturer of vinegar has extended over twenty years has started a manufactory for this product in his own name at 1208 Parthenais street, in the Delormier suburb of the Canadian metropolis. Mr. Tanguay has erected a commodious new building, 52 v 52 feet, two stories in height, with bonding warehouse and cooperage attached. It is well equipped for the manufacture of high class vinegar and has a present monthly capacity of 5,000 gallons, which it is intended shortly to increase to 12,000 gallons.

TRADE IN NEW BRUNSWICK HAS BRIGHT OUTLOOK

St. John, N.B., May 11, 1907.

The lateness of the season and the persistent unfavorable crop reports from the west have had the effect of sending the price of wheat up. The effect of this was seen when the local dealers announced a few days ago that Ontario flour had advanced ten cents all round. It is predicted that Manitoba's will also advance in a short time. The outlook is for higher prices on all grades of flour.

Sugar has shown another advance this week. This is the third time this year that the price has been increased, an advance of ten cents per cwt. taking place respectively February 27, April 11 and May 6, and apparently the end is not yet, as New York refiners have again advanced their price and a corresponding advance is looked for in this market.

In looking over the prices on nearly all goods this year and comparing them with the ruling figures last year at this time, an advance is noted in almost every case. In the provision market, pork, beef and lard are all firmer. Flours, sugars, molasses, canned goods, and in fact everything in the grocery line, is higher than last year.

Outlook Bright.

The merchants here view the outlook for 1907 trade as exceptionally bright. Almost without exception the reports are to the effect that business is ahead of last year and a very hopeful tone pervades among the dealers.

The lateness of the season has made the seed trade very backward. The retailers report, however, that sales in some of the earlier varieties are being made.

A large shipment of Bermuda onions arrived this week and they are being sold at $1.50 per 50-lb. crate.

Evaporated apples and in fact all dried fruits are meeting with a steady demand. The fresh fish market is not any too well supplied and it is hard for local dealers to get enough to fill local orders. The harbor fishing up to the present has been considerably behind previous years. The gaspereaux catch is not nearly up to the mark. In the produce market butter and eggs are reported plentiful, with a trifle easier figures.

No Fair This Year.

Although it was announced that St. John would have an exhibition this year and over $3,000 was raised by subscriptions in lieu of a Government grant, it was decided at a meeting of the exhibition association and the subscribers to the fund, on Wednesday last, that as favorable dates could not be arranged without conflicting with fairs in other cities, that the project would have to be abandoned. It is now proposed that an Old Home week, or a combined industrial fair and horse show be held, and a meeting of the citizens will be called next week to consider what will be done.

Since the opening of navigation on the St. John River, the steamers have been kept busy bringing down supplies of produce and the north merchants report business brisk in the sales of provisions made. The high freshet this year threatened for a time to flood out some of the Indian-town merchants, but the water has been steadily going down the past few days and it is now believed the highest point has been touched.

Winter Port Season.

A statement of the business done here during the winter season by various steamship lines has been prepared. The season closed with the sailing of the steamer Montreal, of the C.P.R. line, on Wednesday last. There were in all 144 sailings of steamers, 117 of these were to the United Kiogdom, 11 to Jamaica, and 16 to the West Indies. These steamers took away cargoes to the value of $20,120,430, divided as follows: Canadian goods, $13,534,786; foreign goods, $6,585,644. This is about three millions less than last season, the shortage being due to the congestion of freight in the west, by which St. John suffered in common with other ports. Included in the cargoes of these steamers was 61,000,000 feet of lumber, between four and five million bushels of grain, 30,553 head of cattle, 59 horses, and 1,371 sheep, the balance being made up of various products.

Peter Dixon, one of the leading grocery merchants of Grand Manan, has been seriously ill for the past two weeks.

At the inaugural meeting of the new common council on Tuesday last, Alderman J. W. Vanwart was again chosen unanimously as the chairman of the board of public safety. It was a fitting recognition of his efficient work in the department during the past year.

CROPS IN NIAGARA DISTRICT.

Fruit Prospects are Pretty Good — Wheat in Bad Shape.

The St. Catharine's correspondent of The Canadian Grocer writes:

Speaking to the fruit growers of this district I find that the heavy fall of snow on Friday, and the frost that followed did not injure the buds on the fruit trees, as was expected. The apple tree blossoms, of which there is an abundance in sight, are so closely shut that the cold has done no injury. There is every prospect of full crops of plums, cherries and pears. These, too, are close in the buds so that they have not been affected by the snow and cold snap. The peach buds promise as good a crop as usual and the buds are very backward in opening out. As for small fruits, such as raspberries, currants, gooseberries: these are still backward in bloom, but each promises a good crop. Apricots, of which there is a considerable quantity cultivated in this section, the buds being very tender, have suffered somewhat from the frost, but there will be a fair crop if there be no more heavy frosts. The early strawberry product will be curtailed, as they were out in blossom and got nipped with the frost. The late varieties were not injured. A large number of tomato plants that had been moved from the hot to the cold beds were destroyed, no precautions having been taken by some farmers and some gardeners to have them covered for protection, whilst those that were cared for have escaped injury. The buds on the grapevines are very backward in sprouting so that no injury has occurred to them thus far. The farming operations are very backward this spring. Not more than one half of the seeding is done and what grain has been sown is not progressing as should be. Some of it has but shown itself above ground and other seeds lay dormant. Fifty years ago (1857) there was frost every month but August. Vegetation was killed. Potatoes, corn and other vegetables had two, three and four plantings, which were all killed by the frosts. Wheat was killed, but what little grew never came to maturity as a pest called the weavil cut down the stalks. Hay that spring (1857) was sold at sixty dollars per ton, the article being very scarce. Hay on Saturday last was sold at eighteen dollars per ton.

The prospect for the wheat crop is an entire failure. Most of it was winter killed and farmers have ploughed up and are putting in other kinds of grain. The clover fields present a fine appearance, with every prospect of a large yield of clover hay. Other meadows are progressing favorably, with bright prospects of good yields of timothy and blue grass hay.

Remember that "out of stock" soon means loss of customers.

A mighty good advertisement for a store: a smiling clerk.

It is easier to do good work than poor, if you once learn how.

ORGANIZATION.

Organization of the retail grocery trade on national lines must be a development of slow growth. There is but one way to it, the persistent plodding of those who can appreciate the value of organization.

The principal obstacle in the way is the apathy of the average man, begotten of a selfish inability to be really interested in anything beyond his own family and of the ignorance which prevents the wider view of business. You cannot expect the man who has no pride in the grocery trade, no interest in it beyond his own store, to have much interest in a movement for the general betterment. But there are two kinds of men, the man of mean and narrow parts by nature and the man lacking mental initiative or opportunity, or both, has never been roused to the larger perspective. The latter man is the much more numerous and is the man the organization missionary must go after. He needs the gospel of progress preached to him. There is hope for him.

Another difficulty is a prevalent misconception of the purposes of organization, the nature of the results to be attained. This view makes the object of organization co-operative price making, limiting of competition, agreements in restraint of trade, perhaps co-operative buying and what might be termed class legislation. This disability also attaches to two classes of men, those who favor organization and those who oppose it.

The latter are probably the least injurious to the cause. If they are honest they can be shown that they are wrong, and, seized of the wider view, they must become friends of organization, of betterment. The other class are akin to the selfish stay-at-home. He is looking only to his personal profit.

If organization is to be accomplished, it must be advocated on the larger plan. Probably the greatest benefit organization can bring to the grocery trade is the social intercourse it creates. Over and over again this has been illustrated locally. There has been price cutting, backbiting and bad feeling. Somehow the grocers have been got together and the way the sulphur fumes got out of the atmosphere was a wonder. Social intercourse enables men to learn and appreciate each other's good qualities; it engenders mutual respect; it gives men a wider, less self-centred outlook upon life; it creates a pride in their business as a special branch of trade; it smooths the way to concessions and arrangements for mutual advantage; it makes life worth living. In a national organization the man in Halifax could exchange views with the man in Victoria, and the man in Winnipeg, and, just as important, the man in Victoria could confer with the man in Vancouver and Nelson and New Westminster; the man in Edmonton with the man in Calgary, the man in Montreal with the man in Quebec, the man in Hamilton with the man in Brantford, the man in St. John with the man in Fredericton.

Out of this intercourse, led by the brightest minds in the grocery world, will come better trade conditions, more satisfactory relations with wholesalers and manufacturers. The trade will have more respect for itself and in just about the same ratio it will be more respected by the public. The retailer, standing next to the consumer, should exert a powerful influence upon foodstuff legislation. He should be able to guarantee his customers pure goods. The retailer of groceries is by far the most numerous class in the whole realm of retailing; he is directly concerned in almost every issue touching the business interests of the country. His interest can exert its proper influence only by organization.

KNOWLEDGE v. SPECULATION.

An ounce of fact is worth a pound of fiction, and in the opposite proportion about as difficult to obtain. For every statement on market conditions which may be regarded as thoroughly reliable, there are a score of theories and rumors, the very source of which is matter for speculation.

The Toronto fruit market has recently furnished a striking example of the extent to which such rumors, wild, improbable and utterly groundless, as most of them are, are absorbed by the members of that large and inglorious order whose ranks are popularly supposed to be augmented at the rate of one per minute.

The fruit market is a sensitive machine, delicately adjusted, running smoothly and with systematic precision when intelligently handled, but instantly susceptible to the slightest breath of rumor. Not infrequently it is temporarily thrown completely out of gear by some idle remark let fall during the course of a casual conversation.

The contradictory, conflicting and utterly irreconcileable reports, statements, theories, estimates and speculations which of late have been freely circulating among the local commission men on the probable yield of the North Carolina strawberry crop is direct evidence of the avidity with which anything bearing the smallest resemblance to news is seized upon and swallowed without chewing, and of the general lack of intelligent perception, independent judgment and individual investigation which characterizes too large a number of the jobbers and commission merchants.

The trouble is that everyone is altogether too ready to accept as gospel any absurdity advanced, rather than rely upon what their own good sense shows them to be the case. One could hear a fresh lie on the strawberry situation simply by stepping across the street, yet the whole story of immense destruction of the crops may be traced to the slight damage caused by the frost among the earlier varieties, such as the "Lady Thompson." These first arrivals are the only ones which have in any way suffered from the cold, and it is safe to say that the reports of drouths, of "a severity unprecedented in the history of the country," and of heavy rains "which have reduced the berries to a mass of unsalable pulp," as one paper elegantly phrased it, have been criminally exaggerated and deserve a punishment far worse than they are likely to receive.

Present conditions in North Carolina point to a crop well up to the average in quantity and quality, but the demand at home is very heavy, and it is doubtful whether any large percentage will ever reach eastern points. The demand, in fact, is such that the dealers are practically cutting their own throats by sending up the price to a height far beyond what the stock will carry. One car shipped out from the Chadburn district averaged over $5.50 per case, owing to the extraordinary keenness of the bidding. At least $800 was lost on the consignment at the other end.

There is one dealer in North Carolina who expects to clean up $20,000 to $24,000 on 8,000 crates of berries picked off 40 acres of beds. And there are others who, if they do not surpass this, will not be far behind.

The man who possesses balance as well as brains—and the two are by no means indissoluble—will permit himself to be influenced only by what he knows and accept with conservatism, seasoned with salt, the greater proportion of what he hears.

CANADA'S DEVELOPMENT.

In the article on another page on the railway development of the west, no account is taken of railway building east of Winnipeg. The Grand Trunk Pacific is under contract to the Atlantic seaboard. The Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific are both building from Toronto to Sudbury, or thereabouts. The C.P.R. is completing an air line as a grain outlet from Victoria Harbor to Peterboro. The Canadian Northern has its surveys made for a line from Toronto to Ottawa, to connect up its western lines to tide water on the Atlantic. The C.P.R. has surveys made for a short line from Toronto to Montreal. The Ontario Government Railway from North Bay 140 miles through the great mining and agricultural lands of the newly discovered northland is projecting an extension to Hudson Bay. The Canadian Northern, in the persons of Mackenzie & Mann, is building extensively in the Maritime Provinces. It is safe to say that taking Eastern Canada as a whole and including the short lines too numerous to mention, the railway extension, in the aggregate of miles, is as great as in the booming west.

FRAUD ON A BIG FIELD.

Intercontinental fraud is working the game on a considerably large field. Better, perhaps, it suggests how distance has been left out of the count by modern invention and commercial organization. A firm in Argentine with a confederate in Spain, sends an order to a manufacturing firm in Canada, accompanying the order with a 90-day draft on Madrid. The firm receiving the order puts the draft through for collection, is in due course advised of its acceptance, and then rushes the order. By the time the goods have reached their destination, the Madrid firm will have closed their bank account, and gone elsewhere. In one or two small cases the game may go through on the square to inspire confidence. This is being done and suggests the necessity for taking care.

Never buy what you don't want because it is cheap.

Never mind about the "other fellow." Sell at a profit.

Never lose sight of the cost of doing business. You will then probably always get a profit.

Markets and Market Notes

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Fish—Revised.
Sugar—Advanced.
Canned Fruit—Very scarce.
California Raisins—New prices.
Beans—Stronger.

Montreal, May 16, 1907.

Spring business is in full swing and to the present has been satisfactory to most in the trade. There has been a very steady demand for all grocery lines from retailers in every part of the country. Shipments are now being made by boat and rail every day. A strike in the harbor is affecting deliveries somewhat in Montreal, while the congested state of the railways is also responsible for delay in shipments to a certain extent. On the whole the feeling in the trade is a healthy one.

Canned fruits are very scarce and very much in demand. Gallon apples are selling quite freely. Sugar continues strong and there is talk of a further advance in prices. There have been no developments in the Japan tea market since last report. A steady business is being done in teas locally. Molasses is selling fairly well. New prices for 1907 crop California seeded raisins have been made public by some houses and are causing considerable discussion. They average 2c. higher than last year's opening figures. Tarragona almonds are higher. Coffees are moving out satisfactorily, but spices are slow. Beans are firmer. Maple goods are weaker.

SUGAR—A fair amount of sugar is selling at figures quoted. Some jobbers report increased demand for raw sugars. The market for refined has advanced 10 cents.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — Prices for the coming season's crop of raisins, California, have been issued by some houses. They are in the neighborhood of 2c. to 2½c. higher than last year, for delivery October-November, with a premium for delivery first half of October. These figures are given out early, but there is no telling what the crop will be like. By some, labor troubles are feared, and, besides, there are other contingencies which may arise to upset the calculations of those who have made the present prices. Prune figures have not yet been given out, but are expected any day. There is the usual talk of the probable shortage in the prune crop, but what this may or may not amount to only time will show. The feeling is that Valencia and Malaga raisins will sell freely this year, with California raisins so high. Stocks of raisins held locally are very light. Currants are unchanged. There is nothing new in nuts except in Tarragonas, which are higher by half a cent.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Canned goods are selling freely, but trade continues to be handicapped by the marked scarcity of nearly every kind of fruit. There is strong demand for all varieties, but jobbers have not the stocks to meet the requirements of the trade. Gallon apples are reported in excellent demand at figures quoted.

TORONTO.—There is undoubtedly an improved tone to the canned goods market. The reason for it is not apparent, except it be the backward season with the delayed appearance of green stuff and consequent continued heavy consumption of canned vegetables.

A gentleman in the trade of a statistical turn of mind estimates that the million families in Canada will account for the minimum consumption of one can each of tomatoes per week, approximately 40,000 cases. The total pack in Canada will, it is said, scarcely exceed a million cases. If this gentleman's figures are nearly right, there will be no considerable surplus at the end of the year. There is a continued heavy demand for all canned fruits. Prices for vegetables are unchanged. The three staples are selling at opening prices for the season.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:

Sugar—Advanced 10c. and very strong.

Canned goods—Better feeling.

Sultana raisins—Outlook bad for crop.

Butter—Easier.

Eggs—Firmer.

Toronto, May 16, 1907.

Business here continues to improve and on all hands a very satisfactory jobbing trade is reported. The very strong sugar market has caused heavy retail buying. Canned goods are said to be going into consumption very satisfactorily and a better feeling has been created. Reliable reports of the sultana raisin crop point to an even worse condition of affairs than last year. California reports indicate a prune crop of about half last year and practically no apricots. Bean men say there is a firmer feeling in that staple, borrowed from the wheat boom. There is still a good deal of delay in securing shipment of goods from here and retailers in some sections are complaining bitterly. Collections are reported satisfactory.

TEA — The market continues very firm. This is especially noticeable in regard to common teas, which are very scarce. McMeekin & Co.'s review of the London market for April says: "During the month a gradual tendency asserted itself towards making one level of prices for all except fine descriptions. Common kinds up to about 7¾d. per lb. showed a steady rise in price, but medium teas were marked by some decline. The demand continued up to the close for teas of the fine and finest kinds, largely owing to the shrinkage in supply. The quality generally showed some falling off. The average of public sale prices for the month was 8½d. per lb., against 7d. per lb. for the corresponding month of last year." The total stock of teas in London is 105,000,000 pounds, against nearly 124,000,000 pounds a year ago. There is a good buying of teas here locally.

COFFEE — The market is quiet. Prices are about unchanged.

SUGAR — Refined advanced 10c. on this market Wednesday morning and the feeling is very bullish. There has been heavy buying of the staple by the retail trade. The opinion prevails here that sugar will go higher.

Beat has taken the lead in the raw market and is now the determining factor. Willett & Grey, New York, reviewing the situation at the close of last week, said:

"During the week under review Europe has led the advance, which has been more notable than any rise of recent months. Beet sugar rose from 9s. 6d. to 10s. 0⅜d. (parity of 4.12c. for centrifugals), and cane sugar rose 6d. also, with a very strong market at the close.

"Prominent sugar experts in London have recently said that the action of the beet sugar market at the time of lowest quotations, 8s. 7½d., remaining firm and refusing to decline further, although Cuba quotations were forced 40c. per 100 lbs. lower than the beet parity, is a good evidence that the trend of values of sugar have completely changed.

"When beet sugar was at its lowest it stayed there without support or manipulation to put it on the lower basis of Cuba sugar. These experts maintain that the market evidence given is the strongest sort of evidence that such low prices will not be seen again for several years to come. We are inclined to agree with this opinion and to look for extremely prosperous conditions for the whole sugar trade from steadily increasing values from the present basis. Europe takes the lead and is now on a parity of 4.12c. for centrifugal sugar 96 test against present spot value of 3.83 per lb.

"The highest level reached last year for centrifugal sugar in our market was 4⅛c. nett. (Sept. 30, 1906) or the present parity of beet sugar, but this season promises to exceed this level with centrifugals. The Cuba weather crop situation does not improve at all and the closing of the present crop season before the appearance of the rainy season is quite suggestive of poorer crop conditions for the next campaign.

"Such remarkable weather conditions as have recently prevailed in Cuba and the United States and Europe are detrimental to all crop interests.

"Cuba centrals working are reduced to 45, against 82 last week and 174 last year.

"A longshoremen's strike, and also a sugar factory strike of uneducated and unskilled laborers, will curtail meltings the coming week.

"Sales at the close comprise centrifugals nearby at equal to 3.83c. landed, 96 deg. test, and for late May shipment at 2⅛c. c. & f., 95 deg. test, equal to 3.89c. landed for 96 deg. test. Holders are now asking 4c. for Porto Rico centrifugals and equal to 3.93c. to 3.99c. landed for Cubas, May-June shipment, basis 96 deg. test.

"A very considerable business, believed to amount to about 75,000 tons, has been put through within a fortnight or so in Java crop sugars for June-July shipment at 10s. 1½d., 10s. 3d., 10s. 4½d. and up to 10s. 6d., equal to 3.94c. to 4.02c. per lb., duty paid, 96 deg. test. The Java holders, by maintaining a firm position throughout the depressed period, are now able to make sales on their own terms, the requirements for consumption late in the year showing necessity of importations of full duty-paying cane or beet sugars to a larger extent than anticipated."

This week's beet continues to advance and at Tuesday's close was reported 10s. 1½d., a further rise of a penny and one farthing.

The world's statistical position is as follows:

Total stock of Europe and America, 3,452,775 tons, against 3,747,567 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The decrease of stock is 294,792 tons, against a decrease of 261,788 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,557,775 tons, against 3,867,567 tons last year, or a decrease of 309,792 tons.

DRIED FRUITS — The trade is now beginning to canvass the prospects for the season's crops and the initial indications are not encouraging.

The most interesting news is in regard to sultana raisins. P. L. Mason & Co. have received from their correspondents in Smyrna, C. Whittall & Co., several letters. One, of April 15 date, says the country has been under snow for longer than is recorded in 25 years and there has been a very heavy rainfall, 30 inches, against a normal of rarely 22. "Still," continues the writer, "should the weather conditions improve we hope for a harvest of average production, say 40,000 tons, against last year's 25,000 tons." Stocks in all consuming markets are low, and low opening prices are looked for.

On the 17th they wrote giving some statements from the Inspector of Agriculture after a careful survey of the province. His report was much more alarming and indicated that both peronosporo and anthracnosis were in evidence and make ravages to a vast extent unless the farmers treated the vines with sulphate of copper and lime. "But if rains continue," said the inspector, "it may be feared that in spite of these precautions farmers will not succeed in gathering above one-half of last year's small gathering." C. Whittall & Co. say: "The outlook is undoubtedly very serious for the country."

On April 27th they wrote: "Weather has somewhat improved but reports from all parts of the country are dismal reading."

Reports from California indicate a prune crop of 75 to 90 million pounds, against 180 millions last year. Of apricots there are none. Local quotations are unchanged.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 12 a.m. Thursday, May 16, 1907.)

Unsettled weather and the backward spring have had a bad effect on business and the increase in volume of trade has not been so large as would otherwise have been the case. Business is, however, quite active and country collections are showing some improvement. Except for an advance in sugar there is little change in market conditions.

CANNED GOODS — There is a normal movement at steady prices. We quote:

WINNIPEG.

BUTTER — Creamery butter is still very scarce owing to the backwardness of the season. Few of the creameries have commenced operations for the summer and supplies will be short for some time to come. The price to the retail trade for fancy creamery is about 32 cents per pound. Dairy butter is in better supply and produce houses are paying from 16 cents to 20 cents per pound for it.

EGGS — Produce houses are paying about 16 cents per dozen.

PORK PRODUCTS IN THE WEST.

Pork packers of eastern Canada say the west perfers Canadian to American pork products and is willing to pay one cent a pound more for the Ontario and Quebec goods. Freight rates, however, are so high, east to west, that generally the Chicago packer can pay the duty and still undersell the Canadian more than a cent. Just what this means is shown by the importations of American products. For the eleven months ending Feb. 28, during the past three years :—

	1905	1906	1907
Butter, cheese, eggs and lard	$241,454	$601,292	$807,275
Bacon and hams	399,691	591,027	852,779
Pork in brine	253,596	643,029	737,553
Other meats	339,739	442,429	545,120
Total	1,234,480	2,277,777	2,942,728

The pork products here represented are equal to about a fifth of Canada's exports. We talk and practise protection, but could not our subsidized railways devise means for preserving this western market for the Canadian packers. It is a matter of freight rates.

NEED OF DAIRY INDUSTRY.

In the attitude of the Ontario Government towards dairying, as expressed by the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, C. C. James, before the western dairymen's convention at London earlier in the year, there is good ground for the hope that the dairy industry will continue in its career of wonderful progress. "Better milk" is now the motto of the Government's endeavor.

Some people may say in their haste that that's where the Government should have started twenty or twenty-five years ago. It could not be. Education must be from the top down; the university precedes the public school. It has always been so. The agricultural college first. Then the expert cheese and butter makers. Then the inspectors to see that the methods and environment of the industry were right. Now comes the more difficult problem of improving the milk supply. This is largely a matter of cleanliness, and it is an attainment that must result if the Dominion is to maintain per pre-eminence as a producer of cheese.

How important this industry is to Canada is seen by the fact that the exports of the product of the dairy during the eleven months ending February, the exports of cheese and butter amounted to $30,294,829; cheese, $25,628,875; butter, $4,665,954, and were exceeded by only one other commodity, and that wheat, the exports of which, as grain and flour, amounted to $34,700,334; grain, $29,625,683; flour, $5,074,651. Indeed, including the exports of bacon, which might almost be regarded as a by-product of the dairy, the exports far exceeded those of wheat. The eye of everyone interested in the dairy and its progress as a Canadian industry should keep clearly before him this aim, "Better milk."

Welcome the coming customer, but do not speed the buyer who is departing. Give him plenty of time and show just as much attention as you did when he came in.

Book-Keeping Leaks.

It's only once in a long time that you can find a clerk who is a good salesman and a methodical accountant too. If his mind is on selling goods, he is careless with his accounts; if he is long on method he is shy on salesmanship—they don't mix. In either case you get the worst of it. And the same fact is true if you are your own clerk.

THE BEST POLICY

The Grocer who believes in a live business stocks only high-grade provisions, because Quality, and Quality alone, can gain and retain the paying trade. Most Grocers find that it's the best policy to push the Ryan Brand of because particular women insist on the Ryan Brand, and will have none other. They look for our label. It stands for the best there is in provisions, and they know it.

It pays most Grocers to push the Ryan lines, and it will pay you.

CHEESE AND BUTTER STANDARDS

With the Appointment of an Official Referee Government Have Issued Again the Standards Fixed Two Years Ago.

The dairy commissioner's branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture in connection with the appointment at Montreal of an official referee for cheese and butter has re-issued the standards for cheese and butter formulated by the department at the opening of the 1905 season. The new referee cannot act without the instruction of both buyer and seller. The application for his services will naturally come from the buyer at the port of shipment. Necessarily some time will be required to secure the consent of the seller up the country for an appeal to the referee. This might mean an accentuation of the defects of the product in question and provision is made that any cheese or butter maker may give the referee a standing order to act for him when any buyer makes application. Such an order may be cancelled at will.

The standards are as follows :

Standards for Grading Cheese.

First Grade—Flavor, clean, sound and pure ; body and texture, close, firm and silky ; color, good and uniform ; finish, fairly even in size, smoothly finished, sound and clean surfaces, straight and square ; boxes, strong, clean, well made and nailed. Ends to be of seasoned timber. Close fitting. Weights stencilled or marked with rubber stamp.

Second Grade—"Fruity," not clean, "turnipy," or other objectionable flavor; body and texture, weak, open, loose, "acidy," too soft, too dry ; color, uneven, mottled, or objectionable shade ; finish, very uneven in size, showing rough corners, black mould, dirty or cracked surfaces ; soft rinds ; boxes, too large in diameter ; top edge of box more than ¼ an inch below the top of the cheese. Made of light material. Ends made of improperly seasoned material.

Third Grade—Flavor, rancid, badly "off," anything inferior to second grade; body and texture, very weak, very open, showing pinholes or porus, very "acidy" very soft or very dry ; color, badly mottled, or very objectionable shade ; finish, anything worse than second grade ; boxes, no question of boxes sufficient to maked third grade if other qualities are good.

Explanations.

The definition for first grade cheese is practically the same as what was adopted several years ago for "Finest" quality, except under the head of "Boxes," wherein there are some new and very necessary requirements.

The standard for first grade does not imply perfection. For instance, a "clean, sound and pure" flavor means only an absence of bad flavor. A strictly fancy cheese must not only possess this negative quality, but must have a positive quality in a typical cheese flavor, which many first grade cheese never have.

It would be impossible to define exactly the qualities or defects wh'ch may appear in cheese. The standards given are intended to indicate the range of quality for the different grades rather than to establish hard and fast rules to guide the grader.

The expression "good color" means that the color must be of a proper shade. There are cheap, inferior cheese colors used which do not give the proper shade no matter what quantity is used.

The expression "clean surfaces" in the definition for first grade does not exclude from that grade cheese with a slight growth of blue mould, although it is desirable that the cheese should not show any signs of mould. "Black mould," (see definition for second grade), is simply the advanced stage of ordinary blue mould.

The following scale of points will indicate the relative values of the different divisions of quality : Flavor, 40 ; body and texture, 30 ; color, 15 ; finish and boxing, 15 ; total, 100.

It is obvious that a defect in flavor of a certain degree counts nearly three times as much in determining the grade as a defect in finish or boxing of the same degree.

Cheese which are strictly sour, or otherwise inferior to third grade, will be designated as "culls," for which there is no classification.

Any lot of cheese shall be considered third grade if it shows three or more defects of second grade class.

If there are not more than 15 per cent. of defective cheese in any lot, the inferior ones may be sorted out and classed separately. If more than 15 per cent. are defective, the classification for the defective cheese may apply to the whole lot.

This does not apply when inferior cheese have been properly marked so as to be identified, in which case the inferior cheese shall be treated as a separate lot.

Standards for Grading Creamery Butter

First Grade—Flavor, sound, sweet and clean ; body and grain, waxy, not too much moisture ; color even, no streaks or mottles, not too high ; salting, not too heavy if salt butter, salt all dissolved ; finish, good quality parchment paper lining, neatly arranged. Package well filled, bright, even surface ; packages, well made, of good material, and clean. Boxes to be of right size to hold 56 lbs. of butter when properly filled. Parafined on inside. Neatly branded. Tubs to be lined with parchment paper of good quality.

Second Grade—Flavor, not quite clean, or other objectionable flavor ; body and grain, salvy, overworked, too much moisture ; color, slightly mottled or streaky, too high, or objectionable shade ; salting, too heavy, salt undissolved, or unevenly distributed ; finish, very light or poor quality parchment paper lining, lining not arranged to protect butter, mould on parchment paper, rough, uneven surface, package not properly filled ; packages, rough, badly made, or of poor or unseasoned material, including sapwood, dirty packages, uneven weights.

Third Grade—Flavor, very stale, very strong stable flavor, or anything inferior to second grade ; body and grain, very salvy, "mushy," mould in butter ; color, very mottled or otherwise inferior to second grade in regard to color ; salting, no question of salt alone sufficient to make third grade if other qualities are up to first grade ; finish, no parchment lining, very rough finish, dirty surface ; packages, inferior to second grade.

Explanations.

It is difficult to explain exactly the qualities or defects which may appear in butter. The standards which have been adopted are intended to indicate the range of quality for the different grades, rather than to establish hard and fast rules for the guidance of the grader.

"Fresh," or saltless butter will be judged on the same standards as for salted butter, by leaving the matter of salting out of the consideration.

A package is not considered well filled if the butter is more than half an inch below the top of the package.

It is very important that all boxes should hold only 56 lbs. No other weight should be marked thereon. Tubs should be of uniform size and weight.

The following scale of points will indicate the relative values of the different divisions of quality: Flavor, 40; body or grain, 25; color, 10; salting 10; finish and packing, 15; total, 100. It is obvious that a defect in flavor of a certain degree counts nearly three times as much in determining the grade as a defect in finish or packing of the same degree; and so on.

The expression "too much moisture" applies to all butter which contains over the legal limit of 16 per cent. of water, or to any butter that according to the custom of the trade would be described as containing too much water. (From many tests made finest Canadian butter does not contain, or should not contain, on the average, over 13 per cent. of water). The official referee will not be expected to determine the actual percentage of water.

"Too heavy salt" means more salt than is generally demanded by the trade for salted butter.

"Too high color" means over-worked, or too much coloring material used. "Objectionable shades" or "unnatural colors are those which result from the use of inferior or unsuitable coloring material.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

There is a continued firm feeling in cheese, which is higher this week than it was at the last time of writing. Prices keep up surprisingly. The make this season is rather less than for the same period last year, but it is nevertheless something unexpected, the present high level of prices being maintained so steadily.

While the make of cheese is increasing receipts locally are not as large as dealers would have them. The railways are very much congested and it is difficult to obtain deliveries. Dealers are able to obtain a fair amount of cheese, if they pay the price for it, but find it no easy task to have it shipped within reasonable time. Trade is handicapped for this reason. The boats are all running and could take cargoes every trip if the cheese was ready to hand.

There is not a great deal of interest taken in the situation by Old Country importers as yet, since prices are too high to warrant any considerable trade. They are waiting for lower figures before getting into the market.

Quite a few cheese men are complaining of the shipping of cheese from factories while it is too green. At a recent meeting of the dairymen of Quebec province it developed that on more than one occasion Government inspectors had entered factories for inspection purposes only to find that there was not a box of cheese in the place. The whole make had been shipped just as soon as it was turned out. Inspectors declare that their work is very much hampered because of this haste in making shipments. They say that the factorymen will lose through their hastiness in more ways than one. If the cheese is shipped before ten days have elapsed after the making it is accounted too green. The cheese is subject to loss of weight, the quality is likely to deteriorate, and the appearance suffers. As a result the cheese gets a bad reputation and the whole Dominion is likely to suffer for the misdeeds of the factorymen in one district. The inspectors urged strongly the adoption of some measure which would warrant all cheese being properly cured before shipment.

Butter is lower again this week. Trading is almost entirely local, quotations being much too high to interest buyers on the other side. Receipts are not very large as yet and are less than they would be if transportation conditions were better. A few lots have arrived by the local boats but these shipments have been quickly disposed of. There is not much coming in by freight, most of the butter arriving by rail being expressed.

Even lower prices than now rule are expected within a few days.

For both butter and cheese, dealers report local demand very brisk.. Board of Trade figures show receipts of butter up to May 11 to be 3,334 packages, against 8,456 packages for the same period last year. Of cheese, 19,867 boxes were received against 24,720 boxes in 1906.

THE PROVISION SITUATION

The Old Country markets advanced unexpectedly last week and buying of live hogs in Canada is again on the rampage. Prices for live hogs are irregular but will average about $6.40 f.o.b.; $6.55 fed and watered; $6.80 to $7 off cars at the factory. Some of the packers sent instructions to their drovers to buy at last week's prices, but they soon found things were different.

The change which has come over the market in the Old Country shows the Canadian packer statistically a profit of a couple of shillings. Curiously enough the packers themselves immediately set about wiping it out by advancing the price of the raw product.

The English market has for months been in a very bad way, viewed from the Canadian standpoint. One result has been that Canadian packers have curtailed their exports and have been putting a good share of their meats into Canadian cuts. The unexpected advance in England, showing a profit on export product, caught the Canadian packer with very short stocks of meat for export. Hence the scramble to get hogs.

The advance in England, though unexpected, is one of those movements easily accounted for after the fact. Warm weather brought on the opening of the summer demand for bacon. Canadian stocks had got so low that prices rose to a parity with Danish. Then the London agent of one of the largest Canadian packers decided he could advance the price, did so, and carried Danish up with him. For weeks the increased deliveries have been the depressing factor in the market, but when the Canadian seller put up a firm front the English buyers, on a little consideration, realized that the decreased supplies of Canadian and American were not nearly made up by the increase of Danish and that while prices were lower stocks were considerably less than a year ago. From this it would appear that there is good reason to expect the advance will hold for a time at any rate.

An idea of the decreased American shipments may be gathered from the fact that the week before last, shipments of hog products from Chicago included 268,000 pieces of hams, 71,000 pieces of shoulders, and 146,000 pieces of sides and bellies, while for the corresponding week last year the shipments were 305,000 pieces of hams, 172,000 pieces of shoulders, and 336,000 pieces of sides and bellies. From Nov. 1, 1906, to May exports of hog products from the United States decreased 3,976,800 lbs. The totals were, for the period ending May 1, 1907, 19,091,400 lbs. For the same period a year previous, 23,068,200 lbs.

The Canadian market for pork products is steady and demand increasing. Any tendency to shave prices, due to accumulated stocks following the diversion of export to Canadian cuts has been checked by the advance of the market in England.

BUTTER—The situation is hourly advancing to what would be considered normal for the season of the year. As there is no export demand, and the present make cannot be stored, consumption is the only outlet. While that is heavy, receipts are increasing and prices are going lower. Both creamery and dairy are coming more freely, but the increase is rather more marked in dairy. Buyers are taking responsibility very gingerly and a considerable reduction is looked for by the end of the week.

	Per lb.

Dairy prints, choice	0 22	0 23
" " ordinary		0 20
" rolls, large choice	0 19	0 21
Baker's butter		0 18

CHEESE—Old cheese remains at former quotations and there is no pressure to sell on the part of the few holders. New cheese is quoted, and in view of the make being comparatively small as yet, prices are high.

EGGS—An enquiry as to whether or not the production of eggs in Ontario is increased over what it was last year shows a good deal of difference of opinion in the trade. The prevailing view seems to be that there is no noticeable increase, but one of the larger dealers leaned to the view that taking the country over there is an increase. Certainly consumption is increased. This is especially true of northern Ontario and Toronto, due probably to the high price of meats. As to whether or not more eggs are being stored this year than last there is a difference of opinion also. One of the largest buyers says, "Yes, more eggs are going into storage," Another says, "No. Prices are too high." While prices remain about the same as last week, there is a pretty firm feeling. As soon as warm weather sets in prices in the country will have to go slower to allow for shrinkage; but the view is expressed that jobbers will not sell at lower prices this season.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

Three Confectionery Seasons in the Year—Comparative Profits—Why Grocers Should Have a Confectionery Department—Grocer's Confectionery Window.

There are three recognized seasons for confectionery—the Easter season, the tourist season and the Christmas season. The grocer who aspires to a high-class trade should avoid stocking his confectionery department indiscriminately and without regard to the time of year. Of the three, the tourist season probably offers least opportunity for featuring profitable specialties, but the volume of business done between June and September is, or should be if the confectionery department is rightly handled, as large as any other three months in the year.

There's more money in confectionery than there is in groceries. The grocer who doesn't handle it is unfair to himself, and to his family, if he has one. A grocery business that can show an average of 10 per cent. profit on all lines is doing well. Confectionery will pay 12 per cent. to 15 per cent., and never turn a hair. You can't afford to throw away money. If you've built up any kind of a business, you're too shrewd to pass up a good thing without investigating it. Our advice to you, first, last, and all the time, is: not "Buy confectionery and sell it," but "Buy confectionery and let it sell itself."

The confectionery business in Canada is growing. This is proved by the fact that last year every factory in the Dominion was working top speed and overtime and couldn't begin to keep up on orders. What does this mean to you? It means that the grocers who are wide enough awake are getting their share of this great business. Are you one of them? It means that grocers throughout the country are realizing more and more fully the profit that lies in confectionery, its untold possibilities as a trade-bringer, its value as an attractive asset to the store, in a word—the vital necessity for handling it in connection with their regular business, if they wish to be progressive, up-to-date, and to get everything that's coming to them.

Candy needs a certain amount of care in handling. It must not be exposed to the sun—chocolates especially are sensitive sweets. Like butter, they are quick to absorb any foul odor round them, and occasionally exhibit a tendency to sweat. A thin, white coating forms over the chocolate, and though it does no actual harm, it prejudices people against buying. The reason for this white coating is undue exposure to heat. It is caused by the oil in the chocolate exuding and hardening in the air.

Grocers should specialize in their confectionery whenever it is possible to do so. At Christmas and Easter the regular lines should temporarily be laid aside and attention centred on the display of novelties suitable for the season. Easter eggs of all sorts and descriptions command a ready sale some weeks before the actual festival, and Christmas offers an illimitable field in the way of fancy boxes, animal and other shapes, and the hundred and one special lines that every candy-maker turns out at that time. Only remember: It doesn't pay to handle cheap stuff.

A GROCER'S CONFECTIONERY WINDOW.

This window was awarded third prize in The Canadian Grocer's February-March competition. It was dressed by L. G. Hagmeier, Hespeler, who is a grocer that has found the value of specializing. He says of it:—

"The stand is made of common soap boxes; this is first covered with manila paper, then covered with Turkey red, and last of all with a light purple gauze, thus giving a very rich effect. The goods consist of Huyler's package chocolates, bulk chocolates, pan goods, and hard-boiled candy. The background is simply the scroll work with crepe paper. The triangular price tickets were hand made.

COWAN COMPANY CLOSE EARLY.

The Cowan Co., Limited, have arranged to close their factory at 12 o'clock during the summer months, thus enabling their employes to take full advantage of the Saturday half-holiday.

Mr. John W. Cowan, president of the Cowan Co., Limited, left last week on an extended trip to Europe. Before he returns Mr. Cowan expects to visit the principal cocoa markets, and will also make purchases of new machinery for their already up-to-date plant. Mr. Cowan was accompanied on the trip by Mrs. and Miss Cowan.

WESTERN WHOLESALE BROKERS MEET.

The annual meeting of the Western Wholesale Brokers' Association was held in Winnipeg last week, President E. Nicholson presiding. The reports of the president and secretary showed a prosperous year for the association, which now embraces in its membership the great majority of the wholesale grocery brokers in Winnipeg.

Officers were elected for the coming year as follows:—

President—Joseph Carman.

Vice-President—Chas. Duncan.

Secy.-Treas.—Geo. Adam.

Executive committee—F. H. Wiley, G. B. Thompson, Stuart Watson, James Scroggie, Geo. J. Cameron.

This is a comparatively new breakfast food, made in western Canada from Manitoba No. 1 hard wheat, the wheat that contains the largest percentage of gluten of any wheat grown. It is meeting with a ready sale in both the west and the east among people who prefer the old-fashioned hot breakfast food.

CANNING MACHINE FOR GROCERS

The Modern Canner Co., St. Jacobs, are now putting on the market their new canning machine which they assert will prove a great boon to grocers, by saving them all waste from overstocked fresh fruit markets. The machine is designed to can fruits and vegetables quickly and with success, so that instead of a loss from waste at any time grocers may can their surplus stuff and sell from the shelves at good profit. The Modern Canner Co., will send full information about this machine to anyone writing for it. Three sizes are made—one thousand tins in ten hours, $30; two thousand tins in ten hours, $60; and four thousand tins in ten hours, $90.

REPEAL OF B.C. TRAVELERS' TAX

One of the first Government bills introduced into the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia, recently convened, was in relation yo "non-resident commercial travelers." By its provisions the law passed in 1905 imposing tax on all non-resident commercial travelers is repealed, and hereafter license will be required only of non-resident travelers "who solicit or take orders for liquors or tobacco to be imported into British Columbia to fill such orders." All non-resident travelers for liquor or tobacco houses must pay license of $200 a year, or $100 for six months. No license is to be issued for less period than six months. This bill has already become a law and goes into effect immediately.

CANNED GOODS

ARE THE BEST

We are climbing to the Top

Every Packer claims perfection for his product. Our claim is we are situated on the Northern limit of the "Garden of Canada" and our fruits and vegetables are solid, firm and of superior flavor peculiarly their own. That is why we are located where we are—on the shores of Lake Huron. Our plant is one of the best in Canada, equipped with the latest automatic machinery, which practically eliminates the handling of food stuffs.

Thus we claim a more sanitary pack than those put up by hand. Our motto is; Cleanliness, Purity, Quality. We purpose packing Choice "Alaska" Peas, Tomatoes, Corn, Apples, Pumpkins, Squash, etc. Besides our own technical knowledge of the Canning Business we have secured an expert processer from N.Y. State who has had years of experience in the packing of above products, thus doubly insuring our pack for this year.

We invite correspondence from the Home and Foreign Market for our EXCELSIOR Brand Canned Goods.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The Boom in Wheat—Opinion Not All One Way About It—Flour Milling in Canada—Business is Very Good.

Wheat is the sensation of the week. Monday's trading in the Winnipeg wheat pit was the largest on record. Now that speculation has got its head the crop will be killed several times before any of it is in stock, butchered to make a traders' holiday, but the important question which presents itself, aside from the price of flour, for the moment, is, what will be the effect upon the West? The Globe's Winnipeg correspondent wrote on Monday night:

"It will be an immeasurable boom to Western Canada, almost compensating fully for the inevitable curtailment of the crop area and insuring plenty of ready cash to stimulate commercial life, sustaining the buoyancy of trade which has characterized recent years. Approximately speaking, there are thirty-three million bushels of wheat in the farmers' hands and in the interior elevators for export. The great volume of wheat is distributed as follows: In the interior elevators of Saskatchewan 12,000,000 bushels; in Saskatchewan farmers' hands, 10,000,000 bushels; in the primary elevators in Manitoba, 5,000,000 bushels, and in the farmers' hands in this province, say 6,000,000 bushels. If wheat touches the dollar mark it means $33,000,000 poured into the pockets and bank accounts of a comparatively small farming population and the grain trade. Farmers are expecting it will go there, and many have withdrawn their wheat from the market."

On Monday, May wheat rose 7¾c. over Saturday's prices to 92½c., which was 12½c. above what it was at the same date last year. On Tuesday there was considerable profit-taking and the price declined 1½c. The boom is based on the backwardness of the season, crop damage in the western and southwestern states and general unfavorable crop news the world over.

The result on Ontario wheat has been practically to stop delivery, and all other grain markets are firm. Oats advanced 3-8c.

It must not be imagined the opinion in regard to wheat is all one way. A Toronto miller had private information from the west Tuesday to the effect that 75 per cent. of the seeding was done. That means 75 per cent. of an acreage equal to last year's and the view held by the miller in question, who is a large operator, is that the acreage will equal last year's. His information from first hands, in regard to fall wheat in Ontario is that the crop is in very good condition. He reports that some of the large millers in the west are large holders af wheat and that the advance is partly due to manipulation.

Flour.

The flour milling industry in Canada has never been in a better position than it is to-day. Ordinarily at this season mills are running half-time, or something like that; to-day the mills are refusing orders.

A little while ago Canadian millers returning from the Old Country told of the great increase of milling capacity there and expressed the view that the export outlook for Canadian milling was not bright. Now they say the demand for Canadian flour has kept up and is increasing. It was thought the British miller could import the wheat and grind it more cheaply that Canadian millers could grind the wheat and deliver flour. In explanation of the failure of the prophecy it is stated now that the Canadian miller by the use of water power, less expensive mill construction and more modern facilities is able to compete with the Old Country products.

The Northwestern Miller, in a recent issue, thus graphically describes the revival of British flour milling:

"Late in the summer of 1901, as the Northwestern Miller has repeatedly pointed out, the export flour trade was destroyed and the foundation of the revival in the British milling trade established. This was not due to legislative action, nor to any fault on the part of the exporting millers, nor yet to insufficiency of the raw material in America.

"There had been an enormous wheat crop and the American millers were preparing to grind it, reckoning on a large market, as before, in the United Kingdom for such portion of their product as they could not sell in the domestic market. Never did the future of the export trade look more encouraging.

"Suddenly, out of a clear sky, came a bolt which shattered the fair prospects of the business and from which the export traffic has never recovered. The carriers, seized by the insane desire to secure freight, suddenly engaged in competition for the business such as was never heard of before or since witnessed. Accordingly freight rates on wheat were slaughtered while the rates on flour were maintained.

"Within a few months, during which rates on wheat made a record for low mark, the grain resources of the country were drained. Huge stocks of wheat were accumulated at British ports and the miller of the United Kingdom found to his surprise and delight that he could buy the very best quality of American wheat at his mill door for much less than the American miller could deliver his flour in competitive markets.

"As a result, the British miller made sudden and enormous profits and, concluding that this discriminatory practice was to obtain forever among the American carriers, he rebuilt his mill on a far larger capacity than he had ever before dreamed of. The American miller, meantime, dazed by this sudden and unexpected onslaught on his raw material, was unable to convince the carriers that they were ruining his business not for one season, but for many to follow, by discriminating against him.

"By the time he had induced the American carrier to consider the question and remedy the defect, the golden opportunity had passed, the export trade had been destroyed, the British miller established and the movement to reinforce his already strong position by a tariff, enthusiastically begun by Mr. Chamberlain, was well under way."

Taking most recent figures available, those for the eleven months ending with February, 1907, the export of Canadian milled flour to Great Britain for the past three years shows an increase, 1905, $2,450,620; 1906, $2,885,906; 1907, $2,963,277. For the entire year 1905 the figures were $2,427,188.

Since February this year large quantities of Canadian flour have been shipped to the Orient. Our flour is also in much greater demand in South Africa, where it is wanted for blending with the softer Australian flour.

Canadian flour is the strongest and best in the world. That is incontrovertible and those who want the best must have it. The tendency among the milling interests is towards concentration and bigger mills. Naturally, the small local mills are increasing in the west, but they are not in the east.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Royal Household has again been advanced, while Five Roses is higher. The former is now quoted at $5, while the latter grade brings $4.85. Glenora is up 20c., as will be seen from quotations. With the market in its present state it is difficult to say what prices will be a few days hence. At the moment higher prices are expected. Further developments depend entirely upon the action of wheat. Business is reported brisk locally, while considerable quantities are being exported to England and South Africa. A few small lots have been sold to Japan lately.

FLOUR.—The soaring wheat market is dragging flour after it and prices at the moment are irregular, some of the mills having advanced more than others. Some of the western mills just added a dollar a barrel to stop business till they got their bearings. It is felt here, however, that prices are on a higher level for some time to come. For both Manitoba and winter wheat flours generally, the advance is about 30c. The Western Canada and Lake of the Woods have kept their carload price at first grade patents at $4.75 on track at Toronto.

THE SIGN OF FISH QUALITY

A CUSTOMER told us the other day that he had never handled a line of fish with such great satisfaction as he has experienced with ours.

He says the sales of our different brands are increasing all the time, and he is assured that this is solely due to the very high standard of quality which we have steadily maintained from the first.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

The Montreal Lemon Sales—Strawberries Arriving More Freely—Big Drop in Cuban Pineapples—First Car of Halibut.

By the time this sees the light it is well within the bounds of probability that the Montreal lemon sales will be in full swing on the Fremona's cargo. In an editorial last week it was pointed out that a certain proportion of the fruit would almost inevitably be rotten owing to the big local demand in Messina, which necessitated the immediate sale of the November cut lemons as they were brought down from the country and obliged the shippers to substitute fresh lemons if they wished to fill their orders. The natural result of this would be to send up the demand and prices for Verdellis, which are, of course, a greatly inferior lemon and in no way fitted to fill the place of the November cut crop.

The strawberry situation, while practically unchanged, shows a tendency to loosen up on shipments, a somewhat firmer quality of stock being also noticeable. Notwithstanding the probabilities of a crop well up to the average from North Carolina, there will be no cheap berries this season, and the market will rule tight on all shipments. The brokers throughout Carolina are simply pursuing a straight hold-up policy in bidding up the price among themselves and then offering it on the basis of "You've got to sell strawberries, and you've got to buy them at our figure." There should be a settled price limit agreed upon by all houses for their mutual protection; unless a united front is presented to the brokers the fruit dealers are at their mercy.

Cuban pines are now at about rock-bottom prices, and three or four weeks should see the bulk of the stock out of the market. First arrivals from Florida are expected during the first fortnight in June.

Potato stocks are light, dealers fighting shy of large holdings at present prices. Delawares are quoted at $1.15 from New Brunswick f.o.b. Toronto, and dealers here are unable to raise prices to corespond. Sold locally at that figure this means a close shave, if not an actual loss. If the stock can be sold right off the car $1.15 is regarded as satisfactory, but if it has to be hauled and stored and got rid of in small instalments, another 10 cents per bag is necessary to clear expenses and leave a fair margin. A material reduction is looked for before long. Ontario stock is practically out of the market.

The F. T. James Co. are expecting a car of Halibut to arrive within the next day or two. This is the first time such a quantity has been brought into Toronto in one consignment. The gross weight will be about 20,000 pounds.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS — Dealers report conditions but slightly altered since last week. Trade is of fair volume considering prices. The feature of interest in fruit circles is the arrival of the first direct steamer bearing a cargo of oranges and lemons. Part of the shipment of oranges was disposed of at auction, some 6,000 cases, the remainder to be sold this week. Florida oranges are out of the market. Valencias are higher, ruling prices running from $3.75 to $5.75. Limes are now obtainable, $1.25 a crate being asked. Pineapples are lower. Bananas have not changed since last report, prices being practically the same.

VEGETABLES — Trade is very good considering the high prices that rule in most lines. Owing to conditions in New York it is difficult to obtain southern vegetables in any sort of time, or at decent prices. Strikes prevent the shipping of many lines which otherwise would be on the market here within a few days of shipment, and at prices which would allow the transaction of considerable business. Cabbage is very high for the season, as much as $5 being asked. American and Montreal cabbage are lines no longer quoted. Green beans are lower this week, $4.50 being the ruling figure. Boston lettuce has been advanced since last week to $1.50. Asparagus has declined to a more reasonable price. Spinach is up 50c. Cucumbers are lower. New carrots and new beets are reported in good demand.

FISH — For the season, business being transacted is satisfactory. Haddock is lower this week, 5c. being the ruling price. New buckshad and carp are off the market. Market cod is half a cent lower, while sea trout has dropped a cent also. B. C. salmon is quoted at 12c. This line continues scarce, and high prices still rule. Brook trout is also in short supply. Receipts of halibut are large, but demand is strong and stocks are easily placed. Fresh mackerel and lake trout are lines that sell freely at prices quoted. There is little change in other lines, except that new haddies are down to 8c.

FRUIT — Oranges are firmer, Valencias showing a rise of a dollar per case and navels, in all sizes, being somewhat higher. Pineapples are again lower, and will probably maintain the present average of $3.25—$5.00 on 24s, 30s and 36s. Strawberries are still a hard proposition in one sense and a soft one in another. The North Caroline stuff has shown up to better advantage in the later shipments, but at the best a good proportion of it is mushy and unsound.

VEGETABLES — Egyptian onions are firmer this week, and at the present time the demand is greater than the supply. Bermudas have gone up 25c. a crate, and there seems to be prospect of a further rise in the near future. Lettuce is a little easier under a steady demand. Florida tomatoes are in big request, of fine quality, with the demand steadily increasing. Greenhouse rhubarb is almost cleaned up, a few stocks only being quoted. Celery is very scarce.

Carlos Prytz, senior member of the firm of Prytz & Co., Alicante, Spain, was a caller upon the jobbing trade of Toronto and Hamilton last week. Fred Hutcheson, of J. L. Watt & Scott, representing Prytz & Co. in this market, introduced him to the trade.

A YEAR'S FRUIT TRADE IN QUEBEC PROVINCE

Montreal, and the Province of Quebec generally, cuts no small figure in the fruit trade of Canada. With such a population as there is in this section of the Dominion, there is bound to be a great consumption of "the only edible that it is not possible to adulterate" as one man called fruit. Montreal cannot be called extremely important as a fruit-consuming centre, nor yet as a fruit-growing district, but as a centre carrying on a large fruit business with points all over Eastern Canada, it occupies a position such as does no other city in the Dominion. It is a great distributing centre for imported fruits. Home-grown varieties are not traded in to a very large extent as the city is not as ideally located as Toronto for this purpose. Even so, fruit dealers in the metropolis carry on a large business with grocers and fruit merchants in eastern portions of the country.

What is Grown.

Quebec does not grow much fruit. Unlike Ontario, the province cannot produce peaches, pears, grapes and other such small fruits. Climatic conditions are not such as will permit of their growth. There are private orchards scattered here and there throughout the province, but very few lots of the fruits named reach the market. Small berries, red currants, gooseberries, cherries and the like are freely grown in some sections, but the farmers make no effort to cultivate yielding orchards. Apples are probably grown as much as any other fruit, in fact form practically the only kind of fruit extensively known as coming from Quebec. As a matter of fact, fruit dealers do not care to handle the small fruits grown in Quebec, as, after all charges are paid, the profit left is very small. As a result, most of what is sold finds its way into the homes of the people through peddlers, or through the fruit dealers in the local markets.

Importations.

Importations of fruit are larger than the average grocer imagines. Hundreds of cars are brought into Montreal every year and thousands of cases of oranges and lemons alone are sold.

There are every year at least two direct fruit steamers which arrive in Montreal in the spring. There is also a third boat which carries a few cases of oranges and lemons. Probably one hundred thousand cases of oranges and lemons are received in Montreal by the direct boats. It is rather difficult to say just in what proportion the fruit is loaded, probably more lemons than oranges. Of the direct importations Quebec Province does not use very large quantities. Possibly not more than a tenth is consumed locally. The balance is shipped to different points in Canada and some finds its way to New York. Some of the lots received by the direct boats are stored in Montreal and these supplies are drawn upon as required. Considerable quantities of oranges and lemons from Mediterranean points are received during the winter, coming into Montreal by way of Boston, Portland, New York and St. John. About 50,000 cases are received during the winter.

California Fruits.

Owing to the high prices asked for Californian lemons, few lots are brought into Montreal, probably not more than two or three cars during the course of a year. Quite a large number of cases of Californian oranges are used, however, some seventy-five cars of navels and fifteen cars of late valencias being ordered in an average year. The entire amount is for local consumption since this fruit cannot profitably be shipped to Ottawa, Toronto or other cities, where dealers can bring in the fruit as cheaply, or more so, than can Montreal. Oo a rough estimate it might be said that there are brought into Montreal in a year some one hundred and twenty-five cars of Californian fruits, which would include besides oranges and lemons, prunes, peaches, pears, apricots and plums, meaning in cash about $150,000.

100 Cars Strawberries.

In the Quebec trade at least one hundred cars of imported strawberries are used. Most of these come from the State of Maryland, which is famous for the quality of its berries. Some come also from California, North and South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee, and Delaware. Quebec Province produces a fair quantity of strawberries in season, but the demand is not nearly supplied by the home-grown berries.

Niagara district provides the trade in Quebec with probably seventy-five cars of strawberries every year. From the same part of the country are received also peaches, pears, plums and grapes to the extent of one hundred and twenty-five cars a season, with the business ever growing.

Bananas Used Largely.

Compared to cities in other parts of the world, Montreal is one of the greatest banana-eating centres. No less than three hundred cars of fine bananas are brought into the city during the twelve months of the year. This large quantity of fruit is sold chiefly in the Province of Quebec, principally in Mont-

Wall Paper

This is between seasons in wall paper manufacturing circles; and spring goods are now—or should be if retail dealers are energetic—going like "one o'clock," so to speak. Designers, about this time of the year, are scratching heads and biting finger nails in thinking out something novel for the fall trade.

Our domestic manufacturers seem to be pretty well up to the mark in devising new ideas, or are particularly persistent in rooting out new ideas from foreign points. The natural result of this domestic energy is as choice a line of goods as any reasonable public could wish for.

It will at once be seen by the discerning retailer that this matter of choice of design is of the utmost importance to his business. Nowadays people are not satisfied with any old thing for their wall decorations. The general commercial prosperity of the country is reflected in this desire for the unique and the artistic in wall decorations. There are, of course, many people whose tastes have not yet been elevated beyond the cheap and commonplace in wall paper. Herein lies a profitable duty for every retailer to perform. Strive to educate the poor in taste—not force them—up to an appreciation of the really artistic in wall decorations. While doing this work of education, by elevating the public taste, it is gratifying to know that it is a profitable undertaking if properly carried out.

though numerous orders are received from Eastern Ontario as well. These bananas are imported from Cfiba, Central America, and Jamaica.

Grape Fruit and Pineapples.

Florida supplies large quantities of grape fruit and pineapples, besides oranges. All during January, February, and March, cars of grape fruit were received and sold in Montreal and district, some nine or ten cars being required to supply the demand. The pineapples are received in June and July. From the Bahamas and Nassau, Quebec Province receives grape fruit and oranges. On the average eight cars are received during the season. Mexico also supplies the market with a fair quantity of oranges in season.

WHITE & CO.'S NEW PREMISES.

On another page, in the fruit and produce section, appears the announcement of White & Co., who have moved to their new building, corner Front and Church streets. In a former issue mention was made that this valuable corner property had been acquired by them, and since then extensive improvements have been made, until it is now probably the finest building of its kind in the trade. The record of this firm has been one of continued success. With modest beginning at 70 Colborne street about 13 years ago, its business increased so rapidly that larger premises were secured at 64 Front street east, where they have remained until the present move. Their new building has a frontage of 100 feet on Church street and 75 feet on Front street, and a fine steel and glass awning covers the entire sidewalk, protecting the goods from the elements. Everything is conveniently arranged for the despatch of business.

The basement is concreted throughout, and is divided into three departments:

The banana ripening rooms, capable of holding two cars bananas.

The ripening rooms for pineapples and tomatoes.

The cold storage for fish.

The entire main floor has been opened into one large warehouse. Steel girders and pillars have taken the place of the former brick intersection walls. The building has been conveniently arranged in departments—the fruit occupying the prominent Church street frontage and the produce and fish departments the Front street side. The city and country shipping have been separated with different offices and shipping exits, facilitating the prompt despatch of orders. This flat is handsome in appearance, nicely decorated with metal ceilings, plate glass windows and prism glass tops to reflect the light into the interior of the warehouse. The offices, situated on the second flat, are fitted up in the most modern style, all quartered oak and cabinet made, are large, light, well ventilated, sanitary, handsomely decorated and very conveniently arranged. The third flat is used exclusively for cold storage, 25,000 cubic feet being nuder storage for fruit, butter and eggs. This accommodation being on the premises is of especial advantage for keeping a constant supply in times of scarcity. The firm is the only fruit house having cold storage accommodation.

now on his way to Manitoba and Western Canada to carry on a campaign for the MacLean trade papers. A Toronto wholesale grocer just returned from a trip to the west, said to a representative of The Canadian Grocer: "Everybody in the trade reads The Grocer out there. I was surprised."

"Are you speaking of retailers or wholesalers?" was asked.

"Both. They all get it and they place great store by it."

Nevertheless, it is expected Mr. Gay, in that rapidly developing part of the Dominion, will find opportunity to add to the number of The Canadian Grocer's friends and readers.

FIRST DIRECT FRUIT STEAMER.

The Bellona, the first direct steamer with oranges and lemons from the Mediterranean, arrived in Montreal last week. She carried some 29,000 cases of oranges and lemons, which were disposed of at auction in Montreal in two lots. Good prices were obtained. The fruit was in fair condition.

PEACH CROP HALF A YIELD.

J. R. Johnson, of Leamington, San Jose Scale inspector, states that peaches will not run half a crop this season. "I am coming to the conclusion that peaches are an uncertain fruit for Essex growers," he declared. "The man who speculates in a peach orchard should recognize the fact that it is a gamble. I think there is more revenue to be derived from early vegetables and fruits. There is a heavy demand for tomatoes and cabbages in the eastern market. If we have an over-production there are the local canneries. Some people do not stop to think that Essex will have six canneries in operation this season, these being located at Leamington, Essex, Amherstburg, Sandwich, Tecumseh and Tilbury. While the early frost last year killed a lot of trees, the San Jose Scale has cost fruit growers in Essex thousands of dollars. I am satisfied, however, the pest can be stamped out by systematic treatment."

COFFEE AND TEA TRADE IN THE STATES.

The importation of coffee in the calendar year 1896, less the quantity exported, aggregated 804,692,275 pounds, as compared with 843,652,918 pounds in 1906. The quantity consumed was greater in 1906, but the value was less than in 1896 to the extent of $4,574,273. There was 10,170,376 pounds less of tea imported in 1906 than in 1896, though the value of the imports was $601,966 greater in 1906. The importation of cacao has greatly increased and also of chocolate. But the large increase in the consumption of cacao has been almost wholly due to its use in the manufacture of confectionery. Its price has remained nearly stationary during the last ten years. For the five years ended with 1901 the average annual imports of coffee amounted to 816,570,082 pounds, and for the five years ended with 1906 the average was 956,817,166 pounds, showing a steady increase in the consumption of coffee in the United States, while the contrary is true of tea.

A. P. Taylor, of John Taylor & Co., Toronto, leaves on Saturday for a business trip through the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Taylor's sample trunks are full of new and handsome lines of toilet and laundry soaps and perfumery specialties, and the east will get the best that's going in these lines.

All grocers should carry a full stock of ROYAL BAKING POWDER. It always gives the greatest satisfaction to customers, and in the end yields the larger profit to the dealer.

REASONS FOR SUCCESS

There are always good substantial reasons for success and more than several Grocers attribute their success to the attention paid to their cigar counter.

A Grocer simply cannot help building up a select and paying trade—if he features good cigars.

I would like to print the big list of Grocers who stock cigars and add the nice things they say about them as trade builders.

PHARAOH and PEBBLE

The Pebble is the best 5c. cigar ever sold in Canada. It is a high-grade Havana-filled Cigars and some Grocers sell it at 10c.

The Pharaoh is made from personally selected tobaccos. I guarantee it; and smokers who know say that this cigar is peerless.

Do you know about my special help-the-Grocer plan?

TOBACCO IN THE GROCERY STORE

Opportunities for Making a Success of Tobaccos—How to go About it—Profits Large—Chance of Failure Small.

That there is money in a tobacco department no grocer will doubt. If it is properly conducted, given a reasonable amount of attention, it will build up of itself without particular effort on the part of the merchant after it has been started.

The trouble lies in getting it started. Ordinarily, a grocer has no fear in starting a new department, such as a cereal section, a confectionery department, or the like, but he believes that tobaccos hardly form an accessory to the grocery or general store, and consequently he lets the matter rest in abeyance—most often lives and dies without inaugurating this department.

The City Grocers' Difficulty.

Perhaps the city grocer feels that the room taken by tobacco stock would be wasted. He is right, probably. In the city there is too much competition for a grocer to attempt tobacco. The writer asked one city dealer in foodstuffs what he thought of tobacco as a grocery line. He said: "Two doors west there is a cigar store; there is another across the road." There was not much chance for him.

Country grocers, particularly those who conduct a general store, have not to meet such keen competition. Their greatest rival in most cases is the barber.

Therefore, it is possible for a merchant in the country to make quite a thing out of cigars and tobaccos where the city grocer would fail.

There are smokers everywhere, and their needs must be supplied. In the city the smoker, as a rule, buys his requirements in a cigar store; in the country the man secures his tobacco where he can most conveniently do so.

Country Merchants' Opportunity.

Take the farmers as a tobacco-using class of men. As a general rule they do not buy frequently, but they purchase largely. Here is the grocer's opportunity—the farmer. Where does the farmer make his first call in town? Is it not at the grocery store? He has produce to dispose of and provisions to purchase or to secure in exchange for his butter, cheese or eggs.

The grocer supplies him with his eatables, often, in the case of the general store, with all his requirements known as necessaries. Why not sell him his tobacco also?

Every country grocer is strongly advised to give this matter his serious consideration. The farmer is but one class. There is also the resident in town, the grocers' many customers; his "friends" who make his shop a meeting place. Why, particularly, should the barber secure their tobacco trade?

Just let the grocer think over this proposition. It's worth while. Go into it in the right way and chances are that a tobacco department will result.

Starting a Department.

It is not difficult to make a commencement. A few dollars' worth of stock is all that is necessary. Cigar manufacturers and tobaco dealers are always glad to assist the beginner in this line. Secure a small suply of plug tobacco, smoking and chewing; a few lots of cigars, and some cigarettes. Buy wisely that sales may result.

Work Wisely.

Do not stock up new brands that may not be sellers. Buy lines that are standards; that are asked for wherever there are smokers.

A certain part of the store should be set aside for the tobaccos and cigars. This section should be made attractive and practical but not flashy. Arrange matters that the stock may always be fresh and moist, not dry and stale.

Advertise.

Let the male portion of the population know that you have tobacco. Display your lines. Dress a window once in a while. The large manufacturers will gladly send all the dummy packages, cards and literature required to make a neat window, for the asking. Advertise in the papers. The manufacturers will help you here, also, being prepared to send electrotypes to aid in making neat advertisements. It is advisable to run a small but striking ad. in the papers by itself rather than to put in a "hanger" ad. in your regular space. Men are not particularly fond of reading grocery or other store advertisements, but a catchy tobacco ad. will attract their attention and accomplish its purpose.

The Profit.

The margin of profit on tobacco, particularly upon cigars, is very satisfactory, especially when compared to the returns on strictly grocery lines, such as sugar, molasses and canned goods. Figure out the profit on five barrels of sugar and compare it with the profit on cigars to the same amount! The difference will astonish.

Chance of loss is slight if you go about the establishment of a tobacco department in the right way. As a matter of fact, some cigar manufacturers arrange to take back their cigars if the grocer feels satisfied that he cannot sell them.

Think it over. Can you not manage a tobacco department?

ENLARGING PREMISES.

Owing to increase in their business the Rock City Tobacco Company, Quebec, have been forced to enlarge their present factory in Quebec. Ground has been broken for a five-storey structure, 109 feet x 44 feet. The new building will adjoin the present one. Another new building, 400 x 50, wil be erected on Dominique stret, Quebec, to more adequately handle the company's cigar business, the Levis factory not being able to meet all requirements of itself.

LONGSHOREMEN STRIKE IN MONTREAL.

Monday evening of this week some 1,500 men employed in the loading and unloading of vessels by the various shipping companies of Montreal went on strike. There was practically no warning or hint of any trouble brewing. At six o'clock the men quit work. Earlier in the day the shipping concerns received a letter from the Longshoremen's Union informing them that unless they received a certain increase in pay they would strike. A hurried meeting of the Shiping Federation was held, but apparently nothing definite was done and the men went out at six.

SHREWD SAYINGS.

A small man always dwindles before great opportunities.

Education doesn't consist in knowing a lot of unnecessary things.

Those who want to give their money to the needy should buy poetry with it.

It's "expert testimony" when you employ the expert—when the other fellow does it it's "prejudiced advice."

There are some eighteen or twenty vessels in the harbor at present and these will be inconvenienced more or less in their cargo work.

The Shipping Federation talk of prosecuting the longshoremen under the law passed last session of Parliament, known as the Lemieux Act. By this act it is illegal for any body to go on strike without first having put their grievance before a conciliation board, a member of which shall be named by each party. If the board then cannot name a third party that member shall be appointed by the Minister of Labor.

Coming, as it does, when shipping is at its height, the strike is likely to cause considerable trouble if it is of any duration. Navigation has been open but a very short time and every boat is bringing in goods which are required in the worst way by the importers. Likewise, there are numerous lots of goods which it is necessary should be shipped to their destination without delay.

THE STRACHAN SOAP FACTORY.

The establishment of the William Strachan Company, manufacturers of soaps and oils, has passed into the hands of Lever Bros. Co., Limited, for the sum of $100,000. It is situated at the corner of Notre Dame and St. Thimothee streets, and consists of lots 114, 115, 116, 124 and 125 St. James' Ward, having a frontage of 140 feet on Notre Dame street and 100 feet depth on St. Thimothee street.

The company will operate as in the past, only instead of a provincial charter they will have a federal charter. This change is owing to the death of William Strachan, who died a short time ago.

PERSONAL MENTION.

R. Hatton, representing Williams Brothers' Company, Detroit, has been visiting the retail trade in Montreal for the past few weeks introducing the many specialties put up by his firm. He reports great success in the city.
